

THE LIBRARY
OF
THE UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA
RIVERSIDE

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2008 with funding from Microsoft Corporation

<http://www.archive.org/details/robertchesterslo00ches>

ROBERT CHESTER'S
"LOVES MARTYR,
OR,
ROSALINS COMPLAINT"
(1601)

WITH ITS SUPPLEMENT,
"Diverse Poeticall Essaies" on the Turtle and Phoenix
BY
SHAKSPERE, BEN JONSON, GEORGE CHAPMAN,
JOHN MARSTON, ETC.

EDITED, WITH INTRODUCTION, NOTES AND ILLUSTRATIONS, BY THE
REV. ALEXANDER B. GROSART, LL.D., F.S.A., ST. GEORGE'S, BLACKBURN, LANCASHIRE.

PUBLISHT FOR
The New Shakspeare Society
BY N. TRÜBNER & CO., 57, 59, LUDGATE HILL, LONDON, E.C., 1878.

TP. 2233
C646
1911

Series VIII. No. 2.

CLAY AND TAYLOR, PRINTERS, BUNGAY.

To
 F. J. FURNIVALL, Esq.,
 M.A.,
 AND THE COMMITTEE AND MEMBERS OF
 "The New Shakspeare Society."

TO YOU CO-WORKERS ON OUR ANCIENT BOOKS OF TIMES ELIZABETHAN, I HERE GIVE
 CHESTER'S OLD TOME. O MAY IT ONCE MORE LIVE
 BENEATH YOUR EYES, THRO' INSIGHT THAT NOR BROOKS
 NOR FEARS DULL FOLLY'S SUPERCILIOUS LOOKS,
 WHEN FROM REMOTER DAYS, THINGS FUGITIVE
 AND LONG-FORGOTTEN, WE WOULD FAIN REVIVE.
 'LOVE'S MARTYR,' THAT I BRING FROM HIDDEN NOOKS,
 A QUICK KEEN MESSAGE BEARS FOR US TO-DAY:
 AS I, BY HAPPY FORTUNE, FIRST HAVE PROV'D;
 FOR IT INTERPRETS 'BIRD OF LOUDEST LAY'— TELLING, HOW GREAT ELIZABETH, ESSEX LOV'D.
 TURN THEN, GOOD FRIENDS, TO THESE LONG-SEALED PAGES:
 YOUR KIND APPROVAL MORE THAN COUNTED WAGES.

ALEXANDER. B. GROSART.

 See page xxiv. on my friend Dr. Brinsley Nicholson's independent arrival at the same conclusions. By 'give' I mean simply furnish, as the gift is only partial, viz., permission to the Society to stereotype the book as set up for my own Occasional Issues of unique or extremely rare books (50 copies).—G.

CONTENTS

	PAGE
DEDICATION, CONTENTS, AND ARGUMENT ...	1*—15*
I. INTRODUCTION	v—lxxxiv
a. Who was ROBERT CHESTER?	v—x
b. Who was SIR JOHN SALISBURIE? (with extracts from Robert Parry's Sinnettes , 1597, p. xiii—xx) ...	x—xxi
c. Who were meant by the Phoenix and the Turtle-Dove of these Poems? (with extracts from Churchyard's Challenge , 1593, p. xxv—xxxiv, and all his Fortunate Farewell , 1599, p. xxxix—xliii)	xxi—xlv
d. What is the message or motif of the Poems? ...	xlv—lvi
e. What is the relation between the verse-contributions of SHAKSPERE and the other "moderne writers" to Loves Martyr ?	lvi—lxi
f. Was the 1611 issue only a number of copies of the original of 1601, less the preliminary matter, with a new title-page?	lxi—lxii
g. Is there poetical worth in the book?	lxii—lxviii
h. Who was TORQUATO CÆLIANO? (with Dr. Toddhunter's englishing of some of Livio Cæliano's poems)	lxviii—lxxxii
i. Postscript: Notes, p. lxxiv—lxxxii. Errata, p. lxxxii—lxxxiv	lxxxiv—lxxxiv
II. CHESTER'S LOVES MARTYR, or, ROSALINS COMPLAINT:
Title-page of 1st edition of 1601	A 2
i. Dedication to Sir John Salisbury; The Authors request to the Phoenix (No. 1); To the kind Reader (all 3 left out of the copies issued in 1611) ...	A 3, A 4
New Title-page to the remaining copies of the 1601 edition issued in 1611	A 5

Contents.

7*

	PAGE
2. Rosalins Complaint (describing the parts of her body, the isle of Paphos, and 'Honors louely Squire' (Turtle-Dove No. 1), the lover of Phœnix No. III.† (p. 9, st. 4), who is also Turtle-Dove No. III. (p. 125, st. 3); and foretelling the rise of Phœnix No. IV. (p. 12, st. 2)	1—12‡
An Introduction to the Prayer (for Phœnix No. 1 = Turtle-Dove No. 2, p. 13, l. 3)	12—13
3. A Prayer made for the prosperitie of a siluer-coloured Doue, applyed to the beauteous Phœnix (No. I = Turtle-Dove No. II.)	13—15
—
To those of light beleefe. (An Introduction to)	15—16
4. A meeting Dialogue-wise betweene Nature, the Phœnix (No. I, or Turtle-Dove II.), and the Turtle Doue (No. I.)	16—131
(i. The troubles of the Phœnix I, &c. &c.	16—25)
(ii. A description of the chief cities in England, & the Castle of Maidens in Scotland	26—29)
(iii. An account of the Nine Worthy Women	29—32)
(iv. A description of Windsor Castle; and anent this,	33—34)
Here followeth the Birth, Life and Death of honourable Arthur, King of Brittain	34—80
(v. A rymed Catalogue of the Plants & Herbs in Paphos	81—95)
(vi. A rymed Catalogue of the Trees in Paphos	95—98)
(vii. " " Fish in Paphos	99—100)
(viii. " " Precious Stones in Paphos	101—107)
(ix. " " Beasts & Worms in Paphos	107—116)
(x. " " Birds in Paphos	116—123)
(xi. A description of the male Turtle-Dove (No. 1) who mourns for his Phœnix III. (p. 9, st. 4), his female "Turtle who is dead" (Turtle-Dove No. III.); § and how the Phœnix I. resolves to share his sorrow, be one with him—Turtle-Dove II. with Turtle-Dove I.—and die with him	123—131)
Pellican (her Lament over the Deaths of the Turtle-Dove I. & Phœnix I. or Turtle-Dove II.)	131—133
Conclusion (Description of Phœnix IV, &c.)	133—134

† Phœnix, No. II, is a male, the "Arabian Phœnix," p. 5, st. 3.

‡ The references are to the top-pagings, and not the foot ones as in Dr. Grosart's Notes.

§ p. 125, l. 16, ?for him, read her. Will the male Turtle, left all alone, die for his female mate; or does he speak of himself as 'him' in the third person?—F. J. F.

	PAGE
5. Cantoes Alphabet-wise to faire Phœnix (No. I.) made by the Paphian Doue (Turtle-Dove I.). (A. I. to Z. 24.)	134—140
<hr style="width: 20%; margin: 10px auto;"/>
6. Cantoes Verbally written (from the Turtle-Dove I. to the Phœnix I.)	141—167
<hr style="width: 20%; margin: 10px auto;"/>
III. DIVERSE POETICALL ESSAIES ON THE TURTLE AND PHŒNIX†	169--187
a. Invocatio ad Apollinem & Pierides. Chorus Vatum	171
b. To the worthily honor'd Knight Sir Iohn Salisburie. Vatum Chorus	172
c. The first. The burning. Ignoto	173
d. "Let the bird of lowdest lay." Threnos. William Shake-speare	174-6
e. A narration and description of a most exact wondrous creature, arising out of the Phœnix and Turtle Doues ashes, p. 177. The description of this Perfection, p. 178. To Perfection, A Sonnet, p. 178-9. Perfectioni Hymnus, p. 179—180. Iohn Marston	177—180
f. Peristeros : or the male Turtle. George Chapman	180
g. Praeludium, p. 181. Epos, p. 182-6. Ben Iohnson	181-6
h. The Phœnix Analysde, p. 186. Ode ἐνθρονιαστικῇ. Ben Iohnson , p. 186-7	186-7
[Top page-numbers left out, from the Notes-Nos. being run on by Dr. Grosart from the Text foot-numberings and not its top ones]	189—196]
IV. NOTES AND ILLUSTRATIONS (by Dr. Grosart, Dr. Nicholson, &c.)	197—245
V. INDEX	247—254

† That is, Turtle-Dove No. I. (male), and Phœnix No. I. (female) = Turtle-Dove No. II. (female).

THE ARGUMENT.

At a Parliament of the gods—present [? with others not mentioned] Jove, Vesta, Juno, Venus, Pallas, Bellona, and Cupid—Rosalin, in the person of Dame Nature, comes to beg assistance. She has established on earth the most perfect Phoenix* that ever existed—a maiden whose personal beauties she describes. Parenthetically, as it were, p. 5/13, † st. 3, she wishes that “Arabian Phoenix,” ‡ “love’s Lord,” would come and take possession of this incomparable beauty. Her fear is that her Phoenix will decay and that no other will arise from her ashes, because

“The Arabian fiers are too dull and base
To make another spring within her place.”—p. 7/15, st. 2.

She therefore begs Jove to pity her (Rosalin = Nature) and list to her laments.

The gods are somewhat startled and incredulous at her wondrous account of her Phoenix, but she confirms her statements by exhibiting a picture in which they “———behold

The rich wrought Phoenix of Arabian gold.”—p. 8/16, st. 3.

Jove thereupon bids Nature

“——hie thee, get thee Phœbus chaire
Cut through the skie, and leaue Arabia,

* Phoenix No. 1, female.

† 5/13 : 5 is the number at the top of the page ; 13, that at its foot.

‡ Phoenix No 2, male.

The Argument.

Leaue that il working peece* of fruitlesse ayre
 Leaue me the plaines of white Brytania,
 These countries have no fire to raise that flame
 That to this Phœnix bird can yeeld a name."

p. 9/17, st. 3.

and fly to Paphos Ile,

"Where in a vale like Ciparissus groue Thou shalt behold a second Phœnix loue."—p. 9/17, st. 4.

i. e. the love or mate of another Phœnix.†—This lover of Phœnix No. 3, female, is the Turtle-dove described at p. 123/131, who is to die with Phœnix No. 1, female, and with her produce Phœnix No. 4, female.—He is the hero of the Allegory: he is "true Honors louely squire;" his name is "Liberal honor," and he keeps for Nature's Phœnix "Prometheus fire," p. 11/19, st. 3, 4.

"Give him," continues Jove, "this ointment to anoint his head
 This precious balme to lay unto his feet.
 These shall direct him to this Phœnix bed
 Where on a high hill he this bird shall meet
 And of their Ashes by my dome shall rise
 Another Phœnix ‡ her to equalize."—p. 12/20, st. 2.

"This said the Gods and Goddesses did applaud
 The censure of this thundring Magistrate
 And Nature gave him euerlasting laud
 And quickly in the dayes bright coach she gate
 Downe to the earth, she's whirled through the ayre;
 Joue joyne these fires, thus Venus made her prayer."
 p. 12/20, st. 3.

Then follows "An Introduction to the Prayer" addressed to the "great Guider of the Sunne and Moone" craving guidance and the blotting out of offences, and

"Then arm'd with thy protection and thy loue
 Ile make my prayer for thy 'Turtle-doue."

Qy. is this introductory prayer, and the prayer proper which

* Peece = place; so used by Stowe, of London, and frequently by Fenton in his translation of Guicciardini's History of Italy, 1599.

† Phœnix No. 3, female.

‡ Phœnix No. 4, female. See Chester's "Conclusion," p. 133/141.

follows, made by Venus, or is Venus's prayer confined to the four words quoted above:—"Joue joyne these fires"? In either case the Turtle-dove here mentioned is Dame Nature's (Rosalin's) Phoenix, No. 1.

Then follows the prayer: "A Prayer made for the prosperitie of a siluer coloured Doue, applyed to the beauteous Phoenix."

This prayer is addressed to Jehova, Christ, the God of Israel, in favour of "the siluer coloured earthly Doue," "thy siluer Doue," i. e., of course, the Phoenix, and ends with—

"Let her not wither Lord without increase
But blesse her with joyes offspring of sweet peace.
Amen. Amen."—p. 15/23, st. 2.

This prayer certainly proceeds from the same person as the introductory petition.

The author himself now addresses three stanzas to readers of "light beleefe," claiming their indulgence.

Then follows, p. 16/24, "A meeting Dialogue-wise betweene Nature, the Phoenix, and the Turtle Doue."

The last of these three personages of the Allegory does not appear on the scene till p. 123/131.

Nature arrives in her chariot and greets the Phoenix. It is not very clear where this meeting takes place. It is a place where "gross cloudie vapours" prevail (p. 18/26, st. 5); the air is "noysome" (p. 20/28, st. 2). It is a

"barren country,
It is so saplesse that the very Spring
Makes tender new-growne Plants be with'ring."
p. 21/29, st. 4.

"The noisome Aire is growne infectious,
The very springs for want of moisture die,
The glorious Sunne is here pestiferous," etc., etc.
p. 22/30, st. 1.

Here the Phoenix has long suffered from the power of Envie = Malice; here, she says,—

"——with Adders was I stung,
And in a lothsome pit was often flung:

My Beautie and my Vertues captiuate
To Loue, dissembling Loue that I did hate."

p. 22/30, st. 3.

She complains of Fortune—

"That she should place me in a desart Plaine,
And send forth Enuie with a Iudas kisse
To sting me with a Scorpions poisoned hisse.
From my first birth-right for to plant me heare,
Where I haue alwaies fed on Griefe and Feare."

p. 23/31, st. 3.

And much more, more or less intelligible, to the same effect. She was about to take her flight from this horrid place when Nature met her, for, says she,—

"Upon the Arabian mountaines I must die,
And neuer with a poore yong Turtle graced."

p. 16/24, st. 3.

[Qy. what is meant by this "poore yong Turtle?" a son or a husband?]

It would seem then that the place of meeting is not in Arabia; indeed in st. 4, p. 21/29 Arabia is specially distinguished from this barren country—

"—in Arabia burnes another Light,
A dark dimme Taper that I must adore,
This barren cuntry makes me to deplore," etc.

and yet in the previous parts of the Allegory (see p. 7/15, st. 2 and p. 9/17, st. 3, both quoted above) it is evident that Arabia was intended as the place of meeting; and the Phoenix herself says when she meets the Turtle-dove in Paphos (p. 125/133, st. 4) that she had left Arabia for his sake.

However, be the place where it will, Nature consoles her Phoenix; conjures up Envie and banishes him; and then Nature and the Phoenix together enter Phoebus' coach and set out on their travels.

Their course seems rather devious. We will, says Dame Nature,— “——ride

Over the Semi-circle of Europa
And bend our course where we will see the Tide,
That partes the Continent of Affrica,
Where the great Cham gouernes Tartaria
And when the starrie Curtain vales the night
In Paphos sacred Ile we meane to light.”

p. 24/32, st. 4.

They behold the Pyramides and Euphrates, p. 25/33, st. 2, but in a very short time they are apparently hovering over Great Britain, several of the towns of which are described. The history of the nine female Worthies is also briefly given, and then, from p. 34/42 to p. 77/85, follows an account of the birth, life, and death of King Arthur. This done, they come in sight of the Tower of London, p. 77/85: a few more stanzas on London and its glory, and then they each indulge in a song: Nature in dispraise of Love, the Phoenix in praise of it as a holy thing. This at last brings them to Paphos, and they “——are set on foote neere to that Ile,

In whose deep bottome plaines Delight doth smile.”

p. 81/89, st. 1.

But Nature is inexhaustible, and from this point to p. 123/131 she amuses the Phoenix with an account of the plants, trees, fishes, minerals, beasts, reptiles, insects, and birds which are the denizens of Paphos. The account of the birds naturally leads up to the introduction of the hero of the Allegory, the Turtle-dove, who at last makes his appearance, and proves to be a “sad-mournefull dooping soule,”

“Whose feathers mowt off, falling as he goes,
The perfect picture of hart pining woes.”

p. 123/131, st. 3.

Nature having introduced the Phoenix to the Dove she had long'd so much to see, now takes her departure, leaving the unhappy pair together, p. 124/132, st. 3.

The Turtle-dove is stricken with admiration of the beauteous Phoenix, and soon lets her know that the cause of all his moan is for his "Turtle that is dead," p. 125/133, st. 3. [We learned, p. 9/17, st. 4, that this lost mate of his was a "second Phoenix," Phoenix No. 3.]

To ease their pain, they share their griefs, and after mutually vowing chaste love, they prepare a pyre on which, in a manner sacrificingly, they propose to burn both their bodies in order to revive one name, p. 128/136, st. 3; and they pray to Apollo to

"Send [his] hot kindling light into this wood
That shall receive the Sacrifice of blood."

p. 129/137, st. 1, 2, 3.

At this point the Phoenix spies a Pellican behind a bush; but the Turtle-dove tells her this bird is quite harmless.

"Let her alone," says he, "to view our Tragedy,
And then report our Loue that she did see."

p. 130/138, st. 1.

The Phoenix would now wish to sacrifice herself only, but the Turtle-dove will not hear of this, and sets the example of mounting the funeral pile; when he is consumed, the Phoenix also enters the fire.

"I come sweet Turtle, and with my bright wings
I will embrace thy burnt bones as they lye;
I hope of these another Creature springs
That shall possesse both our authority:
I stay to long, ô take me to your glory,
And thus I end the Turtle Doues true story."*

Finis. R. C.

The Pellican now comments on the tragic scene she has beheld; praises the love and constancy of the two victims, and laments the degeneracy of lovers of these later times.

Chester then gives a "Conclusion" (p. 133/141), in which he describes Phoenix No. 4, foretold in p. 12/20, st. 2. He states that

"From the sweete fire of perfumed wood
Another princely Phoenix vpriht stood:

* Is this last line supposed to be uttered by the Phoenix or by R. Chester himself?

Whose feathers purified did yeeld more light
Then her late burned mother out of sight
And in her heart restes a perpetuall loue,
Sprong from the bosome of the Turtle-Doue.
Long may the new uprising bird increase,
Some humours and some motions to release,
And thus to all I offer my devotion,
Hoping that gentle minds accept my motion."

Finis. R. C.

Then follow a series of "Cantoes Alphabet-wise to faire Phœnix made by the Paphian Doue." And after them another series of "Cantoes verbally written"—the first words of each line forming a separate series of posies—all apparently addressed to the Phœnix.

[In the second stanza of canto 13, p. 154, is, I think, a misprint. "Not my dead Phœnix," etc.; dear, or perhaps dread, should be substituted for dead.]

The book closes with the contributions of Shakespeare, Jonson, Marston, etc., all evidently "intended to celebrate precisely what Love's Martyr celebrated."—P. A. D.

CORRECTIONS.

[1. As a matter of interest to students of Ben Jonson, it should be noted that the changes in his "Prælium" and "Epos," p. 181-6, attributed to Gifford (p. lxi Introduction, and p. 245 Notes), were really made by Jonson himself, when he gathered these two pieces into his Forest, in his Folio, 1616. He apparently did not consider "The Phœnix Analysde" and the "Ode" worthy of transplantation.

2. In his "Postscript" C., p. lxxv—viii, Dr. Grosart inclines to attribute to Chester a series of poems called The Partheniades. It is—or should be—well known that these poems were certainly composed by the author of The Arte of Englishe Poesie, 1589; and George Puttenham is, I believe, universally accepted as the writer of the latter work. See Mr. Arber's Introduction, etc., to his reprint, 1869.—P. A. D.]

INTRODUCTION.

IN the Notes and Illustrations appended to this our reproduction, in extenso and in integrity, of Love's Martyr, everything that seemed to call for notice will be found — it is believed — noticed with less or more fulness. Thither the student-reader is referred on any point that may either interest or puzzle him. Here I wish to bring together certain wider things that could not well go into the Notes and Illustrations, so as to shew that, in the present strangely neglected book, we have a noticeable contribution to Elizabethan-Essex-Shakespeare literature.

I purpose an attempt to answer these questions :

- (a) Who was ROBERT CHESTER ?
- (b) Who was SIR JOHN SALISBURIE ?
- (c) Who were meant by the PHOENIX and the TURTLE-DOVE of these Poems ?
- (d) What is the message or motif of the Poems ?
- (e) What is the relation between the verse-contributions of SHAKESPEARE and the other "MODERNE POETS" to Love's Martyr ?
- (f) Was the 1611 issue only a number of copies of the original of 1601, less the preliminary matter and a new title-page ?
- (g) Is there poetical worth in the book ?
- (h) Who was TORQUATO CÆLIANO ?

(a) WHO WAS ROBERT CHESTER ? His name, it will be observed, appears in full, 'Robert Chester,' in the original title-page of 1601 ; as 'Ro. Chester' to the Epistle-dedicatory to Salisbury (p. 4) ; as 'R. Chester' to "The Authors request to the Phoenix" (p. 5) ; as 'R. Ch.' in address "To the kind Reader" (p. 6) ; as 'R. C.' to "Conclusion" (p. 142); and as 'R. Chester' at close of "Cantoes" (p. 167). I have sought almost in vain—and I have had capable and earnest fellow-seekers—for contemporary notices of either the man or his book. Even later, the bibliographical authorities, e.g., Ritson, Brydges, Lowndes, Collier, Hazlitt, beyond giving the title-pages and other details with (on the whole) fair accuracy, yield not one scintilla of light. Neither do the county-histories, nor editors as Gifford and Cunningham in their Ben Jonson, nor Mr. J. O. Halliwell-Phillipps in his natty little reprint (in ten copies) of the "new compositions."

I was thus shut up to an examination of the genealogies of a somewhat large and widely-distributed tribe, viz., the CHESTERS. I never doubted of finding in Mr. R. E. Chester Waters's most laborious and trustworthy work on the CHESTERS,* some "certain sound" on our poet as the solitary Chester, who, in poetry at any rate, has any fame or interest for us in this late day; but even in his matterful tomes I was doomed to disappointment. Equally unexpected was my failure to obtain from my many-yearred friend Dr. Joseph Lemuel Chester of Bermondsey—than whom one rarely meets with so thoroughly-furnished, unwearied, accurate, and generous a worker—anything approaching certainty of identification. After very considerable reading and comparison of authorities, I found only one member of the known families of Chester bearing the Christian name of ROBERT, whose position, circumstances and dates fitted in with the possible authorship of Love's Martyr. From his dedicating his book to Sir John Salisburie, and many incidental evidences of familiarity in courtly and high circles, I fixed on him. On communicating my conclusion to Dr. Chester, he was inclined to doubt; but since, he has conceded that there is nothing in the facts of his life against the identification, and that there really is no other claimant. Accordingly he has aided me with characteristic painstaking and ardour, from his abundant stores, in giving such data concerning him (cheu! meagre enough) as remain.

* Memoirs of the Chesters of Chicheley.

I mean a Robert Chester, who became SIR ROBERT CHESTER. The first of his family distinctly recognisable, was William Chester of Chipping Barnett, Herts; who died early in 1566. By his wife Maud (or Matilda) he was father of Leonard Chester, of Blaby, co. Leicester — whose family is embraced in the Heraldic Visitations of their County — and of Sir Robert Chester of Royston, Herts, who was the eldest son. The family is said to have descended from an ancient one in Derbyshire, where Chesters had large possessions, and members of which represented the town of Derby in Parliament, temp. Edward II and III. The Derbyshire estates were expended in supporting the claim of the Earl of Richmond (Henry VII) to the crown. This Sir Robert Chester was admitted to Gray's Inn in 1532, and is subsequently described in various MSS. as "Standard Bearer," "Gentleman Usher" and "Gentleman of the Privy Chamber" to King Henry VIII; from whom he obtained a Grant of the Monastery of Royston, with its manors and possessions, in the counties of Herts and Cambridge. He was knighted by King Edward VI at Wilton, 2nd September 1552, and was High Sheriff of Herts and Essex in 1565. He died 25th November 1574, and was buried at Royston.* By his first wife Catherine, daughter of John Throgmorton, Tortworth, co. Gloucester, Esquire, he had a numerous issue.† He was succeeded by his eldest son and heir, Edward Chester Esquire of Royston, who was about thirty years old at his father's death. Curiously enough, Sir Robert Chester married as his second wife, Magdalen, widow of Sir James Granado, Knt., on the same day and at the same place, that his son Edward Chester,

* Among the "Nativities" in Ashmole's MSS. in Bodleian Library, pp. 166, 176, &c., is one which states that Sir Robert Chester was born 25th November, 1510, and died on his birthday, aged 64.

† Clutterbuck, s.n., describes her as daughter of Christopher Throckmorton of Coorse Court, co. Gloucester, Esq. Cf. Chauncy, s.n.

married Sir James Granado's only daughter and heiress, i.e., father and son married respectively mother and daughter. This took place at Royston on 27th November 1564. The wife of Edward Chester survived her husband and was again married, viz., to Alexander Dyer, Esq. He was admitted to Gray's Inn in 1562, and was subsequently in service as a Colonel in the Low Countries. Besides two daughters (a) Mary, who married an Edward Thornburgh, or Thornborough of Shaddesden, co. Southampton, Esq. (b) Another, who married an Edward Roberts—Edward Chester left a son ROBERT, who was declared heir to his father by Inquisition post mortem, dated 15th January 1578-9, being then aged twelve years, six months and sixteen days, which fixes his birth about the last of June 1566. This Robert Chester, I indentify with the author of Love's Martyr. In 1596 HENRY HOLLAND dedicated his Christian Exercise of Fasting to him, in grave and grateful and admiring words.* He was a J.P. for Herts and Sheriff of Herts in 1599. From NICHOLS' Progresses of King James I, I glean the following slight notice of him:—"His Majestie being past Godmanchester, held on his way towards Royston; and drawing neere the Towne, the Shiriffe of Huntingtongshire [Sir John Bedell] humbly tooke his leave; and there he was received by that worthy Knight Sir Edward Denny, High Shiriffe of Hartfordshire... and... in brave manner he conducted his Majestie to one Mafter Chester's house, where his Majestie lay that night on his owne Kingly charge."† On this Nichols annotates:—"Though 'Master Chester' was then owner of the Priory at Royston, and attended on the King at his entrance into the Towa, it was more probably at his mansion of Cockenhatch (in the parish of Barkway, near Royston), that he had the honour of entertaining his Royal Master. A view of this house may be seen in Chauncy, p. 102."‡ The words that the King "lay" at "Master Chester's house" on "his

* See Postscript A to this Introduction for this golden little Epistle-dedicatory.

† Vol. i, pp. 104-5.

‡ Ibid., p. 105.

owne Kingly charge" does not seem to indicate lavish hospitality on the part of the host. But he must have given satisfaction to the King; for he was knighted along with a shoal of others, at Whitehall, on 23rd July 1603.* The exact date of his marriage does not appear; but his wife was Anne, daughter of Henry Capell, Esq., of Essex, by his wife, the Lady Catherine Manners, daughter of Thomas, first Earl of Rutland. She survived him not quite two years, residing at Hitchen, Herts.† They had issue at least six sons and six daughters; and their issue in turn were for a time equally numerous, but the late Mr. Harry Chester (who died in 1868) believed himself the last representative of the race.‡ He died on 3rd May 1640. On his death he was possessed of the manor and rectory of Royston, the manors of Nuthamsted, Cockenatch, Hedley, &c., &c. His Will, dated 3rd May 1638, with codicils, 16th March and 7th April 1640, was proved in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury on 3rd February 1640-1, by his eldest son and heir, Edward Chester, Esq., whose age at his father's death was, according to the Inquisition, forty years and upwards.||

On these facts I would note — (a) In 1601, when Love's Martyr was published, he was in his thirty-fifth year; but the phrase in his Epistle-dedicatory to Salisbury, 'my long expected labour;' may carry its composition back some few years at least. (b) Specifically, while long portions were probably written much earlier, the 'Turtle-dove' being Essex and being in Ireland, ascertains date of composition of all referring to 'Paphos Ile' 1598-9—the period of Essex's absence. (c) In 1611 he was in his forty-fifth year, and no longer plain 'Robert Chester,' but Sir Robert Chester

* Vol. i, p. 218. Doubtless when the King afterwards built himself a residence at Royston there would be frequent intercourse.

† Her Will is dated 12th and was proved the 26th of March 1642.

‡ The chief line of descent of these Chesters was by this Edward, son of our Sir Robert, who was also knighted. The sons entered the various professions. I notice two of them onward. Harry Chester, above mentioned, was son of another Sir Robert Chester, well-remembered as Master of the Ceremonies during the reigns from George III to Victoria. || See Postscript B for Abstract

Knight, and husband of an Earl's daughter linked to the Sidneys. Is the explanation of the withdrawal of his name from the new title-page of 1611 that his early literary fervours had chilled with his social dignities? (d) At his death he was in his seventy-fourth year. One longs to know more of a man who in his prime personally acquainted with Shakespeare, Ben Jonson, Chapman, Marston and other of the 'mighties,' survived them all. The "new compositions" for his own book, drawn from them, especially the fact that it stands alone in having a contribution from Shakespeare, would make any man remarkable.

(b) WHO WAS SIR JOHN SALISBURY? Love's Martyr is dedicated to him as "To the Honourable, and (of me before all other) honored Knight" and "one of the Esquires of the bodie to the Queenes most excellent Maiestie" (p. 3), and in the title-page of the "diverse Poeticall Effiaies" he is designated "the true-noble Knight" (p. 177). Even these slight descriptions guide us to the Salisburys or Salisburies of Lleweni, Denbighshire—long extinct. Dr. Thomas Nicholas, in his Annals and Antiquities of the Counties and County Families of Wales, commences his account of the Salusburys thus:—"The long standing and distinguished alliances of the Salusburys of Lleweni, in the Vale of Clwyd, and the high character borne by several of the line, render them a notable house, and awaken regret at their disappearance. The name is spelt differently in early writings—Salusbury, Salesbury, Salsbury; Dæwn almost always adopting the phonetic method, spells this name "Salsberie." They were of Lleweni and Machymbyd. At what time they first came to Denbighshire, or how the surname originated, is not known, but it is believed that their origin was Welsh. John Salusbury, the third of the name known to us, was the founder of the Priory of White Friars at Denbigh, and died A.D. 1289. He must therefore have witnessed the great struggle of Llewelyn and Edward, which was very hot in those parts. His grandson, William Salusbury, was M.P.

for Leominster 1332, long before members were appointed for Wales. William's grandson, Sir Harry Salusbury (died circa, 1399), was a Knight of the Sepulchre, and his brother John was Master of the House for Edward III, and suffered death in 1388." (p. 392.)

He thus continues : " Sir Harry's grandson, Sir Thomas Salusbury, Knt., the first mentioned in the pedigrees as of Lleweni, was a man of great note as citizen and soldier. His consort was Jonet, daughter and heir of William Fychan of Caernavon. He took a distinguished part in the battle of Blackheath (1497) against Perkin Warbeck's insurrection, for which he was rewarded by Henry VII. with the order of knighthood. He died 1505, and was buried at the White Friars, Denbigh (Whitchurch). Sir Roger, his son, married a Puleston of Emral, and was followed by Sir John of Lleweni, who married a Myddleton of Chester, of the Gwaenynog line. He was constable of Denbigh Castle in 1530, and served in several parliaments for the county of Denbigh—died 1578. His son, John Salusbury, Esq., of Lleweni, was the member of this house who married the celebrated Catherine Tudor of Berain; and his son by Catherine, Thomas Salusbury, Esq., married Margaret, daughter of Morys Wynn, Esq., of Gwyder, but had no male issue; his second son, John, married Ursula, daughter of Henry Stanley, Earl of Derby, and was succeeded by his son, Sir Henry Salusbury, Bart., who married Hester, daughter of Sir Thomas Myddelton, Knt., of Chirk Castle. His line terminated with his grandson Sir John, whose daughter and sole heir married Sir Robert Cotton, Bart., of Combermere, Cheshire, from whom the Combermere family are derived. Cotton-Hall, named after the Cottons, was the birth-place of the great General Lord Combermere. The Lleweni estate was sold by Sir Robert Cotton to the Hon. Thomas Fitzmaurice" (p. 392).

Turning back on these names, our Sir John Salisburie was John, second son of John Salusbury— who died in his father Sir John Salusbury's life-time— by (as above)

Catherine Tudor of Berain.* He was born "about 1567" — a portrait of him having been at Lleweny, dated 1591, æt. 24.† He became heir of his brother Thomas, who was executed, in 1586, for conspiring to deliver Mary, Queen of Scots, from imprisonment. His wife was (as above) Ursula, a 'natural' daughter of Henry, fourth Earl of Derby. The record of administration of her estate, as of the town of Denbigh, is dated 9th May 1636. They had four sons and three daughters. Henry, the eldest and only surviving son, was created a baronet, as of Lleweni, 10th November 1619, and died 2nd August 1632. His only surviving son was Sir Thomas Salusbury, author of "Joseph," a poem (1636) — who died in 1643.‡ Our Sir John was surnamed "the

* Dr. Nicholas, as before, gives an interesting account of this famous "Catherine"; and I deem it well to avail myself of it, as follows:— "Catherine of Berain," the most noted of her race in this country, was of the clan or tribe of Marchwerthian, and was left sole heiress of Berain. She married four husbands, each of a high and honourable house, and had such a numerous offspring that the name was given her of Mam Cymru, "the mother of Wales." Her first husband was John Salisbury, Esq., of Llyweni, and her estate of Berain was inherited by her children gotten by him. The second was Sir Richard Clough of Denbigh, Knt. of the Sepulchre, who made a pilgrimage to the Holy Land; the third, Morys Wynn, Esq., of Gwyder; and the fourth, Edward Thelwall of Plas-y-Ward. Catherine of Berain's father was Tudyr ap Robert ap Ievan ap Tudyr ap Gruffydd Lloyd ap Heilyn Frych, which Heilyn Frych was ninth in descent from Marchwerthian, Lord of Isaled, founder of the eleventh noble tribe." . . . "The portrait of Catherine, given in Yorke's Royal Tribes, marks a person of firmness and intelligence, and these qualities, added to her estate and numerous alliances and offspring, supplied her with a charm which the bardic heralds of the time knew not how to resist; they spared no pains, accordingly, to provide her with a lineage whose antiquity would comport with their idea of her merits. Tudyr was carried back to Urien Rheged, and he of course to Coel Godebog, who, although a reputed contemporary with Ilrod the Great, was vouched by the bards to have a full blown heraldic coat — 'Arg., an eagle displayed with two heads, sable.' Coel was in the twelfth degree from Beli Mawr, King of Britain 72 B.C., who bore, they said, 'Az., three crowns Or in pale'; and he was about the fifteenth from Brutus, who, as the bards believed, came to Britain about B.C. 1136, bearing along with his father Sylvius, an escutcheon charged thus:— 'Quarterly: 1, Or, a lion rampant passant Gu.; 2, Az., three crowns Or in bend'!" (p. 393.)

† Pennant's Tour in Wales, vol. ii, p. 145.

‡ The Bibliographers overlook that Sir John Salisbury has a longish poem prefixed to Eremona, 1632, folio.

strong"; and that explains Hugh Gryffith's playing on 'might'—of which anon. He was M.P. for co. Denbigh 43 Elizabeth (1600-1). All the authorities say he died in 1613; but no Will nor administration of his estate has been found. A shadow of obscurity thus lies on the memory of Chester's "true-noble Knight"—unlifted even from his (exact) death-date. Spelling of names was so arbitrary and variant then, that I should have attached no difficulty to the family-spelling of 'Salusbury' as against 'Salisburie' of Love's Martyr. As I write this I am called upon to annotate a Sir Stephen Poll—according to one of Nicholas Breton's Epistles-dedicatory—while he really was Sir Stephen Powle, and so is it endlessly. But I am enabled absolutely to identify Sir John Salusbury of Lleweni with Chester's Salisburie. For this is placed beyond dispute by another Epistle-dedicatory addressed to him as—be it noted—(a) of 'Llewen,' (b) as 'Esquier for the Bodie to the Queene's most excellent Maiestie,' as in Chester; and which, in the sorrowful absence of other information, is of peculiar interest. It is found in the following little volume of Verse, of which only a single exemplar (preserved at Isham) is known :

"SINETES

Paffions vppon his fortunes, offered for an Incense at the flurine of the Ladies which guid-ded his distempered thoughtes.

The Patrons patheticall Pofies, Sonets, Maddrigals, and Roundelays. Together with Sinetes Dompe.

Plena verecundi culpa pudoris erat.

By ROBERT PARRY

Gent.

At LONDON

Printed by T. P. for William
Holme, and are to be found on

Ludgate hill at the signe of the holy Lambe.

1597" (sm. 12mo)

The Epistle-dedicatory shews (1) That being plain 'John Salisburie' in 1597 he must have been knighted between 1597 and 1601, (2) That he was of the Queen's household; and so could well introduce his friend Chester into court. It thus runs :

¶ " *To the right worshipfull John Salisburie, of Llewen, Esquier, for the Bodie to the Queenes
most excellent Maiestie.*

THe Hope of these, and glasse of future times,
O Heros which eu'n enuie it selfe admir's,
Vouchsafe to garde, & patronize my rimes,
My humble rime, which nothing else desir's ;
But to make knowne the greatnes of thy minde

To Honors throne that cuer hath been inclyn'd.

Geue leaue a while vnto my breathing Muse,
To pause vpon the accent of her smarte,
From the respite of this short-taken truce,
For to recorde the actions of my Harte :
Which vowed hath, to manifest thy worth,
That noble fruites to future age brings forth.

Eu'n thou alone, which strengthn'st my repose,
And doest geue life vnto my dead desire,
Which malice daunt'st, that did thy fame oppose,
Now, with reuiuing hope, my quill inspire :
So he may write, and I may glorie singe,
That time, in time, may plucke out enui's sting.

Renowned Patron, my wayling verse,
To whose protect I flye for friendly ayde,
Vouchsafe to heare, while I my woes rehearse :
Then my poore muse, will neuer be dismayde,
To countenance the babling Eccho's frowne,
That future age may ring of thy renowne.

I that ere-while with Pan his hindes did play,
And tun'd the note, that best did please my minde,
Content to singe a sheapheard's Round-delay ;
Now by thy might, my Muse the way did finde,
With Madrigals, to fere my homely stile,
Graced with th' applause, of thy well graced smile.

Eu'n thou I say, whose trauaile hope doth veilde,
That honours worth, may reape a due rewardle,
Which flies with natie plume vnto the fiedle ;
Whose paines deserues thy cuntreys iust regarde :

Time cannot dashe, nor enue blemish those,
 Whom on fam's strength haue built their chiefe repose.
 Tis only that, which thou mayst clayme thine owne,
 Deuouring time, cannot obscure the fame,
 In future age by this thou mayst be knowne,
 When as posterities renue thy fame :
 Then thou being dead, shalt lyfe a newe possesse,
 When workes nor wordes, thy worthynes expresse :
 Then shall my rime a sort of strength remaine,
 To shield the florish of thy high renowne,
 That ruin's force may neu'r graces flaine,
 Which with fame's found shall through the world bee blowne :
 Yf that the ocean which includ's our stile,
 Would passage graunt out of this noble Ile.
 For steling tyme of muses lowe remaine,
 Will from the fountaine of her chiefe conceyte,
 Still out the fame, through Lymbecke of my braine,
 That glorie takes the honour to repeate :
 Whose subiect though of royall accents barde,
 Yet to the fame, vouchsafe thy due rewarde :
 So shall my selfe, and Pen, bequeath their toyle,
 To sing, and write prayes, which it selfe shall prayse,
 Which time with cutting Sithe, shall neuer spoyle,
 That often worthy Heros fame delays :
 And I encouraged by thy applause,
 Shall teach my muse on higher things to pause." (pp. 2-4.)

ROBERT PARRY, Gent., is but a sorry poet ; for, except here and there a touch of passion and a well-turned compliment, 'Sinetes' is sere and scentless. But it is clear that Salisburie's patronage was highly valued. Besides, an 'H. P.' who writes "In prayse of the Booke" thus speaks of him :

..... "thy worthie patron is thy fort
 Thou needes not shunne t' approach into ech place,
 Thy slowring bloome of wit shall thee report."

Still further helpful in identification is another poem in the tiny volume, signed "Hugh Gryffyth, Gent.," which is headed "Possé & nolle nobile." That by this our Salisburie was intended is confirmed by our Chester's placing the same motto at the head of his Epistle-dedicatory (p. 3), in addition to his name being introduced in the poem itself. I gladly make room for the lines :

"A worthie man deserues a worthie motte,
 As badge thereby his nature to declare,
 Wherefore the fates of purpose did alot,
 To this braue Squire, this simbole sweete and rare:
 Of might to spoyle, but yet of mercie spare,
 A simbole sure to Salifberie due by right.
 Who still doth ioyne his mercy with his might.
 Though lyon like his Poffe might take place,
 Yet like a Lambe he Nolle vscth aye,
 Right like himfelfe (the flower of Salifberies race)
 Who neuer as yet a poore man would dismay:
 But princookes finde be vfd to daunt alway:
 And so doth still: whereby is knowen full well
 His noble minde and manhood to excell.
 All crauen cures that coms of castrell kinde,
 Are knowne full well whē they their might would straine,
 The poore t' oppresse that would there fauour finde?
 Or yeilde himfelfe their freindship to attayne:
 Then seruile sottes triumphes in might a mayne,
 But such as coms from noble Lyons race,
 (Like this braue squire) who yeeldes receaues to grace.
 Haud ficta loquor.

I suppose "Poffe et nolle, nobile"—evidently his motto or impressa—gathers into itself Sir John Salisburie's name of "the strong" as over-against his gentleness = To have the power [strength] to do and yet to be unwilling to do [harm] is noble. It is just Isabella's pleading in Measure for Measure (act ii, sc. 2, ll. 107-9):

——— "O, it is excellent
 To haue a giant's strength; but it is tyrannous
 To use it like a giant"

Nor is this all 'Sinetes' gives us. For before the 'Posies' — within an arched temple gate-way— is this repetition of the principal title-page:

"The Patrone his pathetical Posies,
 Sonets, Maddri-galls, & Roun-delays.
 Together with SINETES Dompe.
 Plena verecū di culpa pu-doris erat"

This is somewhat ambiguous; for one is left in doubt whether the 'pathetical Posies, Sonets, Maddrigalls, and Roundclayes' are Salisburie's, as his productions, or by gift of Parry. The following are the contents of the division: 1. The patrones conceyte; 2. The patrones affection; 3. The patrones phantafie; 4. The patrones pauze an ode; 5. The dittie to Sospiros (2); 6. The patrones Dilemma (2); 7. The Palmers Dittie vppon his Almes; 8. The Patrones Adieu; 9. Fides in Fortunam (2); 10. My forrow is ioy; 11. An Almon for a Parrat; 12. The authors muse vpon his Conceyte; 13. Fides ad fortunam; Sonnettos 1-31. To Paris darling—Buen matina—Maddrigall—Roundelay—Sincttes Dumpe—Poffe & nolle nobile—The Lamentation of a Malcontent, &c. I select from these verses, three, to give a taste of the quality of this other eulogist of our Chester's Salisburie, and because it is just barely possible (though I confess improbable) that Sir John Salisburie is their author. There are gleams in these selections from 'the Patrones' division, not in the body of the poems.*

I. The Patrone's Pauze an Ode.

Dimpl's florish, beauties grace,
 Fortune fmileth in thy face,
 Eye bewrayeth honours flower,

* These hitherto utterly unknown and unused 'poems' form part of that lucky find of my friend Mr. C. Edmonds at Isham. But he had no idea whatever of their bearing on Love's Martyr. I am indebted to Sir C. Isham of Lamport Hall for a leisurely loan of this, as of other of his book-treasures. Note that I have silently corrected two or three slight misprints and punctuations, as 'Whose' for 'Who,' &c. With reference to the possible Salisburie authorship of the most of the second division of the small volume, perhaps ll. 37-40 in the Epistle-dedicatory, were meant to refer to his Verses—thus:

"Tis only that, which thou mayst clayme thine owne,
 Deuouring time, cannot obfcure the fame,
 In future age by this thou mayst be knowne,
 When as posterities renue thy fame, &c."

Then the phrase in the title, 'The Patrone his pathetical Pofies,' &c., and especially its interposition between 'Sincte's Dompe,' makes one hesitate in rejecting the Salisburie authorship. It does not add to the belief that these Verses are by the Patron that the lady addressed seems to be one 'of honour' or 'high rank'; for Parry himself was a 'Gentleman' as he tells us in his title-page.

Introduction.

Loue is nori'd in thy bower,
 In thy bended brow deth lye,
 Zeale imprest with chafitie.

Loue's darling deere.

O pale lippes of coral hue,
 Rarer die then cherries newe,
 Arkes where reason cannot trie,
 Beauties riches which doth lye,
 Entomb'd in that fayrest frame,
 Touch of breath perfumes the same.

O rubie cleere.

Ripe Adon fled Venus bower,
 Ayming at thy sweetest flower,
 Her ardent loue forst the fame,
 Wonted agents of his flame :
 Orbe to whose enflamed fier,
 Loue incen'd him to aspire.

Hope of our time.

Oriad's of the hills drawe neere,
 Nayad's come before your peere :
 Flower of nature shining shoes,
 Riper then the falling roe,
 Entermingled with white flower,
 Stayn'd with vermilion's power.

Nest'd in our clime.

The siluer swann sing in Poe,
 Silent notes of new-spronge woe,
 Tuned notes of cares I sing,
 Organ of the muses springe,
 Nature's pride inforceth me,
 Eu'n to rue my destinie.

Starre shew thy might.

Helen's beautie is defac'd,
 Io's graces are disgrac'd,
 Reaching not the twentieth part,
 Of thy gloases true defart,
 But no maruaile thou alone,
 Eu'n art Venus paragone.

Arm'd with delight

Iris coulors are to[o] bafe,
 She would make Apelles gaze,
 Resting by the siluer streame,
 Tossing nature feame by feame,
 Pointing at the christall skie,
 Arguing her maiestie.

II. Loues rampire fronge.

Hayre of Amber, fresh of hue,
Wau'd with goulden wyers newe,
Riches of the finest mould,
Rarest glorie to behould,
Ympe with natures vertue graft,
Engines newe for dolors fraught, :

Eu'n there as spronge.

A Iem fram'd with Diamounds,
In whose voice true concord founds,
Toy to all that ken thy smile,
In thee doth vertue fame beguile,
In whose beautie burneth fier,
Which disgraceth Queene defier :

Saunee all compare.

Loue it selfe being brought to gaze,
Learnes to treade the louers maze :
Lying vncouer'd in thy looke,
Left for to unclafpe the Booke :
Where enrou'd thy fame remaines,
That Iune's blush of glory flaines :

Blot out my care.

Spheare containing all in all,
Only fram'd to make men thrall :
Onix deck'd with honor's worth,
On whose beautie bringeth forth ;
Smiles ou'r-clouded with diadme,
Which loyall hearts doth paine :

Voyde of disgrace,

Avrora's blush that decks thy smile,
Wayting lovers to beguile :
Where curious thoughts built the nest,
Which neu'r yeilds to louers rest :
Wafting still the yeilding eye,
Whilst he doth the beautie spie.

Read in her face.

Lampe enrich'd with honours flower,
Blossome gracing Venus bower :
Bearing plumes of feathers white,
Wherein Turtles doe delighte,
Sense, would seeme to weake to finde,
Reason's depth in modest minde :

Yeilding desire.

Lode-starre of my happie choyse,
In thee alone I doe reioyce :

Introduction.

O happie man whose hap is such,
 To be made happie by thy tutch :
 Thy worth and worthynes could moue,
 The stoutest to incline to loue,
 Enflam'd with fier.

III. Pofe xi.

An Almon for a Parrat.

Disdainfull dames that mountaines moue in thought,
 And thinke they may Ioues thunder-bolt controule,
 Who past compare ech one doe fet at naught,
 With squeamish feorn's that nowe in rethorick roule :
 Yer feorne that will be feorn'd of proude difdaine,
 I feorne to beare the feornes of finest braine.
 Gestures, nor lookes of fimpring coy conceyts,
 Shall make me moue for stately ladies' mocks :
 Then SIRENS cease to trap with your deceyts,
 Least that your barkes meete v unexpected rocks :
 For calmest ebbe may yelld the roughest tide,
 And change of time, may change in time your pride.
 Leauē to conuerse if needes you must inuay,
 Let meaner fort feede on their meane entent,
 And foare on fill, the larke it fled away,
 Some one in time will pay what you have lent,
 Poore hungrie gnates faile not on wormes to feede,
 When gofhawkes misse on hoped pray to speede. (pp. 18-20.)

I add just one other snatch :—

Buen matina.

Sweete at this mourne I chaunced
 To peepe into the chamber ; loe I glauced :
 And fawe white sheetes, thy whyter skinne disclofing :
 And fofte-sweete checke on pyllowe fofte repofing ;
 Then fayde were I that pillowe,
 Deere for thy love I would not weare the willowe.

As with SIR ROBERT CHESTER himself, it is to be lamented that no personal details have come down to us concerning SIR JOHN SALISBURIE. It demands infinitely more than rank and transient influence to keep a name quick across the centuries. How pathetically soon the small dust of oblivion settles down—not to be blown off—on once noisy and noised lives! So is it—spite of Chester and Parry and Gryffyth—with our 'true-noble-knight.'

One little after-link between a Salisbury and a Chester I like to regard as going toward the identification of our Chester along with Sir John Salisbury of Lleweni. It is this—Our Sir Robert Chester, having two sons in the church, viz., Dr. Granado Chester, Rector of Broadwater, co. Sussex, and Dr. Robert Chester, Rector of Stevenage; it is found that the former was in the gift of Sir Robert Salusbury of Llanwhern, Monmouthshire, Baronet, of the same house. One is willing to think that the ancient family friendship between the two houses led to this ‘presentation’ to a son of Sir John Salisburie’s friend by a Salisbury. It is likewise to be recalled that the Chesters of Derbyshire—as we have seen—would be brought into relation with the Salisburys by their common opposition in the field to Perkin Warbeck, and in support of Henry VII.

(c) WHO WERE MEANT BY THE ‘PHENIX’ AND THE ‘TURTLE-DOVE’ OF THESE POEMS? Turning to the original title-page, we find that immediately succeeding the large-type words:

“LOVES MARTYR:
OR,
ROSALINS COMPLAINT.”

are these other:

*“Allegorically shadowing the truth of Loue,
in the constant Fate of the Phoenix
and Turtle.”*

Then below is this further or supplementary explanation:

“To these are added some new compositions, of severall moderne Writers whose names are subscribed to their severall workes, vpon the first subiect: viz. the Phoenix and Turtle.”

Looking next at "The Authors request to the Phœnix" — which, as it is annexed to the Epistle-dedicatory to Sir John Salisburie, 'one of the Esquires of the bodie to the Queenes most excellent Maiestie,' so it is in itself a second dedication, though not so designated—I ask the student-reader to weigh the compliments in these Lines, and especially these :

" Phœnix of beautie, beauteous Bird of any "
 " That feedst all earthly fences with thy faour "
 ————— " thy perfections passing beautie "

I ask also that it be noted how the 'allegory' of the birds — as Phœnix and Turtle-dove — is incidentally, though not I think accidentally, dropped even thus early, and two things indicated (a) That the Author's poems in so far as she, the 'Phœnix,' was concerned, sang the "home-writ praises" of her 'love' :

" Accept my home-writ praises of thy loue "

(b) That he was not pleading for himself but another, viz., her 'loue' or him whom she loved. He seeks that she will accept these "home-writ praises" and her 'kind acceptance' of him (the 'loue' of the prior line)

————— " kind acceptance of thy Turtle-doue "

Thus far the 'home-writ praises' are comparatively in "a lowly flight" (p. 6); but in the Poems-proper all is exaggerate and hyperbolic. As pointed out in the Notes and Illustrations frequently, it very soon appears that the 'Phœnix' is a person and a woman, and the 'Turtle-doue' a person and a male, and that while, as the title-page puts it, the poet is "Allegorically shadowing the truth of Love," it is a genuine story of human love and martyrdom (Love's Martyr). It further very evidently appears—as also shewn in the Notes and Illustrations (p. 17, st. 2) that the 'Phœnix' was not woman merely, but a queen, and queen of 'Brytaine' (st. 3, l. 4). In short, no one at all acquainted with what was the mode of speaking of Queen Elizabeth to the very last, will hesitate in recognizing her as the 'Rosalin' and 'Phoenix' of Robert Chester, and the "moderne writers," of this book. Let the reader keep eye and ear and memory alert, and he will (meo iudicio) find throughout, that in Love's Martyr and the related poems, he is listening to the every-day language of the Panegyrists of the 'great Queen.' That is to say, apart from theories, he will see that all the epithets, and much of the description pointed, and could point alone, to Elizabeth. Her 'beauty' and her kind of beauty, "beauty that excelled all beauty on earth"—her 'princely eyes,' her 'majestical' appearance, her palms kissed like a saint's, her chastity—over and over celebrated—her 'deep counsels,' her fondness for and skill in music, her gift of poetry, her eloquence, the "sweet accents of her tongue," her being a 'Phoenix,' 'Earth's beauteous Phoenix' (p. 9), and a Phoenix a prey to the want of a successor—all inevitably make us think of Elizabeth, and none other possible. Let any one who may hesitate, take NICHOLS' *Progresses of Elizabeth and study the addresses in verse and prose or the incense or flattery of the 'Devices' and similar entertainments of her nobles. It will surprize me if he hesitate longer. There is this also to be remembered, that so peculiar, so fantastically unique, was Elizabeth's position, that no one—with his fortune to make—would have dared to write thus hyperbolically of any woman on English ground while Elizabeth was alive, he thereby putting Elizabeth in the back-ground, and infinitely below her. Even Sir Walter Raleigh in 1602, i.e., subsequent to the date of Love's Martyr, thus closes a letter to her Majesty: "And so most humblie imbracing and admiringe the memory of thos celestial bewtyes, which with the people is denied mee to rewev, I pray God your Majestie may be eternall in joyes and happines. Your Majesty's most humble slaue."†

* 2 vols., 4to. See Postscript to this Introduction, C, for quotations from Nichols. Even Sidney—whose fortune was made—did not publish 'Astrophel and Stella.' Besides, it differs toto calo.

† Edwards' Life of Sir Walter Raleigh, vol. ii, p. 260 (2 vols., 8vo, 1868, Macmillan.)

By my Notes and Illustrations I put it in the power of anyone to confirm (or to confute if he may) this interpretation of the 'Phoenix' as intended for Elizabeth. I am not aware that anyone has ever so much as hinted at the interpretation; but neither do I know that any one before has read or studied the extremely rare book. The exceptional interest of the "new compositions" by Shakespeare, Ben Jonson, Chapman, Marston, and others, seems to have over-shadowed the larger portion, and thereby, likewise, left these "new compositions" without a key.*

This internal evidence, from Love's Martyr, as to Elizabeth having been meant by the 'Phoenix' is equally established by external. That is to say, another contemporary Poet — and only supercilious ignorance will deny the name to the author of The Tragedie of Shores Wife, were there no more — THOMAS CHURCHYARD — the 'Old

* I must state that, having communicated my interpretation of the 'Phoenix' and 'Turtle-dove' to my dear friend and fellow-worker in Elizabethan-Jacobean literature, Dr. Brinsley Nicholson of London, I was more than gratified to learn that, on reading the proof-sheets of Love's Martyr (which he had never been fortunate enough to see previously) he had come to the same conclusions. Thus wrought-out in absolute independence, the conclusions themselves may, perhaps, be deemed all the more probable. I must add, that I have had the very great advantage of Dr. Nicholson's reading of the entire proof-sheets of the text and of my Notes and Illustrations. Nothing could exceed the enthusiasm and insight of my richly-furnished friend, whose restored health we are all rejoicing over. As I write this a letter reaches me from Dr. Nicholson with additional illustrations and confirmations of the 'Phoenix' being Elizabeth — as follows:

"In reading Henry Peacham, M.A., his Minerva Britannia or Garden of Heroicall Devices, 1612, a series of pictorial Impresas or Emblems, with verses in English and Latin, glorifying James and his family and the chief men of rank and note in England, I came across a passage which seems to shew that Elizabeth had adopted the Phoenix as 'her own' Emblem. At the conclusion he has a poetic vision in which Minerva Britannia, as I suppose, shows him a hall filled with their Impresas and Emblems limned on the shields of renowned Englishmen, both kings and peers; and having enumerated some he continues:

' With other numberlesse beside,
That to haue feene each one's deuife,
How liuely limn'd, how well appli'de

Palæmon' of Spenser's Colin Clout—had explicitly celebrated Elizabeth, years before (1593), as the 'Phoenix.' His 'Churchyard's Challenge' is so very rare and unknown, that I think it well to reproduce here his celebrations; for as I take it, it makes what was before certain certainty itself.

The Poems I refer to are these: (a) A few plaine verses of truth against the flaterie of time, made when the Queens Maiestie was last at Oxenford; (b) A discourse of the only Phoenix of the worlde; (c) A praise of that Phenix; (d) A discourse of the ioy good subiects haue when they see our Phenix abroad; (e) This is taken out of Belleaux made of his own Mistresse. The whole of these follow. I prefix the Epistle-dedicatory of the entire volume, because in it the 'Queenes Maiestie,' as being the 'Phoenix,' is again designated.

You were the while in Paradiſe:
Another ſide ſhe did ordaine
To ſome late dead, ſome liuing yet,
Who ſeru'd Eliza in her raigne,
And worthily had honour'd it.

Where turning triſt I ſpide aboue,
HER OWN DEAR PHENIX HOVERING,
Whereat me thought in melting Loue,
Apace with teares mine eies did ſpring;
But Foole, while I aloft did looke,
For her that was to Heauen flowne,
This goodly place, my ſight forfooke,
And on the fuddaine all was gone.'

It is worth adding, that in the body of the book, Peacham gives the Phoenix to Cecil." It may be recalled here that Shakespeare put the 'emblem' of the 'Phoenix' into Cranmer's mouth at the baptism of Elizabeth—as thus:

“Nor shall this peace sleep with her; but, as when
The bird of wonder dies, the maiden phoenix,
Her ashes new create another heir
As great in admiration as herself,
So shall she leave her blessedness to one.”

(Henry VIII, act v, sc. 5, ll. 39-43.)

Cf. also my edition of Sylvester, p. 5, for kindred prefatory compliment.

I. The Epistle-dedicatory of "Churchyards Challenge." (1593.)

To the right worshipfull the Ladie
Anderfon, wife to the right honorable
 Lord chiefe Iustice of the common Pleas.

MY boldnes being much, may passe the bounds of duty, but the goodnes of your honourable husband (good Madame) passeth so farre the commendacion of my penne, that vnder his Iudgement and shield (that is so iust a Iudge) I make a fauegard to this my presumption, that hazardeth where I am vnknownen to present any peece of Poetrie or matter of great effect, yet aduenturing by fortune, to giue my Lady your sifter somewhat in the honour of the Queenes Maiestie, in the excellencie of her woorthy praise that neuer can decay; I haue translated some verses out of French, that a Poet feemed to write of his owne mistresse, which verses are so apt for the honouring of the Phenix of our worlde, that I cannot hide them from the sight of the worthy, nor dare commit so grosse a fault as to let them die with my selfe: wherfore and in way of your fauour in publishing these verses, I dedicate them to your good Ladishippe, though not so well penned as the first Authour did polish them, yet in the best manner my muse can affoorde, they are plainly expressed, hoping they shalbe as well taken as they are ment, so the blessed and great Iudge of all daily bleffe you.

II. A few plaine verses of truth against the flaterie of time, made when the Queenes Maiestie was last at Oxenford.*

Sith silent Poets all,
 that praise your Ladies so:
 My Phenix makes their plumes to fall,
 that would like Peacockes goe,
 Some doe their Princes praise,
 and Synthia some doe like:
 And some their Mistresse honour raise,
 As high as Souldiers pike.
 Come downe yee doe prefmount, [sic]
 the warning bel it founls:

* In the Contents it is entitled "A discourse of the only Phenix of the worlde." Lady Anderson, supra, was Magdalen, d. of Christopher Smyth, of Annables, co. Herts.

That calls you Poets to account, for breaking of your bounds.
In giuing fame to those,
faire flowers that foone doth fade :
And cleane forget the white red rose,
that God a Phenix made.
Your Ladies also doe decline,
like Stars in darksome night :
When Phenix doth like Phoebus shine,
and leads the world great light.
You paint to please desire,
your Dame in colours gay :
As though braue words, or trim attire,
could grace a clod of clay.
My Phenix needs not any art,
of Poets painting quill :
She is her selfe in cuerie part,
so shapte by kindly skil.
That nature cannot wel amend :
and to that shapte most rare,
The Gods such speciall grace doth fend,
that is without compare.
The heauens did agree,
by constellations plaine :

That for her vertue shee should bee the only queene to raigne,
(In her most happie daies) and carries cleane awaie :
The tip and top of peerlesse prayse, if all the world say nay,
Looke not that I should name, her vertue in their place,
But looke on her true well-won fame, that answers forme & face.
And therein shall you read, a world of matter now,
That round about the world doth spread her heauenly graces throw.
The seas (where cannons rore) hath yeilded her her right,
And sent such newes vnto the shore, of enemies foile and flight.
That all the world doth found, the glorie Phenix gote
Whereof an echo doth rebound, in such a tune and note,
(That none alive shall reach) of Phenix honor great,
Which shall the poets muses teach, how they of her should treat.
O then with verses sweete, if Poets haue good store,
Fling down your pen, at Phenix feet, & praise your nimples no more.
Paeke hence, she comes in place, a flatly Royall Queene :
That takes away your Ladies grace, as soone as she is seene.

FINIS.

III. A praise of that Phenix.*

Verfes of value, if Vertue bee feene,
Made of a Phenix, a King, and a Queene.

My Phenix once, was wont to mount the skies,
To ſee how birdes, of bafer feathers flew :
Then did her Port and preference pleaſe our eies :
Whoſe abſence now, breeds nought but fancies new.
The Phenix want, our court, and Realme may rue.
Thus fight of her, ſuch welcome gladnes brings,
That world ioeis much, whē Phenix claps her wings.

And flies abroad, to take the open aire,
In royall fort, as bird of ſtately kinde :
Who hates foul ſtorms ; and loues mild weather fair,
And by great force, can lore the bloſtring wind, =lower
To flew the grace, and greatnes of the minde,
My Phenix hath, that vertue growing grēene,
When that abroad, her gracious face is ſeene.

Let neither feare of plagues, nor wits of men,
Keepe Phenix clofe, that ought to liue in light :
Of open world, for abſence wrongs vs then,
To take from world, the Lampe that giues vs light,
O God forbid, our day were turnde to night,
And ſhining Sunne, in cloudſ ſhould ſhrowded be,
Whoſe golden rayes, the world defires to ſee.

The Dolphin daunts, each fiſh that ſwims the Seas,
The Lion feares, the greateſt beaſt that goes :
The Bees in Hive, are glad theyr King to pleaſe,
And to their Lord, each thing their duety knowes.
But firſt the King, his Princely preference ſhowes,
Then ſubiects ſtoopes, and proſtrate falſ on face,
Or bowes down head, to giue their maiſter place.

The funne hath powre, to comfort flowrs and gras,
And purge the aire, of foule infections all :
Makes ech thing pure, wher his clear beams do paſſe,
Draws vp the dew, that miſts and fogs lets fall :
My Phenix hath, a greater gift at call,
For vaſſalls all, a view of her doe craue,
Becaufe thereby, great hope and hap we haue.

* I take this heading from the 'Contents,'—there is added, "and veries tranſlated out of French." Throughout theſe poems of Churchyard there are various inſtances of verb ſingular after nominative plural.

Good turnes it brings, and fuiters plaints are heard,
 The poore are pleafde, the rich fome purchafe gains,
 The wicked blufh : the worthy wins reward,
 The feruant findes a meanes to quit his paines :
 The wronged man, by her fome right attaines,
 Thus euery one, that help and fuccour needes,
 In hard diftreffe, on Phenix fauour feedes.

But from our view, if world doe Phenix kéepe,
 Both Sunne, and Moone, and ftars we bid farewell,
 The heauens mourne, the earth will waile and wéepe.
 The heauy heart, it féeles the paines of Hell,
 Woe be to thofe, that in defpaire doe dwell.
 Was neuer plague nor peftlence like to this,
 When foules of men haue loft fuch heauenly bliffe.

Now futers all, you may shoote vp your plaints
 Your Goddes now, is lockt in fhrine full faft :
 You may perhaps, yet pray vnto her Saints.
 Whose eares are flopt, and hearing fure is paft,
 Now in the fire, you may fuch Idols caft.
 They cannot helpe, like ftockes and ftones they bée,
 That haue no life, nor cannot heare nor fee.

Till that at large, our royall Phenix comes,
 Packe hence poore men, or picke your fingers endes,
 Or blow your nailes, or gnaw and bite your thombs,
 Till God aboue, fome better fortune fends.
 Who here abides, till this bad world emends,
 May doe full well, as tides doe ebbe and flow,
 So fortune turnes, and haps doe come and goe.

The bodies ioy, and all the ioints it beares,
 Lies in the head, that may commaund the reft :
 Let head but ake, the heart is full of feares,
 And armes acroffe, we clap on troubled brest :
 With heauy thoughts, the mind is fo opprest,
 That neather legs, nor féete haue will to goe,
 As man himfelfe, were cleane orecome with woe.

The head is it, that ftill preferues the fence.
 And féekes to faue, each member from difeafe :
 Devife of head, is bodies whole defence,
 The skill whereof, no part dare well difpleafe :
 For as the Moone moues vp the mighty Seas,
 So head doth guide the body when it will,
 And rules the man, by wit and reafons skill.

But how should head, in dede doe all this good,
 When at our néede, no vse of head we haue :
 The head is felt, is féene and vnderstood.
 Then from disgrace, it will the body saue,
 And otherwise, sick man drops downe in graue.
 For when no helpe, nor vse of head we finde,
 The scete fals lame, and gazing eies grow blinde.

The lims wax stiffe, for want of vse and aide,
 The bones doe dry, their marrow waste away :
 The heart is dead, the body liues afraide,
 The sinnowes shrinke, the bloud doth still decay :
 So long as world, doth want the Star of day,
 So long darke night, we shall be sure of héere, ;
 For cloudy skies, I feare will neuer cléere.

God fend some helpe, to salue sick poore mens fores,
 A boxe of baulme, would heale our woundes vp quite :
 That precious oyle, would eate out rotten cores,
 And giue great health, and man his whole delighte.
 God fend some funne, in frostie morn'ng white,
 That cakes of yce may melt by gentle thaw,
 And at well-head wee may some water drawe.

A Riddle.

Wee wish, wee want, yet haue what we desire :
 We freeze, wee burne, and yet kept from the fire.

FINIS.

IV. A discourse of the ioy good subiects haue when they see OLIVIA
 Phenix abroad.*

This is to be read five waies.

IN hat a fauour borne, a bird of gold in Britaine land,
 In loyall heart is borne, yet doth on head like Phenix stand.
 To set my Phenix forth, whose vertues may thē al surmoūt.
 An orient pearle more worth, in value, price & good account.
 The gold or precious stone, what tong or verbe dare her distain,
 A péerelesse paragon, in whom such gladfome gifts remaine.
 Whose seemly shape is wrought as out of wax wer made y^e mold
 By fine deuote of thought, like skinned Saint in beaten gold :
 Dame Nature did distaine, and thought great scorn in any fort,
 To make the like againe, that should deserue such rare report.
 Ther néedes no Poets pen, nor painters penceil, come in place,

* This heading is from the 'Contents.'

Nor flatering fraife of men, whose filed ſpeech giues ech thing grace,
 To praife this worthy dame, a Nimph which Dian holds full *dée*r
 That in ſuch perfeét frame, as mirror bright & chriftal élée'r
 Is fet out to our view, threefold as faire as ſhining Sunne,
 For beauty grace and hue, a worke that hath great glory won,
 A Goddes dropt from ſky, for cauſes more than men may know,
 To pleaſe both minde & cie for thoſe that dwels on earth below,
 And ſhew what heauenly grace, and noble ſecret power diuine
 Is ſéene in Princely face, that kind hath formd & framd ſo fine.
 For this is all I write, of ſacred Phenix ten times bleſt,
 To ſhew mine own delite, as fancies humor thinketh beſt.

FINIS.

V. This is taken out of Belleau made of his own Miſtreſſe.*

Sad ſighes doth ſhew, the heat of heartes deſire,
 Andorrow ſpeakes, by ſignes of heauie eyes :
 So if hot flames, proceed from holly fire,
 And loue may not, from vicious fancies eyes
 In tarrying time, and fauour of the ſkies,
 My only good, and greateſt hap doth lie :
 In her that doth, all tond delight diſpies :
 Than turne to mee, ſad ſighes I ſhall not dye.

If that bee ſhee, who hath ſo much mée bound,
 And makes me hers, as I were not mine owne :
 She moſt to praife, that maie aliue be founde,
 Moſt great and good, and gracious througely knowne.
 Shée all my hope, in brieſe yea more than mine,
 (That quickly maie, bring life by looke of eye)
 Than come chaefſt ſighes, a cloſe record diuine,
 Returne to mee, and I ſhall neuer dye.

If from young yeares, ſhee gainde the garland gaye,
 And wan the price, of all good giſtes of grace :
 If princely port, doe vertuous minde be wraie, = prize
 And royall power, be found by noble face,
 If ſhee bée borne, moſt happie graue and wiſe,
 A Sibill ſage, ſent downe from heauens hie,
 O ſmothering ſightes, that faine would cloſe mine eyes,
 Returne to mee, ſo ſhall I neuer die.

* While this piece has nothing of the 'Phoenix' in it, it is equally good for our purpose, as shewing how Elizabeth was addressed (as in Chester) by the titles of 'Sun,' &c.

If most vpright, and faire of forme shée bee,
 That may beare life, and swéetest manner shewes,
 Loues God, good men, and Countries wealth doth féé,
 A queene of kinges, all Christian princes knowes,
 So iustly liues, that each man hath his owne,
 Sets straight each state, that else would goe awrie :
 Whereby her fame, abroad the world is blowne,
 Then feace sad fighes, fo shall I neuer die.

If shée the heart of Alexander haue,
 The sharpe esprit, and hap of Haniball,
 The constant mind, that Gods to Scipio gaue,
 And Cæsars grace, whose triumphs passed all,
 If in her thought, do dwell the iudgement great,
 Of all that raignes, and rules from earth to skie :
 (And fits this houre, in throne and regall feate),
 Come fighes againe, your maister cannot die.

If she be found, to tast the pearcing ayr,
 In heate, in colde, in frost, in snowe and rayne :
 As diamond, that shines so passing faire,
 That sunne nor moone, nor weather cannot staine :
 If blastes of winde, and stormes to beautie yelde,
 And this well springe, makes other fountaines drye,
 (Turnes tides and floodes, to water baraine féeld,)
 Come fighes then home, I liue and cannot die.

If her great giftes, doth daunt dame fortunes might,
 And she haue caught the hayres and head of hap :
 To others hard, to her a matter light,
 To mount the cloudes, and fall in honours lap.
 If shee her felse, and others conquers too,
 Liues long in peace, and yet doth warre desie :
 As valiaunt kinges, and vertuous victors doe,
 Then fighe no more, o heart I cannot die.

If such a prince, abase her highnesse than,
 For some good thing, the world may gesse in mee :
 And stoupes so low, too like a fillie man,
 That little knowes, what Princes grace may béé.
 If shee well waie, my faith and seruice true,
 And is the iudge, and touch that gold shall trie :
 That colour cléere, that neuer changeth hue,
 Heart sigh no more, I liue and may not die.

If I doe vse, her fauour for my weale,
 Dy reason off, her gracious countenance still :
 And from the sunne, a little light I steale,
 To keepe the life, in lampe to burne at will.

If robbérie thus, a true man may commit,
Both I and mine, vnto her merits flie :
If I perfume, it springes for want of wit,
Excuse me than, fad fighes or else I die.

If shee do know, her shape in heart I beare,
Engraude in breast, her grace and figure is,
Yea day and night, I thinke and dreame each where,
On nothing else, but on that heauenly blisse,
If so transformde, my mind and body liues,
But not confumde, nor finde no cause to cry,
And waite on her, that helpe and comfort giues,
Than come poore fighes, your maister shall not die.

If she behold, that here I wish no breath,
But liue all hers, in thought and word and déede :
Whose fauour lost, I craue but present death,
Whose grace attaiind, lean soule full fat shall séede,
If any cause, do kéepe her from my fight,
I know no world, my self I shall deny,
But if her torch, doe lend my candle light,
Heart figh no more, the body doth not die.

But if by death, or some disgrace of mine
Through enuies sting, or false report of foes,
My view be bard, from that swéete face diuine,
Beléue for troth, to death her seruant goes,
And rather sure, than I should ill conceiue :
Sighes mount to skies, you know the cause and why,
How here below, my lusty life I leaue,
Attend me there, for wounded heart must die.

If shee beléue, without her presence here,
That anything, may now content my minde :
Or thinke in world, is sparke of gladfome chéere,
Where shee is not, nor I her presence finde :
But all the ioyes, that man imagine may,
As handmaidens wayt, on her héere vnder sky,
Then fighes mount vp, to heauens hold your way,
And stay me there, for I of force must die.

If I may feare, that fragill beauty light,
Or semblance faire, is to be doubted fore :
Or my vaine youth, may turn with fancies might
Or fighes full falles fains grieue or torment more,
Than heart doth féele, then angry stars aboue,
Doe band your felues, gainst me in heauens hie,
And rigor worke, to conquer constant loue,
Mount vp poore fighes, here is no helpe, I die.

And so sad sighes, the witness of my thought,
 If love finde not, true guerdon for good will:
 Ere that to grave, my body shalbe brought,
 Mount vp to clouds, and there abide me still,
 But if good hope, and hap some succour fend,
 And honor doth, my vertuous minde supply,
 With treble blisse, for which I long attend,
 Returne good sighes, I mean not now to die.

Translated out of French, for one that is bounde much to Fortune.

FINIS.

It were easy to multiply contemporary and funereal 'flatteries' of Elizabeth under the name of the 'Phoenix,' and from Cynthia in Spenser to the Rosalind and Orianas of many 'Madrigals,'* and Atropeion Delion of Thomas Newton (1603), shew that she was even to old age receptive of the loftiest names and the most celestial praise, especially if they lauded her 'beauty' or her intellect. But for our present purpose more cannot be required.

Having thus determined that Elizabeth was the 'Phoenix,' I proceed now to inquire who was intended by the 'Turtle-doue.' As with the 'Phoenix,' I must request attention to our Notes and Illustrations on the places wherein the 'Turtle-doue' occurs. It will there be found that, contrary to ordinary usage, the 'Turtle-doue' is distinctly 'sung' of as a male, by the necessities indeed of the 'love' relations sustained towards the 'Phoenix,' and of the 'Phoenix' towards the 'Turtle-doue,' e.g.:

Nature,

"Fly in this Chariot, and come sit by me,
 And we will leaue this ill corrupted Land,
 We'll take our course through the blue Azure skie,
 And set our feete on Paphos golden sand.
 There of that Turtle Doue we'll vnderstand:
 And visit HIM in those delightful plaines,
 Where Peace conioyn'd with Plenty still remains." (p. 32.)

It will also be found that, as with Elizabeth as the 'Phoenix,'

* See an interesting paper on 'Madrigals' in honour of Elizabeth in Notes and Queries, first series, vol. iv, pp. 185-188. See Postscript D for additional 'Phoenix' references, &c.

so with the 'Turtle-douc,' epithet and circumstance and the whole bearing of the Poems, make us think of but one pre-eminent man in the Court of Elizabeth. Let the Notes and Illustrations on portions of these Poems relative to the 'Turtle-douc' be critically pondered; and unless I err egregiously, it will be felt that only of the brilliant but impetuous, the greatly-dowered but rash, the illustrious but unhappy Robert Devereux, second earl of Essex, could such splendid things have been thought. Inevitably 'Liberal Honour' and 'Love's Lord,' are accepted as his titles of right; while his Letters to Elizabeth and of Elizabeth to him reveal the 'envy' and 'jealousy' and hatreds against which he fought his way upward.† I invite prolonged scrutiny of this description and portraiture :

“ Hard by a running streame or cryfall fountaine,
Wherein rich Orient pearle is often found,
Enuiron'd with a high and sleepe mountaine,
A fertill foile and fruitful plot of ground,
There shalt thou find true Honors louely Squire,
That for this Phanix keeps Promethus fire.

His bower wherein he lodgeth all the night,
Is fram'd of Cedars and high loftie Pine,
I made his house to chastice thence despight,
And fram'd it like this heauenly roofof mine :
His name is Liberall honor, and his hart,
Aymes at true faithfull seruice and defart.

Looke on his face, and in his browes doth sit,
Bloud and sweete Mercie hand in hand vnited,
Bloud to his foes, a prefdent most fit
For such as haue his gentle humour spited :
His Haire is curl'd by nature mild and mecke,
Hangs carelesse downe to shroud a blushing checke.

Giue him this Ointment to annoint his Head,
This precious Balme to lay vnto his feet,
Theſe shall direct him to the Phanix bed,
Where on a high hill he this Bird shall meet :
And of their Ashes by my doome thal rite,
Another Phanix her to equalize.” (pp. 19-20.)

† See Lives and Letters of the Devereux, Earls of Essex, &c., &c. By the Hon. W. B. Devereux, 2 vols. 8vo. 1853. (Murray.)

The 'Turtle Dove,' as thus described, was then in 'Paphos Ile'; and what was meant by it will appear in the sequel. But I ask any one familiar with the men and events of the reign of Elizabeth, if Essex is not instantly suggested by these and parallel passages and allusions in Love's Martyr? This being so, we should expect that Essex would be found elsewhere similarly described; and if, in giving Churchyard's remarkable 'Phoenix' poems, I felt that I was by them placing our interpretation beyond cavil, I have much the same conviction in now submitting certain extracts from a poem avowedly in his honour, when he was in the golden sunshine (yet not without broad shadows) of his favour with Elizabeth. I refer to "An Eglogue Gratulatorie. Entitled: To the right honorable, and renowned Shepheard of Albions Arcadia: Robert Earle of Essex and Ewe, for his welcome into England from Portugall. Done by George Pecke." (1589.)*

Let these speak for themselves, by help of our italics occasionally:

Piers.

"Of arms to fmg I haue nor lust nor skill; list?
 Enough is me to blazon my good-will,
 To welcome home that long hath lackèd been,
 Oae of the jolliest shepherds of our green;
Iö, iö pæan!

Palinode.

Tell me, good Piers, I pray thee tell it me,
 What may thilk jolly fwain or shepherd be,
 Or whence y-comen, that he thus welcome is,
 That thou art all so bliithe to see his bliffe?

Piers.

... Thilk shepherd, Palinode, whom my pipe praifeth,
 Where glory my reed to the welkin raifeth,
 He's a great herdgroom, certes, but no fwain,
Saue hers that is the flower of Phæbe's plain;
Iö, iö pæan!

* Dyce's Greene, pp. 559-563, 1 vol., Svo, 1861. It is much to be regretted that, here as invariably, so competent a scholar and so noble a worker as the late Mr. Dyce modernized the orthography of his texts, thereby obliterating all philological and critical value.

He's well-allied and lovèd of the best,
 Well-thew'd, fair and frank, and famous by his crest;
 His Rain-deer, racking with proud and stately pace,
 Giveth to his flock a right beautiful grace;
 Iò, iò pœant!

He waits where our great shepherdes doth wun,
 He playeth in the shade, and thriveth in the sun;
 He shineth on the plains, his lusty flock him by,
 As when Apollo kept in Arcady;
 Iò, iò pœant!

Fellow in arms he was in their slow'ring days
 With that great shepherd, good Philifides; Sir Philip Sidney.
 And in fad fable did I see him dight,
 Moaning the misfs of Pallas' peerless knight;
 Iò, iò pœant!

With him he serv'd, and watch'd, and waited late,
To keep the grim wolf from Eliza's gate; [Anjou, Tyrone, &c.]
And for their mistress, thoughten these two swains,
 They moughten neuer take too mickle pains;
 Iò, iò pœant!

But, ah for grief! that jolly groom is dead,
 For whom the Muses, silver tears have shed;
Yet in this lovely swain, source of our glee,
Mun all his virtues sweet revived be;
 Iò, iò pœant!

Again :

Palinode.

“ Thou foolish swain that thus art over-joy'd,
 How soon may here thy courage be accoy'd!
 If he be one come new from western coast,
 Small cause hath he, or thou for him to boast.
 I see no palm, I see no laurel boughs
 Circle his temples or adorn his brows;
 I hear no triumphs for this late return,
 But many a herdsman more dispos'd to mourn.

Piers.

Pale lookest thou, like spite, proud Palinode;
 Venture doth loss, and war doth danger bode;
 But thou art of those harvesters, I see,
 Would at one flock spoil all the silberd tree;
 Iò, iò pœant!

For shame, I say, give virtue honour's due!
 I'll please the shepherd but by telling true:

Palm mayst thou see and bays about his head,
That all his flock right forwardly hath led ;
Iö, iö pæan!"

Then comes ENVY, as so frequently in Love's Martyr and the Essex letters (to and from), with sinister influence :—

" But woe is me, lewd lad, fame's full of lies,
ENVY DOTH AYE TRUE HONOUR'S DEEDS DESPISE,
Yet chivalry will mount with glorious wings
SPITE ALL, AND NESTLE NEAR THE SEAT OF KINGS;
Iö, iö pæan!"

Finally, Chester's 'Liberall Honor' is introduced :—

" O HONOUR'S FIRE, that not the brackish fea
Mought quench, nor foeman's fearful 'larums lay!
So high those golden flakes done mount and climb
That they exceed the reach of shepherds rhyme ;
Iö, iö pæan!"

Palinode.

What boot thy welcomes, foolish-hardy swain ?
Louder pipes than thine are going on the plain ;
Fair Eliza's lasses and her great grooms
Receive this shepherd with unfeign'd welcomes.
HONOUR is in him that doth it bestow

Piers.

So cease, my pipe, the worthies to record
Of thilk great shepherd, of thilk fair young lord."

The line of Palinode,

" HONOUR is in him that doth it bestow,"

as well as the title of 'Liberal Honour,' refers doubtless, among other things, to the dubbing of knights by Essex as commander-in-chief—a matter which caused much 'evil-speaking' and jealousy.

Subsidiary to this specially noticeable poem of GEORGE PEELE is another by THOMAS CHURCHYARD. Intrinsicly it is of little or no poetical value ; but from its direct bearing on our interpretation of 'Paphos Ile,'—as in Love's Martyr, designating Ireland,—it has no common interest. For it is a Greeting to Essex on his departure for Ireland to put down the rebellion of Tyrone. There is nothing of that exaggerate laudation of Essex common at the period ; but the very homeliness and humbleness of the poem serve the better to reflect the gravity of his summons to do this service for his Queen. One phrase in the Epistle-dedicatory gives a parallel to Shakespeare's assurance of welcome on return, and to us now the quaintest possible use of the word 'impe.' The august names, e.g., Scipio, Mars, and the like, tell us of the popular conception of the hero of the Expedition ; and in relation to the 'Liberal Honour' of Love's Martyr, it does not look like a mere coincidence that Churchyard names Essex 'Honour'—"Who must ask grace on knees at Honor's feet" (p. xlii, l. 26). I deem it well to reproduce the whole, from (it is believed) the unique exemplar in the British Museum. Unfortunately the headline of the opening of the poem is cut off by the binder, and only the word 'happy' can be guessed at in it. The title-page is as follows :

THE FORTVNATE FAREWELL
to the most forward and noble Earle of Essex, one of the honorable priuie Counsell, Earle high Marshall of England, Master of the horse, Master of the ordinance, Knight of the garter, &
Lord Lieutenant general of all the Queenes Maiesties forces in Ireland.
Dedicated to the right Honorable the Lord
HARRY SEAMER, second sonne to the last Duke of Sommerfet.
Written by Thomas Churchyard
Esquire.

Printed at London by Edm. Bollifant, for William Wood at the West
doore of Powles.

1599

Next comes the Epistle-dedicatory—following up the odd mention of his name in the title-page—to Henry, second son of the Duke of Somerset, by his second wife, Anne, daughter of Sir Edward Stanhope, Knt. Churchyard calls him 'the Lord Harry' by courtesy; for of course when his father was stripped of his titles, those of the sons also fell. But he was knighted, though no record of this appears to have been preserved. Dr. Chester has notes of the administration to his estate, dated 6 February, 1606-7, when he was described as Sir Henry Seymour, Knt., of St. Anne, Blackfriars, London, the letters being granted to his sister, Lady Mary Rogers. He married Lady Joan Percy, third daughter of Thomas, seventh Earl of Northumberland, but died without issue; and as his sister administered his estate Lady Seymour probably died before him. The Epistle thus runs:

To the right honorable the L. Harry Seamer Thomas Churchyard wisheth continuance of vertue, blessednesse of minde, and wished felicitie.

I N all duty (my good Lord) I am bold, because your most honorable father the Duke of Sommerset (uncle to the renowned impe of grace noble King Edward the sixth) favoured me when I was troubled before the Lords of the Council, for writing some of my first verses: in requitall whereof, euer since I haue honored all his noble race, and knowing your Lordship in sea seruices forward and ready in all honorable maner (sparing for no charges) when the Spaniards approached neere our countrie, I bethought me how I might be thankfull for good turnes found of your noble progenie:* though vnable therefore, finding my selfe vnfurnished of all things woorthy presentation and acceptance, I tooke occasion of the departure of a most woorthy Earle towards the seruice in Ireland, to make a present to your Lordship of his happy Farewell as I hope: and trust to liue and see his wished welcome home. This Farewell onely deuised to stirre vp a threefold manly courage to the mercenarie multitude of soldiers, that follow this Marshall-like [Martial-like] Generall, and especially to moue all degrees in generall loyally to serue our good Queene Elizabeth, and valiantly to go through with good resolution the acceptable seruice they take in hand. Which true seruice shall redouble their renowne, and enroll their names in the memoriall-booke of fame for euer. I feare I leade your Lordship too farre with the flourish of a fruitlesse pen, whose blandishing phrase makes many to gaze on, and few to consider well of and regarde. My plot is onely laide to purchase good will of vertuous people: what the rest thinke, let their misconstruing conceits answere their owne idle humors. This plaine present winning your Lordships good liking, shall passe with the greater grace to his honorable lands, that the power & power of good men was willingly upon the side of the reformers of wicked religion.

* = descent, or as we would say, ancestry, i.e., the 'before-births,' a sense common at that time. Cf. Shakespeare and Loce's Martyr.

Your L. in all at commandment, Thomas Churchyard.

And now we reach the poem itself:*

.....

and followed my noble

Barke of E. R.

Now Saturne falls to Afflict far from home,
The Lord of heaves, and burnals be his god:
Now when green trees, begins to bud and bloom,
On Idils fees, Hinnas day shall med:
A warlike band, of worthy knights I heep,
Aer armed for fight, a bloody brunt to tread:
With rebels shall, boeth might and manhood toep,
Our contrails fight, and quarrell to be tried:
Righte masks wrong blissh, and trock birds falshe dy,
The sword is drawn, TYRONS dispatch drawes ny,
A warre must be taught to know his king,
When MARS shal march, with flaming sword in hand,
A trock cock, ones trock and hangs down wing,
Will run about the shreep and lear not stand. [100]
When cocks of geem, come in to gaze a blos:
So falls TYRON, may fame when he would fight,
Though now alowd, in dangell dith he croe:
Tyrons wants hart, and often takes the fight:
When rebels see, they aer surprisid by trock,
Pack hence in hast, away the rebels goeth,
Froed trecherous trock, is curd & knockt with blos,
Hy white mumbles, with force are bearen down:
Against the fight, through of red rebels croe,
Not ben dyed well, that did impeach a crowne,
Read the Annals, of all the Princes past,
Whear treachons still, are penible in their kinde,
Thear shall you see, when faithfull men stand dy,
Falls traytors still, are but a blast of wynde:
For he that hat found kings and all degrees,
The real of states, and kingdoms presides,
Roe: and rage, this rank rebelion breeds:
Hamock and spoyl, few bloodied to sheweth,
Trockles attempts, their dilly hamer feeds,
Rahnes runs on, all heeding to reproach:

* The spelling of Churchyard is so peculiar in this poem that I must state that our text is an exact reproduction of the original throughout. We have here a most noticeable example of a then common practice of making slight changes agree in spelling, q, g, ll, t and g: ll, ll, ll, ll, ll.

Boldnes begaet theas helhounds all a roe,
 The fons of fhaem, and children of Gods wraeth;
 With woluiſh minds, liek breechles beares they goe,
 Throw woods and bogs, and many a crooked paeth:
 Lying liek dogs, in litter, dung and ſtrawe,
 Rued as bruet beaſts, that knoes ne rucl nor lawe.
 Foſtred from faith, and fear of God or man,
 Vnlernd or taught of any graces good,
 Nurſt vp in vice, whear falſehed firſt began,
 Mercyles boern, ſtill ſheading guiltles blood,
 Libertines lewd, that all good order haets,
 Murtherers viel, of wemen great with childe,
 Cruell as kiets, deſpising all eſtaets,
 Diuiliſhly bent, boeth curriſh, ſtern and wilde:
 Their whole deuice, is rooet of miſheceues all,
 That feeks a plaeg, on their own heds to fall.
 Will God permit, ſuch monſters to bear ſway?
 His iuſtice haets, the ſteps of tyrants ſtill,
 Their damnable deeds, craues vengeance euery day;
 Which God doth ſeourge, by his own bleſſed will.
 He planteth force, to fling down feeble ſtrength,
 Men of mutch worth, to weaken things of noght,
 Whoes cloked craft, ſhall fuer be ſeen at length,
 When vnto light, dark dealings ſhall be brought:
 Sweet ciuill Lords, ſhall ſawfy fellowes meet,
 Who muſt ask grace, on knees at honors ſeet.
 Ruednes may range awhile in ruſſling fort,
 As witleſſe wights with wandring maeks world mues;
 But when powre coms, to cut proud praetiſe ſhert,
 And ſhooe by ſword, how ſubieets Prince abues,
 Then conſhens ſhall Peccaui cry in ſeeld,
 Tremble and quaek, mutch liek an Aſpin leaf,
 But when on knees, do conquer captiues yeeld,
 The victor turns his hed as he wear deaf:
 Rueth is grown cold, reuenge is hot as fier,
 And mercy ſits with frowns in angry attier.
 World paſt forgauce great faults, and let them pas,
 Time preſent loeks on futuer time to com.
 All aegis ſawe their follies in a glas,
 Yet were not taught, by time nor found of drom.
 This world groes blinde, and neither ſees nor heers,
 Their ſenſes fail, the wits and reaſon faints,
 Old world is waxt worm-eaten by long yeers,
 And men becom, black diuels that were faints:
 Yet Gods great grace, this wretched caus reforms,
 And from fayr flowrs, weeds out the wicked worms.

The lead [193]

They com that shall redresse great things amis,
 Pluck vp the weeds, plant roses in their place.
 No violent thing enduers long as hit is,
 Falsched flies fast, from sight of true mens face,
 Traitors do fear the plaegs for them prepard
 And bieds their heds, in hoels when troeth is seen,
 Tho[u]gh[t] gracelesse giues to duty small regard,
 Good subiects yeelds obedience to their Queen :
 In quarrels iust, do thousands offer liues,
 They feel fowl bobs that for the backlars striues.
 This Lord doth bring, for strength the fear of God,
 The loue of men, and sword of iustice boeth,
 Which three is to TYROEN an iron rod,
 A birchin twig, that draws blood wher hit goeth.
 When IOAB went, to warr in DAVIDS right,
 He broght hoem peace, in spite of enmies beard,
 For IOZIAS, the Lord above did fight,
 With Angels force, that made the foes ascard :
 The world doth shack, and tremble at his frown,
 VVhoes beck foon casts the brags of rebels down,
 Stand fast and fuer, false traitors turns their back,
 True subiects veaw, maeks haerbrain rebels blush ;
 Stout heauy bloes, maeks highest trees to crack,
 An armed piek, may brauely bied a push :
 Wheel not about, stand stiffe liek brazen wall,
 For that's the way, to win the feeld in deed ;
 Charge the foer front, and see the enmies fall,
 The cowards brag, is but a rotten reed :
 Victors must beare the brunt of eury thock,
 A constant minde, is liek a stony rock.

[= 'z]

Farewell sweet Lords, Knights, Captains and the rest,
 Who goes with you, tacks threefold thankfull pain,
 Who sets you forth, is ten times treble blest,
 Who serues you well, reaps glory for their gain,
 Who dies shall liue, in faem among the best,
 Who liues shall loek and laugh theas broils to scorn :
 All honest harts, doth ciuill warr detest,
 And curse the time that ear TYROEN was born :
 We hoep good hap waits on the fleet that goes,
 And Gods great help, shall clean destroy our ioes.

F I N I S .

I venture to assume that I have sufficiently answered our question, Who were meant by the 'Phoenix' and the 'Turtle-dove' of these Poems? I must hold it as demonstrated, that the 'Phœnix' was Elizabeth and the 'Turtle Dove' Essex.* No one has, hitherto, in any way thought of this interpretation of the 'Turtle Dove' any more than the other of the 'Phœnix'; but none the less do I hope for acceptance of it.†

Our interpretation of Chester's 'Phœnix' and 'Turtle Dove' is the more weighty and important, in that it for the first time enables us to understand Shakespeare's priceless and unique 'Phœnix and Turtle'—originally attached to Love's Martyr. Perhaps Emerson's words on Shakespeare's poem, as well represents its sphinx-character even to the most capable critics, as any. They are as follow in his preface (pp. v, vi) to his charming Parnassus (1875)—

"Of Shakespeare what can we say, but that he is and remains an exceptional mind in the world; that a universal poetry began and ended with him; and that mankind have required the three hundred and ten years since his birth to familiarize themselves with his supreme genius? I should like to have the Academy of Letters propose a prize for an essay on Shakespeare's poem, Let the bird of loudest lay, and the Threnos with which it closes, the aim of the essay being to explain, by a historical research into the poetic myths and tendencies of the age in which it was written, the frame and allusions of the poem. I have not seen Chester's Love's Martyr, and "the Additional Poems" (1601), in which it appeared. Perhaps that book will suggest all the explanation this poem requires. To unassisted readers, it would appear to be a lament on the death of a poet,

* In a small prose book by THOMAS DEKKER, of which I know no other exemplar than my own (unfortunately not perfect) — the "Prayers" that compose it are given respectively to the 'Dove,' the 'Eagle,' the 'Pellican,' and the 'Phœnix.'" This unique little volume is dated 1609. Anything richer spiritually or more exquisite and finely quaint in its style, of the kind, I do not know. His preliminary description of the four birds is exceedingly well-done, and those of the 'Dove' and 'Phœnix' vividly set forth what the 'Phœnix' and 'Turtle Dove' of Love's Martyr are — only the love and aspiration are heavenward. Does any one know of another copy of this book? I should rejoice to hear of it.

† The late Mr. Richard Simpson had doubtless studied Chester critically; but he gave no inkling of his interpretation beyond announcing through the New Shakespeare Society that he would connect Love's Martyr with Cymbeline. I fear this must have proven another of his 'School of Shakespeare' discoveries. I have looked in vain in Cymbeline for anything save the slightest verbal illustrations of Love's Martyr. None the less do I regret that Mr. Simpson was not spared to give us his view of Love's Martyr, &c.

and of his poetic mistress. But the poem is so quaint, and charming in diction, tone, and allusions, and in its perfect metre and harmony, that I would gladly have the fullest illustration yet attainable. I consider this piece a good example of the rule, that there is a poetry for bards proper, as well as a poetry for the world of readers. This poem, if published for the first time, and without a known author's name, would find no general reception. Only the poets would save it."

P perchance there is truth in the close of this penetrative bit of criticism; but to myself the 'Phoenix and Turtle' has universal elements in it at once of thinking, emotion and form. Its very concinnity and restraint, e.g.—compared with the fecundity of Venus and Adonis and Lucrece—differentiate it from all other of Shakespeare's writings. I discern a sense of personal heart-ache and loss in these sifted and attuned stanzas, unutterably precious.

(d) WHAT IS THE MESSAGE OR motif OF THESE POEMS? I recall that the original title-page informs us that in Love's Martyr, or Rosalins Complaint, we have poems "Allegorically shadowing the truth of Loue." I cannot take less out of this than that the author believed he was celebrating a 'true love.' More than that, I cannot explain away the so prominently-given chief title, of Love's Martyr, or the subtitle, Rosalin's Complaint; which so manifestly folds within it Elizabeth, as the 'Tudor Rose (just as Rosalind in As You Like It, is called 'my sweet Rose, my dear Rose,' act i, sc. 2). To me all this means a 'true love' that 'ran not smooth,' that was defeated or never completed, and that led to such anguish as only the awful word 'martyr' could express. With queen Elizabeth, then, as the 'Phoenix,' and as the 'Rosalin' whose 'Complaint' the poems encompass, and Essex as the 'Turtle Dove,' it seems to me unmistakable that ROBERT CHESTER, as a follower not to say partizan of Essex, designed his Love's Martyr as his message on the consummation of the tragedy of his beheading. That there is nothing beyond the insinuated martyrdom of the title on the scarcely less wrong than blunder of Elizabeth—the execution of Essex—is to be explained by (1) That the words ‘long expected labour’ in the Epistle-dedicatory, intimate that the poems had been composed, substantially, some years before, probably in 1599, when Essex was on his memorable errand to Ireland; (2) That Elizabeth was still alive—and a terrible old lioness still when her pride was touched. The fact that Elizabeth was living when Love’s Martyr was published fills me indeed with astonishment at the author’s audacity in so publishing. This, however, is mitigated by these considerations (a) That throughout Love’s Martyr there is abundant titillation of her well-known vanity in compliments that ‘sweet fifteen’ only might have looked for; (b) That if we had access to the full data it seems manifest that they would show that somehow or other Chester had intimate, almost confidential, knowledge of Elizabeth’s feeling for Essex. Sir John Salisburie, as being ‘Esquier of the body to the Queenes most excellent majesty,’ could tell him much if he, personally, had not access. (c) That in her unlifted melancholy over the death of her favorite, the might-have-been came back upon her with sovran potency and accusation, and perchance imparted a strange satisfaction to her to have it re-called by a mutual friend; much as her Biographers have remarked, she chose to simulate quarrels with Essex, that she might have the pleasure of hearing him defend himself. Throughout Chester fulfilled his word in “The Authors request to the Phœnix” (p. 5), [I] “Endeured haue to pleafe in praifing thee.”* Even in “Sorowes Ioy” on her death, there seems to me a hint at the martyrdom, e.g.:

“ That Pellican who for her peoples good
Shirkt not to spill (alas) her owne deare blood:
That maid, that Pellican.”†

* See Postscript E, for an incident in Elizabeth’s life that vivifies one of Chester’s compliments to her.

† See further quotations in Postscript D.

In the Notes and Illustrations I bring out indubitable allusions that bear us back to Elizabeth's girl-hood, when she was 'suspect' and watched and plotted against by her sister, 'Bloody Mary' (alas! for epithet so tremendous associated with name so holy and tender!)—bear us back to her radiant prime when her marriage was the national hope and prayer—bear us back emphatically, to her first flush of captivation by the glowing eyes and eloquent tongue of Essex; and so onward. That Elizabeth was 'led captive,' there are a hundred proofs. Take one in a bit of a letter of Anthony Bagot to his father in May 1587—"When she [the queen] is abroad, nobody near her but my L. of Essex; and at night, my Lord is at cards, or one game or another with her that he cometh not to his own lodgings till birds sing in the morning."* I find here the motif of the poems. Chester interprets with subtlety and power the real 'passion' of Elizabeth for Essex—the actual feeling on her part, that if 'I dare' might wait on 'I would' she should have lifted him to her throne. Our Poet puts himself in her place, and with a boldness incomparable utters out the popular impression that Elizabeth did 'love' Essex. Hence—as I think—those stings of pain, throbs of remorse, cries of self-reproach, 'feeling after' died-out emotion and rapture, that in most unexpected places come out and lay bare that proud, strong, prodigious heart as none else has ever done. I am in the dark as to Robert Chester's relation to Elizabeth; but it is in broad-breaking light that he pierces to the core, while in simple-seeming and even 'skillless' phrase, he tells us in these strange discoursings between 'Nature' and the 'Phoenix' the 'truth of Loue.' This is 'allegorically' done—his phrase is 'allegorically shadowing'—but beneath the allegory is solid fact.

I care not to go searching for 'scandals against Elizabeth.' The hate of the Jesuits probably manufactured most of them. But I do not see how any one can study the Life and Letters of Robert Devereux, Earl of Essex, as told by Captain Devereux, without having it immovably established to him, that to the close Elizabeth had a deep passion of love for him — thwarted earlier by her sense that it would not do for ‘Queen’ to marry ‘Subject,’ and later by his capricious marriage to the widow of Sidney, but never extirpated and destined to a weary ‘martyrdom’ of resurrection when the decollated body lay in its bloody grave. Except the love-tragedy of Stella and Sidney,* I know nothing more heart-shatteringly tragic — for pathetic is too weak a word — than the ‘great Queen’s’ death-cushion moanings and mutterings over her dead Essex. I, for one, believe in that story of ‘the ring’ as JOHN WEBSTER has put it:

* Lives and Letters of the Earls of Essex, as before, vol. i, p. 186.

———— “let me die
 In the distraction of that worthy princefs
 Who loathèd food, and sleep, and ceremony,
 For thought of louing that braue gentleman
 She would fain haue fau’d, had not a false conveyance
 Expressed him stubborn-hearted : let me sink
 Where neither man nor memory may e’er find me.”†

That Webster did not thus introduce the ‘ring’ at random seems certain. A hitherto overlooked little book supplies a self-authenticating record of it, as well as other glimpses of Elizabeth that strikingly illustrate Love’s Martyr. The title-page is as follows — Historical Memoirs on the reigns of Queen Elizabeth and King James, 1658 (12mo).‡ The ‘ring’ story and related reflections thus run :

* Poems of Sir Philip Sidney in Fuller Worthies’ Library, and in Chatto and Windus’s Early English Poets — with Memorial-Introduction, Essay, &c.

† The Devil’s Law Case, act iii, sc. 3, Dyce’s Webster, p. 128, 1 vol., 8vo, 1857.

‡ I am indebted to Dr. Brinsley Nicholson for supra. Earlier reference is made (as in Love’s Martyr) to Elizabeth’s poetical gift, e.g., “professing herself in public a Muse, then thought something too Theatrical for a virgine Prince” (p. 61). Her prominent part in “the gayeties” of the Court is contrasted with its ceasing after the death of Essex (p. 70). There are also several other passages which speak of her affection for Essex. The introductory heading is “Traditional Memoirs,” &c

“But the Lady of Nottingham coming to her death-bed and finding by the daily sorrow the Queene expressed by the losse of Essex, her self a principall agent in his destruction could not be at rest till she had discovered all, and humbly implored mercy from God and forgivenessse from her earthly Sovereigne: who did not only refuse to give it, but having shook her as she lay in her bed, sent her accompanied with most fearfull curses to a higher Tribunal. Not long after the Queenes waknesse did appeare mortall, hastened by the wishes of many [Cecil and his circle?] that could not in reason expect pardon for a fault they found she had condemned so severely in her selfe as to take comfort in nothing after * * * But upon all occasions of signing Pardons would upbraid the movers for them with the hasty anticipation of that brave man’s end, not to be expiated to the Nations losse by any future endeavours” (p. 95) * * * “[It were] no great hyperbole to affirm the Queene did not only bury Affection but her Power in the Tombe of Essex” (p. 97) * * * * * “For after the blow was given, the Queene presaging by a multitude of tears shed for him, the great drouth was likely to appear in the eyes of her subjects, when the hand that signed the warrant was cut off, fell into a deep Melancholy wherein she died not long after.”*

Each Reader of Love’s Martyr will discover for himself its allusions to the real under the avowedly ‘allegorical.’ I would note, in rapidly glancing through the book a few details that are certainly unmistakable, e.g.:

“Bellona rau’d at Lordlike cowardice” (p. 9).

One has but to read Essex’s ‘Letters,’ and to master the facts about COBHAM and other ‘coward’ lords in relation to Essex’s ‘Expeditions,’ to perceive the blow of this line

Of the ‘Phoenix’ we have this:—

“One rare rich Phoenix of exceeding beautie,
 One none-like Lillie in the earth I placed;
 One faire Helena, to whom men owe dutie:
 One countrey with a milke-white Doue I graced:
 One and none fuch, since the wide world was found
 Hath euer Nature placed on the ground” (p. 10).

.....
 Like to a light bright Angel in her gate:
 For why no creature on the earth but she,
 Is like an Angell, Angell let her be” (p. 14).

The former is the universal language of the period, e.g., Raleigh in his Cynthia sings of her as a ‘milk-white Dove’;

* See Postscript F, for a very striking contemporary letter in the Advocates Library, Edinburgh, on the death-bed, &c., of Elizabeth.

the latter was Essex's favourite word. Thus in acknowledging the queen's gift of her portrait in a ring, he writes :

"Most dear Lady,—For your Maj. high and precious favors, namely, for sending this worthy knight to deliuer your blessing to this fleet and army, but aboue all other for your Maj. bestowing on me that fair angel which you sent to guard me; for these, I say, I neither can write words to express my humble thankfulness, nor perform service fit to acknowledge such duty as for these I owe" (Lives of the Earls of Essex, as before, vol. i, p. 414).

Here is the 'Queen,' and the proud sovereign of England, speaking, not the mere 'Phœnix':

"Honor that Isle that is my sure defence" (p. 33, st. 1, l. 7).

Into whose mouth but Elizabeth's could ever such an exclamation have been placed? Then, to render the 'Isle' certain as not some foreign 'Paphos Isle,' but one near England, there succeeds an enumeration and celebration of England's chief cities and sights.

In accord with this, the 'nine (female) Worthies' (pp. 38-40) are appropriate as connected with the 'Phœnix = Queen Elizabeth; while with equal appropriateness in such case, but only in such case, 'Windsor Castle' and the Knights of the Garter, connect the Queen and King Arthur, and also render the Arthur part of Love's Martyr not wholly out of place.

Next, here is self-evidently an Elizabethan fact — danger of no heir to the throne of England if the 'Phœnix' married not :

"This Phœnix I do feare me will decay,
And from her ashes neuer will arife
An other Bird her wings for to display,
And her rich beauty for to equalize:
The Arabian fiers are too dull and bafe,
To make another spring within her place" (p. 15).

.....

Then thus Ioue spake, tis pittie she should die,
And leaue no ofspring for her Progenie" (p. 17).

That the 'Phœnix' was Queen of Britain is implied in this stanza :

“Nature go lie thee, get thee Phœbus chaire,
 Cut through the skie, and leaue Arabia,
 Leaue that il working peace of fruitlesse ayre,
 Leaue me the plaines of white Brytania,
 These countries haue no fire to raise that flame,
 That to this Phœnix bird can yeeld a name” (p. 17).

That the “delightfome Paphos Ile” (p. 17 and onward) was Ireland—whither Essex had gone—let the reader verify by studying its characteristics under all its mythical and impossible assemblage of productions. Specifically it is to be marked and re-marked that from where the ‘Phœnix’ is, i.e., England (p. 32), ‘Paphos ile’ is to be visited, because there the ‘Turtle Doue’ was to be found. The ‘course’ of the chariot-borne pair (‘Nature’ and the ‘Phœnix’), was to be through ‘the blue Azure skie,’ as thus :

————— “ we will ride
 Ouer the Semi-circle of Europa,
 And bend our course where we will see the Tide,
 That partes the Continent of Affrica,
 Where the great Cham gouernes Tartaria :
 And when the starrie Curtaine vales the night,
 In Paphos sacred Ile we meane to light.”* (p. 32, st. 4.)

This might very well have taken us to some ideal island of love, out of space and time, or at least to now much spoken of Cyprus with its renowned love-shrine of Paphos. But the real in the Poet’s thought effaces the ideal ; for no Mediterranean or Aegean is passed, and no ‘vision’ of the

* Probably Chester drew his designation of ‘Paphos Ile’ from his friend Marston’s Metamorphosis of Pigmaliions Image (1598) ; in the ‘Argument’ to which he says —“After Pigmalion (beeing in Cyprus) begat a sonne of her [Venus] which was called Paphos ; whereupon that iland Cyprus, in honor of Venus, was after, and is now, called by the inhabitants, Paphos.” So to at the close of the poem itself

“ Paphos was got ; of whom in after age
 Cyprus was Paphos call’d, and evermore
 Those ilanders do Venus name adore.”

Marston is mistaken — for ‘Paphos’ does not appear ever to have been a name of the entire island of Cyprus — but he was sufficient authority for Chester’s purpose. Marston, be it noted, contributed to the ‘additional poems.’

countries between London and it, is given. Contrariwise—the ‘chief cities’ of England are successively described, and just after leaving London ‘Paphos Ile’ is reached. As being Ireland, all this is harmonized, but not otherwise. And as being Ireland, Essex, and Essex alone, and Essex in every detail—answers. It may be permitted me to ask the critical weighing of this by my fellow-students of Shakespeare.* Note also Elizabeth’s girlhood and its perils by suspicion and malice (pp. 22, 24, 26); and later her mature age—“Ile drowne my felfe in ripeneffe of my Yeares” (p. 29), and again :

Nature. “ Raile not gainst Fortunes faced Deitie,
 In youth thy vertuous patience she hath tyred,
 From this bafe earth thee’le lift thee vp on hie,
 Where in Contents rich Chariot thou shalt ride,
 And neuer with Impatienee to abide:
Fortune will glorie in thy great renowne,
 And on thy feathered head will fet a crowne” (p. 31).

i.e., the ‘crown’ of marriage or ‘heauenly crown’ (cf. l. 3, and ll. 4–5.) Then let the reader ‘inwardly digest’ the description of the ‘Turtle Dove’ by the ‘Phoenix’ on arrival in Ireland (‘Paphos Isle’):

Phoenix. “ But what sad-mournefull drooping foule is this,
 Within whose watry eyes fits Difcontent,
 Whose snail-pac’d gate tels something is amiffe:
 From whom is banisht sporting Meriment:
 Whose feathers mowt off, falling as he goes,
 The perfect picture of hart pining woes?

Nature. This is the carefull bird the Turtle Doue,
 Whose heauy croking note doth shew his griefe,
 And thus he wanders feeking of his loue,
 Refusing all things that may yeeld reliefe:
 All motions of good turnes, all Mirth and Ioy,
 Are bad, fled, gone, and falne into decay.

* No doubt Chester is anything but skilful in expressing himself and ceteris paribus, I should have explained the absence of the ‘vision’ of intervening countries thereby. But as it is design not ‘skill-less’-ness is the explanation. At p. 17, st. 3, the Poet intermixes the mythical seat of the ‘Phoenix’ (Arabia) with that of his ‘Phoenix’; and so elsewhere. In st. 4, l. 6, ‘a second Phoenix loue’ doubtless points back to the mythical ‘Phoenix’ as = first.

- Phœnix. Is this the true example of the Heart ?
 Is this the Tutor of faire Constancy ?
 Is this Loues treasure, and Loues pining smart ?
 Is this the substance of all honesty ?
 And comes he thus attir'd, alas poore foule,
 That Definies foule wrath should thee controule.
- See Nourse, he stares and lookes me in the face,
 And now he mournes, worfe then he did before,
 He hath forgot his dull slow heavy pace,
 But with swift gate he eyes vs more and more:
 O thall I welcome him, and let me borrow
 Some of his griefe to mingle with my sorrow.
- Nature. Farwell faire bird, Ile leaue you both alone,
 This is the Doue you long'd fo much to see,
 And this will proue companion of your moue,
 An Vmpire of all true humility:
 Then note my Phœnix, what there may ensue,
 And fo I kisse my bird. Adue, Adue.
- Phœnix. Mother farewell; and now within his eyes,
 Sits sorrow clothed in a fea of teares,
 And more and more the billowes do arise:
 Pale Griefe halfe pin'd vpon his brow appeares,
 His feathers fade away, and make him looke,
 As if his name were writ in Deaths pale booke." (pp. 131-2.)

Finally, the words in the 1601 title-page 'constant fate' have no sense if not = constancy, i.e., to be 'constant,' with martyrdom as the penalty for breaking the fate or decree.

The letters of Essex to Elizabeth are a commentary on the whole of this. One of the many remarkable, very remarkable letters of Essex to Elizabeth, preserved among the Hulton MSS., may be accepted as a type of the others. It is suggestive of a great deal.

"Madam.—The delights of the place cannot make me unmindful of one in whose sweet company I have joyed as much as the happiest man doth in his highest contentment; and if my horse could run as fast as my thoughts do fly, I would as often make mine eyes rich in beholding the treasure of my love, as my desires do triumph when I seem to myself in a strong imagination to conquer your resisting will. Noble and dear lady, though I be absent, let me in your favour be second unto none; and when I am at home, if I have no right to dwell chief in so excellent a place, yet will I usurp upon all the world. And so making myself as humble to do you service, as in my love I am ambitious, I wish your Majesty all your happy desires. Croydon, this Tuesday, going to be mad and make my horse tame. Of all men the most devoted to your service.

[1593.]

R. Essex.*

Love's Martyr throughout, as between the 'Phoenix' and 'Turtle Dove,' makes it a mutual contest, of subduing the 'Will,' one of the other. So is it in Elizabeth's letters to Essex, and her sayings of him earlier and later.

That the 'passion' and 'truth of love' were reciprocal; that Essex apart from ambition, felt that if he was worthy of Elizabeth, Elizabeth was worthy of him; I cannot for a moment doubt. There are words—glowing and alive—intensities of appeal, wistfulness of longing and odd capriciousnesses of jealousy that only reality can explain. Let the Reader turn to his Letters to Elizabeth and of Elizabeth to him; let him even look within the mad out-break of his rush over from Ireland and straight going into 'the presence,' and he will be satisfied that a personal experience lay behind all that, to which nothing short of 'truth of love' in the Past, gives congruity or meaning.† Let his Poems also speak for him. Curiously enough in his Loyal Appeal in Courtesy, we have the line

"O let no Phoenix look vpon a Crowe."

[Anjou?]

and these exclamations follow:—

"Woe to the world the sonne is in a cloude
And darkfome mifts doth ouerrunne the day
In hope, Concept is not content allow'd,
Fauour must dye & Fancye weare away:
Oh Heauens what Hell! The bands of Loue are broken
Nor must a thought of such a thing be spoken.

* Lives, as before, vol. i, p. 292.

† In the volume of 1658 (already quoted from) it is expressly stated that Cecil had laid a trap for Essex; caused him to get news of the Queen's illness and even death, and embargoed all other vessels, hoping that Essex would join with Tyrone and others, and cross to England at the head of his army. His sudden appearance with but few followers disconcerted Cecil's plot, who had troops ready to oppose him. There seems no reason to doubt the authenticity and good faith of the volume of 1658.

Mars must become a coward in his mynde
 While Vulcan standes to prate of Venus toyces :
 Beautie must seeme to go against her kinde
 In crossing Nature in her sweetest ioyes.
 But ah no more, it is too much to thinke
 So pure a mouth should puddle-watters drinke !

But since the world is at this woefull paffe,
 Let Loue's submission Honour's wrath appease :
 Let not an Horse be matched with an Ass,
 Nor hateful tongue an happie hart disease :
 So shall the world commend a sweet conceipt
 And humble Fayth on heavenly Honour waite."

I suppose that was for Anjou. Then "The Buzzcinge Bees' Complaint" will reward full thinking-out. It thus closes :

" Ffive years twice tould, wth promases perfum'd,
 My hope-stuffte heede was cast into a slumber ;
 Sweete dreams of golde ; on dreames I then presum'd
 And 'mongst the bees thought I was in the number."

"The False, Forgotten" is a wail of a bruised heart, e.g.

" Loue is dead and thou free,
 She doth lyue but dead to thee.
 When she lou'd thee best a whylle,
 See how styll she did delay thee :
 Vlying shewes for to beguylle
 Those vayne hopes w^{ch} haue betrayd y^e.
 Now thou see'st butt all too late
 Loue loues truth, w^{ch} women hate."

His 'Cantvs' is explicit enough, e.g.

" I loued her whom all the world admire,
 I was refus'de of her that can loue none :
 AND MY Vaine HOPES WHICH FAR TOO HIGH ASPIR'DE IS DEAD AND BURI'D AND FOR EUER GONE."*

By the necessities of semi-revelation, semi-concealment, there are things in Love's Martyr that might be brought up in objection to our interpretation ; but the lines, otherwise, are so deep and broad and sure that I cannot think it possible to erase them. Fact and fiction however are inter-blended, e.g., the ending of the poem-proper by the Author's evident wish, furtively to pay homage to James, introduces a disturbing element into our interpretation ; but this and other accidents cannot be permitted to affect the substance of the motif of these poems. The word 'allegorical' covers all such accidents.*

* I have collected the Poems of Essex in my Miscellanies of the Fuller Worthies' Library, vol. iv, pp. 430-450.

(e) WHAT IS THE RELATION BETWEEN THE 'NEW COMPOSITIONS' AND 'LOVE'S MARTYR'? In the original title-page is this explanation : " To these are added some new compositions, of severall moderne Writers whose names are subscribed to their severall workes, vpon the first subiect: viz. the Phanix and Turtle." This makes it plain that these 'new compositions' of those 'moderne Writers' in 1601, were intended to celebrate precisely what Love's Martyr celebrated. So that granted, my premiss, viz., that Love's Martyr had the motif and message for which I have argued, we have SHAKESPEARE, BEN JONSON, GEORGE CHAPMAN, JOHN MARSTON and others (anonymous), siding (so-to-say) with Robert Chester in doing honour to Essex. I do not greatly concern myself with any in this matter save one — SHAKESPEARE. Now, one may be sure in one's own mind of his admiration, in common with the Nation, for Essex, though the proofs be comparatively slight in themselves. But with this 'new composition' super-added, the conviction deepens. Omitting the 'Phœnix and Turtle' for the moment, there are three things that favour the view that Shakespeare sympathized with Essex.

1. There is the great praise in the Chorus of Henry V:

* Were it not that Love's Martyr was certainly published in 1601 and left unchanged (except by withdrawal of preliminary pages) one might have deemed p. 37, st. 2, a later insertion concerning James. As it is, it is impossible. The explanation is, that James was for long set down as Elizabeth's heir-presumptive.

“ But now behold,
 In the quick Forge and working-houfe of Thought,
 How London doth powre out her Citizens,
 The Maior and all his Brethren in best fort,
 Like to the Senatours of th’ antique Rome,
 With the Plebeians swarming at their heeles,
 Goe forth and fetch their Conqu’ring Cæfar in :
 As by a lower, but by louing likelyhood,
 Were now the Generall of our gracious Empreffe,
 As in good time he may, from Ireland comming,
 Bringing Rebellion broached on his Sword :
 How many would the peacefull Citie quit,
 To welcome him ?” (Act v, sc. 1 (Chorus).

This splendid tribute is so brought in by head and shoulders on very purpose to win hearts for Essex, that it is scarcely possible to doubt that Shakespeare was for him pronouncedly, maugre the evil-speaking and jealousies and enmities of the day in ‘high places.’ This is one of those asides that take new significance from the circumstances under which it was introduced. It may, or may not, have been an after-thought and insertion. In either case its significance and declarativeness of opinion and sympathy is untouched.

2. The acting of Richard II, before Essex made his final wild and ill-advised attempt. There was probably in the minds of those who thus acted a Play so full of warning to princes who pushed their right to edge of wrong, suggestive bits in the Play that might be meant to be caught up. But there is no proof that Shakespeare himself was concerned in the coincidental playing, or that he knew what such playing was meant to precede. Neither do I think that Shakespeare would have countenanced Essex in so unwise an act, albeit I never can think it was born of disloyalty to his ‘great Queen.’ I do not, therefore, receive the playing of Richard II as proof that Shakespeare was a partizan of Essex’s. Yet is the thing noteworthy.

3. The silence of Shakespeare on the death of Elizabeth. Amid the abounding elegies and eulogies contemporaneous and later, you search in vain for anything by Shakespeare. Every one knows that he was reproached in print for his silence. I regard it as specially memorable. Inferentially I take it as his verdict for Essex. Perhaps equally worthy of note is his after-compliment to James; for he was the friend of Essex's friends. Southampton's close relations with Essex also furnished an element of alienation from Elizabeth to Shakespeare.

Any further evidence, even if it be slight, is important. And further evidence I find in the 'new composition' of the 'Phœnix and Turtle' contributed by Shakespeare to Love's Martyr. The fact of such a contribution by him is, in itself, noticeable. For while Ben Jonson and Chapman and others contemporary lavished their 'Commendatory Verses,' Shakespeare, with this solitary exception, wrote none as he sought none. This surely imparts special significance to the exception.

Internally, the 'Phœnix and Turtle' is on the same lines with Love's Martyr. To my mind there is pathos in the lament over the 'Tragique Scene.' Essex himself, as we have seen—and his Letters to Elizabeth that are still open to be read, have the same burden—had sung

" I am not living, though I feeme to go, Already buried in the graue of wo" (p. 133).

and earlier,

" Loue is dead,"

and in the Threnos, Shakespeare regards not the beheaded Essex only, but his 'Phœnix' too as dead :

" Truth may feeme, but cannot be,
Beautie bragge, but tis not she,
Truth and Beautie buried be.

To this vrne let those repaire,
That are either true or faire,
For thefe dead Birds, figh a prayer" (p. 184).

En passant 'Imogen' later is named 'the dead bird'
(Cymbeline.)

All this, be it noted, fits in with the 'allegorical shadowing' of Love's Martyr; for therein BOTH die. Thus, after the 'Turtle Dove' has craved "pardon for presumption's foule offence" (p. 133), and avowed his life-weariness much as Essex's letters to Elizabeth did, he is strengthened to endure and prepared for his own and her martyrdom (Love's Martyr), e.g.:

Phoenix. "Come poore lamenting foule, come sit by me,
We are all one, thy forrow shall be mine,
Fall thou a teare, and thou shalt plainly see,
Mine eyes shall anfwer teare for teare of thine:
Sigh thou, Ile sigh, and if thou give a grone,
I shall be dead in anfvering of thy mone" (p. 134).

After exactly such love-talk as we can imagine between Elizabeth and Essex, when after inevitable quarrelling there came as inevitable reconciliation (pp. 134-36), their twin-death—the death of "Truth and Beautie" (the 'dead Birds,' Phoenix and Turtle Dove, of Shakespeare) is set before us. We have, first, the relation:

Phoenix. "Then to yon next adioyning groue we'll flye,
And gather sweete wood for to make our flame,
And in a manner sacrificingly,
Burne both our bodies to reuiue one name:
And in all humbleneffe we will intreate
The hot earth-parching Sunne to lend his heate" (p. 136).

Then the tragedy itself, which I ask the reader to ponder (pp. 138-9). Both are 'dead' in the pathetic and suggestive close:

Phoenix. "O holy, sacred, and pure perfect fire,
More pure then that ore which faire Dido mones,
More sacred in my louing kind desire,
Then that which burnt old Ejōns aged bones,
Accept into your euer hallowed flame,
Two bodies, from the which may spring one name.

Turtle. O sweet perumed flame, made of those trees,
Vnder the which the Muses nine haue song
The praife of vertuous maids in misteries,
To whom the faire-fac'd Nymphes did often throng;
Accept my body as a Sacrifice
Into your flame, o, whom one name may rie.

Phœnix. O wilfulneffe, see how with smiling cheare,
 My poore deare hart hath slong himselfe to thrall,
 Looke what a mirthfull countenance he doth beare,
 Spreading his wings abroad, and ioyes withall:
 Learne thou corrupted world, learne, heare, and see,
 Friendships unspotted true sincerity.

I come sweet Turtle, and with my bright wings,
 I will embrace thy burnt bones as they lye,
 I hope of these another Creature springs,
 That shall possesse both our authority:
 I stay to long, ô take me to your glory,
 And thus I end the Turtle Doues true story" (pp. 138-9).

I ask further, that the 'Comment' of the 'Pellican' (pp. 139-41) be critically studied. Finally, I recall the title-page of the 'new compositions' thus: — Hereafter follow diuerse Poeticall Effaies on the former Subiect; viz: the Turtle and Phœnix." This explains how, in Shakespeare's 'Phœnix and Turtle' and 'Threnos,' both are dead ('dead Birds'), though Elizabeth was still living in her great anguish.

I ask special attention to this; for otherwise the close of his 'Phœnix and Turtle,' as not conformable to history, will perplex and be regarded as not pointing to Elizabeth and Essex. I must iterate and reiterate that (a) The 1601 title-page expressly states that the "new compositions" (and so Shakespeare's) were "upon the first subiect: viz., the Phœnix and Turtle," and again, were "diuerse Poeticall Effaies on the former Subiect; viz: the Turtle and Phœnix." (b) The story is 'allegorically' told, as a 'shadowing' of the 'truth of love'—a very different thing from bare historic data. (c) The title 'Love's Martyr' meant infinitely more than 'death' itself. To conform therefore to Love's Martyr and to fall in with the 'allegory,' Shakespeare, like Chester, represents BOTH as dead ('dead Birds'). There might indeed be policy and wariness alike in Chester and Shakespeare in such representation.

Let the reader take with him the golden key that by the 'Phœnix' Shakespeare intended Elizabeth, and by the 'Dove' Essex, and the 'Phœnix and Turtle,' hitherto regarded as a mere enigmatical epicedial lay — as already seen — will be recognized as of rarest interest. I cannot say that I see my way through it all — st. 5 (p. 182) I do not quite understand; but it is a mere accident of the poem. But I do see that Shakespeare went with Robert Chester in grief for Essex, and in sad-heartedness that the ‘truth of love’ had not been accomplished. Herein I find, likewise — I would re-impress — why it was that Shakespeare, though well-nigh stung to do it in print, wrote nothing on the death of Elizabeth.*

The other ‘new compositions’ are of unequal value. Our Notes and Illustrations invite attention to certain points in them. They all go to confirm our interpretation of the ‘allegory’ of the ‘Phœnix’ and the ‘Turtle Dove.’ As I read, all from p. 190 to the end belongs to Ben Jonson (spelled ‘Iohnson’ as he was himself wont in earlier years). I only add that Gifford, after his unhappy manner (with Cunningham following suit), has deplorably corrupted the text of these poems of Jonson — as I record in the Notes and Illustrations. Probably Jonson wrote also the ‘Chorus Vatum.’

(f) WAS THE 1611 ISSUE ONLY A NUMBER OF COPIES OF THE ORIGINAL OF 1601, LESS THE PRELIMINARY MATTER AND A NEW TITLE-PAGE? I answer — yes. The identity of the two books — as thus put — is certain. Not only do all the signatures correspond, but the mis-pagings, 5 for 11, 41 for 14, 59 for 63, are the same. Then, the spur of the L in Libanon, p. 10, l. 5 (=p. 18), is off in both; a broken O, p. 71, l. 3 from foot, is the same in both; a turned ‘e,’ spaces, dislocated letters, &c., are all the same. It is also to be specially observed that the 1601 title-page of the “new compositions” is retained in the 1611 copies. All (in our reproduction) preceding the title-page of 1611, belongs to the copies of 1601 alone. The new title-page misspells ‘Annals’ as ‘Anuals,’ which suggests that Chester did not get a proof—if indeed proofs were then given to Authors—albeit on the instant having occasion to turn to Bp. Ellicott's New Testament Commentary for English Readers (1878), I find in the first line of his lordship's Preface, this similar slip—"The present Commentary may in many respects" for, of course, 'many.' As elsewhere noticed, Chester omits his own name in the new title-page of 1611. In naming the book no longer Love's Martyr, seeing that Elizabeth and Essex were long dead, and a new sovereign—King James I—reigning, there was policy. There was policy too in describing the book as Annals of great Brittain; for in the Poems, Scotland is scarcely named, and 'great Brittain' might save any offence to the royal stickler for his authority and dignity. Besides, in 1601 the Arthur portion is an episode in the poem of Love's Martyr or Rosalins Complaint; but in 1611 the episode becomes (in the title-page) the main poem, albeit even then Love's Martyr's story is a part of the 'Annals.'

* See Postscript G.

(g) WHAT IS THE POETIC VALUE OF "LOVE'S MARTYR"? Speaking generally, I do not rate Robert Chester as a poet very high. The poem of Love's Martyr wants proportion in its parts. The opening has a certain brightness (pp. 1-6), and the brightness returns when the 'Annals' being ended the Poet resumes with this 'Note'—" & now, to where we left." The 'Annals' themselves are thinly done. With Arthur for main theme they look meagre and prosaic beside the old stories of the 'renowned Prince,' such as Mr. Furnivall has furnished us in his golden little book, and such as the 'Legends' of many Chronicles—verse and prose—furnish, and placed beside the purple splendour of our Laureate's celebration.* Sooth to say, his 'singing' of

* With reference to Chester's address "To the courteous Reader" my ever-obliging friend, Mr. Furnivall, has sent me a number of notes on the various Arthurian romances and MSS., and through M. Paulin Paris, further. I must content myself with a reference to the numerous Arthurian publications in

Flowers and Plants and Trees, Birds and Beasts and Fish, and precious Stones and Shells and Minerals grows wearisome; although there are bits of Folk-Lore and quaint myths and superstitions in wonderful fulness and variety. Whatever he felt inclined to write, or whatever came into his head, of which he could manufacture a few or even a couple of stanzas, is brought in by Chester. The book is, in fact, an omnium gatherum. It is just possible that this jungle of irrelevances was of design, that he might conceal in hidden brake (if I may so speak) the fair flowers and fragrances and tendernesses of the story he celebrates in Love's Martyr. I question if Elizabeth had chanced on the volume during the dim sad days that succeeded the death of Essex, that she would have persevered to read or to listen.

The poetry itself, is, as a rule, poor. There are almost innumerable instances of lines and phrases inserted, more to complete the rhythm and rhyme, than for reason's sake. For the same reason there are not a few forced, and I might almost say, unidiomatic constructions. Only "few and far between" have we aught of inspiration or of fine expression. All the more remarkable is it that Chester so dared to interpret the popular belief of what Essex was to Elizabeth.

But with every abatement I can promise a sympathetic reader that he will come, now and again, on "brave translunary things." Thus in the description of the Person of the 'Phoenix,' that is of Elizabeth, you have daintinesses that make you pause, e.g.:

Her Hair.

"When the leaft whiffling wind begins to fing,
And gently blowes her haire about her necke,

England and France. Suffice it that the most unlikely-looking, viz., the Greek, has been published by F. Michel in his Tristram (Pickering), albeit it refers, says M. Paulin Paris, not to Tristram, as he supposed, but to Guiron le Courtois; and there are other Greek Arthur celebrations. M. Paulin Paris, is amused with Chester's credulity, and writes—that it reminds him of a respected friend, the Marquis of——, who asked, "Can I doubt of the existence of Homer when I possess his bust and portrait?" See Hazlitt's Warton, s.n.

Like to a chime of bells it soft doth ring,
 And with the pretty noise the wind doth checke,
 Able to lull asleepe a pensive hart,
 That of the round worlds forrowes beares a part" (p. 10).

Eyes.

"Vnder this mirroure, are her princely eyes:
 Two Carbuncles, two rich imperiall lights;
 That ore the day and night do foueraignize,
 And their dimme tapers to their rest the frights:
 Her eyes excell the Moone and glorious Sonne,
 And when she riseth al their force is donne" (p. 11).

Cheekes.

"Her morning-coloured cheekes, in which is plac'd,
 A Lillie lying in a bed of Roses;
 This part about all other I haue grac'd,
 For in the blew veines you may reade sweet poesies:
 When she doth blush, the Heauens do wax red,
 When she lookes pale, that heauenly Front is dead" (Ibid.)

Chin.

"Her chinne a litle litle pretie thing
 In which the sweet carnatian Gelli-flower,
 Is round encompass't in a chriftall ring,
 And of that pretie Orbe doth beare a power:
 No storme of Enuie can this glorie touch,
 Though many should assay it ouermuch" (Ibid.)

Lips.

"Her lippes two rubie Gates from whence doth spring,
 Sweet honied dew by an intangled kisse,
 From forth these glories doth the Night-bird sing,
 A Nightingale that no right notes will misse:
 True learned Eloquence and Poetrie,
 Do come betwene these dores of excellencie" (Ibid.)

Hands.

"Her hands are fortunes palmes, where men may reade
 His first houres destiny, or weale or woe,
 When she this sky-like map abroad doth spreade,
 Like pilgrimes many to this Saint do go,
 And in her hand, white hand, they there do see
 Loue lying in a bed of yuorie" (p. 13).

Fingers.

"Her fingers long and small do grace her hand;
 For when she toucheth the sweete sounding Lute,

The wild vntamed beafts amaz'd do stand,
And carroll-chanting birds are fudden mute:
O fingers how you grace the filuer wires,
And in humanitie burne Venus fires!" (Ibid.)

Feet.

"And if by night ſhe walke, the Marigold,
That doth incloſe the glorie of her eye,
At her approach her beauty doth vnfold,
And ſpreads her ſelfe in all her royaltie,
Such vertue hath this Phœnix glaſſy ſhield,
That Flowers and Herbs at her faire fight do yeeld" (p. 14.)

There is occasionally a pleasant 'smoothneſſe' and harmony, as in the 'Phœnix' in her lament for her years ſo ſwiftly paſſing away without a mate, e.g.:

"What is my Beauty but a vading Flower?
Wherein men reade their deep-conceiued Thrall,
Alluring twentie Gallants in an hower,
To be as feruile vaffalls at my Call?
My Sunne-bred lookes their Senſes do exhall:
But (ô my grieſe) where my faire Eyes would loue,
Foule bleare-eyed Enuie doth my thoughts reprooue.

What is my Vertue but a Tablitorie:
Which if I did beſtow would more increaſe?
What is my Wit but an inhumane glorie:
That to my kind deare friends would proffer peace?
But O vaine Bird, give ore in ſilence, ceaſe:
Malice perchaunce doth hearken to thy words,
That cuts thy thread of Loue with twentie ſwords"

(pp. 25-6).

Equally flowing, and informed with a ſubdued paſſion is 'Nature's' remonſtrance :

"Is this the fumme and ſubſtance of thy woe?
Is this the Anker-hold vnto thy bote?
Is this thy Sea of Grieſe doth ouerflow?
Is this the Riuer ſets thy ſhip aſlote?
Is this the Leſſon thou haſt learn'd by rote?
And is this all? and is this plot of Ground
The ſubſtance of the Theame doth thee confound?" (p. 39).

There are alſo now terſe and now vivid things, e.g.:

Luft.

“ . . . Luft is such a hot inflamed thing
It gouerneth mans fenfes, rules a King ” (p. 45).

Cities.

“ Great peopled Cities, whose earth-gracing flow,
Time is asham'd to touch or ouerthrow ” (p. 33).

Polution.

“ Hells damned fent with this may not compare ” (p. 28),

Majesty.

“ Stand by faire Phoenix, spread thy Wings of Gold,
And daunt the face of Heauen with thine Eye ” (p. 27).

Cleansing.

“ . . . the white snow she shall excell in whiteneffe ” (p. 22).

White-lustre of neck.

“ . . . More glorious then the day with all his light ” (p. 12).

Lady's hand.

“ Then by the lawne-like Hand he tooke his louer ” (p. 51).

Troops.

“ His barbed Horses beat the yeelding ground,
And with their neighing terrifide their foe,
Proud of their riders, in whose harts are found
A promise to the Romanes ouerthrow.
The glistering shine of their well-fashion'd armour,
Tels all men here doth ride a Conquerour ” (p. 71-72).

Slaughter.

“ . . . all the greene graffe with their bloud they died ” (p. 75).

Arthur.

. “ they found King Arthurs skull,
Of such great largeneffe that betwixt his eyes,
His foreheads space a spanne broad was at full ” (p. 82).

Diamond.

“ The Diamond the worlds reflecting eye,
The Diamond the heauens bright shining starre,
The Diamond the earths most purest glorie:
And with the Diamond no stone can compare;
She teacheth men to speake, and men to loue,
In all her rarest vertues you will proue ” (p. 111).

The “ fire burns ” and flames o' times, e.g.:

True and false loue.

Turtle. "False loue puts on a Maske to shade her folly,
True loue goes naked wishing to be seene,
False loue will counterfeite perpetually,
True loue is Troths sweete emperizing Queene:
This is the difference, true Loue is a iewell,
False loue, hearts tyrant, inhumane, and cruell.

.

Phoenix. Thou shalt not be no more the Turtle-Doue,
Thou shalt no more go weeping al alone,
For thou shalt be my selfe, my perfect Loue,
Thy grieue is mine, thy sorrow is my mone,
Come kisse me sweetest sweete, O I do blesse
This gracious luckie Sun-shine happinesse" (p. 135).

The "Cantoës, alphabet-wise, to faire Phœnix made by the Paphian Dove" (pp. 142-48), and "Cantoës, verbally written" (pp. 149-75), fold within them real love-passion, though arbitrarily fettered in its expression. The more I study these the more I am impressed with Chester's evident knowledge of the secret history of Essex and Elizabeth. There are touches and allusions throughout that I can explain alone by interchange of conversation between the Poet and Essex, if, indeed, Elizabeth herself is to be excluded. The songs of "Nature" (pp. 86-7) and of "The Phœnix" (pp. 87-8) have the indefinable graciousness of Elizabethan poetry.

Besides all this, there are a number of current poetic phrases of the day, such as we would look for in such a poet. And while some of them — as pointed out in Notes and Illustrations — are used by Shakespeare, there is in my judgment some probability for thinking that these are not casual coincidences. He clearly alludes, in the lines "To the kind Reader" (p. 6), to the Rape of Lucrece; and doubtless he had also his Venus and Adonis, and not improbably saw and heard some of the plays. Not only would these things be natural in a young man of his birth, but I think I can detect in some of his lines a reflex or remembrance of the rhythm of Shakespeare's lines. There is, also, the unforgettable fact that Shakespeare, with special exceptionalness, gave his 'new compositions' to the book; also, that all the known contributors were Dramatists, and connected with the theatre.*

Altogether, few I hope will differ from me in affirming that it had been pity to have left Love's Martyr in the hazards of a couple of known exemplars (at most);—literary and historical loss longer to have allowed such a book to be inaccessible to Shakespearian students. I indulge the expectation that my interpretations of the 'truth of love' in the story of the 'Phœnix' and 'Turtle Dove' will take their place as a substantive addition to our critical literature, and give new interest and its true meaning to Shakespeare's incomparable 'Phœnix and Turtle.'

(h) WHO WAS 'TORQUATO CELIANO'? By accident or design Chester has here combined the Christian name of TASSO, and the surname of one of the minor poets of Italy of the same period. The following little book was probably known to Chester:

RIME
DI DIVERSI
CELEBRI POETI
Dell' età nostra:
novamente raccolte,
ē poste in luce
in bergamo, M. DLXXXVII.
Per Comino Ventura, e Compagni.

Pp. 95-148 consists of selections from the Rime of Livio Celiano; and then pp. 149-81 of similar selections from Torquato Tasso—the latter immediately following Celiano's. Whether this circumstance led our Poet to misremember the name of the "venerable Italian Poet"

* The conjunction of Ben Jonson and Marston in the book in 1601 is of special interest; for it was in the same year Jonson produced his Poetaster, attacking Dekker and Marston. See Ward's Eng. Drama, s.n. Later (1604-5), Jonson, Chapman, and Marston, were together in prison for Eastward Ho.

under whose mask—as a professed translator—he had elected to sing Love's Martyr, we can only guess. Certes the selections from Celiano, in the small volume of Geo. Battista Licinio, contain nothing whatever to justify Chester's description of Love's Martyr as a translation; as, indeed, the entire scope and substance of his poems forbid.

It is further to be remembered that, while in the 1601 title-page the Poems are designated translations, in the second title-page of 1611 this is withdrawn, and its native origin and growth affirmed, e.g., "The Annals [= Annals] of Great Brittain. Or A Most Excellent Monument, wherein may be seene all the antiquities of this Kingdome." Our late-given interpretation of the main subject of Love's Martyr and related Poems, reveals that the author's own consciousness of their 'burden' would make him very willing to be mistaken for a translator, rather than to be known as the actual composer of such 'perilous stuff.' Notwithstanding willing helpers at home and in Turin, Florence and Rome, I have not succeeded in obtaining, or so much as hearing of, an exemplar of any edition of the Poems of Livio Celiano.* Quadrio mentions also this: "Celiano (Livio) Rime. Pavia, 1592." I have no expectation that, were this other volume before me, any ground-work for Love's Martyr would be found in it. For Chester's poems are English throughout, with no touch of Italian grace or melody or such allusions as were inevitable in any actual translation of an Italian poet. In the British Museum copy of the selections of 1587, some former possessor informs us that Celiano was a native of Genoa. I cherish the pleasures of hope that some specialist may hereafter enable me to recover the Rime of 1592, and perchance other works of Livio Celiano. In such case I shall not fail to communicate the result. Meantime Dr. Todhunter of Dublin—author of Laurella and other Poems, having the genuine mint-mark — has most kindly favoured me with verse-renderings of some of Celiano's love-lays, as typical. The translations are as close to the original as for our object was deemed needful. I have now to give them, as follows :

* I owe special thanks to my friends E. W. Gosse, Esq.; W. M. Rossetti, Esq.; Dr. Steele, Rome; and Messrs. Dulau and Co., London. Mr. Gosse guided me to the Selections in the British Museum.

The Lovers Parallel.

This lovely new-born plant,
Whose grace doth so enchant,
Mimics that maiden fair
Whose virgin beauty is my life's despair.

It in earth's heavy crust
Its delicate roots has thrust;
Her's round its cisterns deep
Of my life-drained heart do cling and creep.

It a sweet river laves,
Her my full eyes' sad waves;
It joys in sun and air,
She in the warm sighs of my love's despair.

It hath its leaflets green
Her tresses fair, my Queen;
It hath its glowing flowers,
She her sweet face, like roses after showers.

But it with fruit is graced
Most pleasant to the taste;
Bitter is hers, heigho !
Gall of my life, since I desire it so !

The Envious Lover.

O many-coloured flowers !
Joy of the meadows; and ye verdurous leaves !
Ye whole beloved brood
Of Earth's great motherhood,
How do I envy your thrice-happy state !
When you the hot noontide grieves
The blessed dawn bedews your fainting bad;
And ah ! how happier far
Than me ye are,
When the beloved feet
Ye bend to kiss, of my Urania sweet;
And how in your frail form I long to be
When in her lap she takes you tenderly !

Introduction.

LXXI

The Lover's Complaint.

1.

Who would behold a park
Of trees, thick-planted, dark;
Let him come see my daily-piercéd heart,
Thick full of arrows, full of cruel smart;
Thus Love hath shewn his art!

2.

Who would behold a sea
Of tears wept hopelessly;
Let him come see the wells of bitter brine
Which night and day I weep from out my eyne:
Thus Love's poor captives pine!

3.

Who would behold a pyre
Of hell's eternal fire;
Let him come see my bosom, full of flame,
Tormented with love's craving and love's shame:
Thus Love doth write his name!

4.

And she desires to know
The cause of all this woe —
Why Love hath made of me park, sea, and hell,
Let him know this my tigress, loved too well,
So fair, but ah! so fell!

The Lover's Plea.

1.

If I might pleasure thee
By crying: "Woe is me!"
"Woe's me! woe's me!" a thousand times I'd scream,
So I might compass all my blissful dream!

2.

Or if by sighing deep
Thy favour I could keep,
If that would win thy pity for my plight,
Sweet heavens! I'd sigh all day and sigh all night!

3.

Or if when I should cry
"Oh help me, sweet, I die!"
Thy comfortable presence I might have,
How oft I'd pray thee lift me from the grave!"

4.

Alas ! I still may sigh,
 "Woe's me !" for ever cry,
 And crave thy help in my despairful state;
 All will not serve to change my cruel fate !

It only remains to state that, throughout, my anxious aim has been to reproduce the book in absolute fidelity to the original. Below, I record certain errors of the original and other minor points.* I would, in conclusion, express my very cordial sense of obligation to the various friends who have aided me in my labour. I have to add to the names that appear in their places, that of the Rev. W. E. BUCKLEY, M.A., of Middleton Cheney, for excellent aid in tracing Chester's classical and other quotations; but I wish emphatically to reiterate my gratitude to Dr. BRINSLEY NICHOLSON for his sustained and minute carefulness of reading after and with me, and giving me the benefit of his ripe acquaintance with Elizabethan-Jacobean literature. I send forth the book, especially my Introduction and Notes and Illustrations, with less hesitancy, that he has read the whole, and approved, if not in every detail, yet substantially. I have to thank my friend Professor DOWDEN for several suggestions that have been utilized.

And so I invite thee, 'gentle Reader,' to the thoughtful perusal of this ancient book, in the light and shadow of my interpretation of its 'shadowing the truth of love,'—viz., as telling the story of Elizabeth and Essex, with Shakespeare's version as well. I regard it as no common honour to address so 'fit audience.' I confidently count on every genuine fellow-student of Shakespeare receiving generously my endeavour and weighing text and notes together. HENRY ELLISON — subtle and vivid Singer of our generation, and destined to be more amply recognized a century hence — may close these introductory words :

" Oh turn unto the days of yore,
 When Faith her martyr-sons could name;
 And Liberty's untainted lore,
 From heart to heart, passed as a flame.

* See Postscript II.

Oh turn unto the days when Faith
 Could build cathedral piles thro' love;
And hosts therein, as with one breath,
 Their true heart-offering sent above !
Oh turn unto the days of old,
 When unreprieved all, and free,
Old songs were sung, old tales were told,
 And Hall and Bower rang to their glee.
Turn ye unto the times I say,
 When noble thoughts were welcome more
To English ears, than at this day
 Vile clinking gold, by knaves told o'er !
Oh turn ye to the household laws,
 The fireside laws of Peace and Love;
Where Wisdom feeds her little ones,
 And fashions them for Him above !
Oh turn unto our Shakespeare's page,
 And read of Harry's chivalry;
Of gallant deeds, which are a gage
 For like unto Posterity.
Oh then shall Freedom on Time's lyre
 Strike with a willing hand the strain
Of olden days; and Hampden's fire,
 And Milton's tongue, be heard again !
Then Faith shall have her martyr-names,
 Tho' not fire-tested be their worth,
And patient Charity, who tames
 Old hatreds, give to Love new birth !
Then Freedom's bright electric chain
 Shall stretch o'er hamlet, town, and tower;
And good old songs be heard again
 In knightly hall, in cot, and bower !
Then too my Fatherland, thy fame
 With rainbow-breadth once more shall rise;
Scattering the storms thro' which it came,
 Like dawn unto long watcher's eyes !
And thus, when thou must sink again
 Within thine own eternal Sea;
The guardian-angels still their strain
 Shall sing, and hail thee, 'bless'd and free.'*

ALEXANDER B. GROSART.

St. George's Vestry, Blackburn, Lancashire.
August, 1878.

* Madmoments, vol. i, pp. 99-100, 'On hearing an old-time song.'

POSTSCRIPT.

A. Page viii.

Epistle-dedicatory of The Christian Exercise of Fasting, Private and Publike &c. 1596.

“To the right worshipfull and his very Christian good friend, master Robert Chester, Esquier &c. mercie and peace in Iesvs Christ.

“I must look for many aduersaries, for the greatest part hath euer declined from pietie to superstition and prophanenes. Therefore, (right worshipfull) I come vnto you for protection of Gods trueth: being the more bolde to aske this fauor, because I am so well assured of your loue thereunto, and full resolution to defend the same with al your might during life. Againe, I haue nowe for many yeares knowne your Christian loue towards me for the trulhis sake. I desire to testifie my hearts affection towards you in the best manner that I can. The most blessed spirit of Iesus Christ guide and gouerne your spirit, keepe and comfort you and all yours. Februarie 12. 1596.

“Yours assuredly euer to vse in Iesus Christ during life. Henry Holland.”

Judging from this Epistle one must conclude that Chester was of the Puritan side as against the Papal. Essex was avowedly with the Puritans.

B. Page ix.

Abstract of Sir Robert Chester's Will, made by Dr. Joseph Lemuel Chester, London.

“I, Robert Chester, of Royston, in the county of Herts, Knight”—dated 3 May 1638—to be buried at Royston, next the body of my sister Mrs. Mary Thornburgh—to my wife all my plate, jewels, household stuff, goods, chattels, &c., in my mansion house called Cockenhatch and in and upon my lands in Barkway and elsewhere in co. Herts.—my said wife to provide for the weekly distribution forever of 16^d worth of bread to the poor of Barkway and 8^d worth to the poor of the hamlet of Northampsted in Barkway aforesaid—to my son Robert Chester, Doctor of Divinity £100., with which to educate my godson Robert Chester son of Henry Chester till he reach the age of fifteen, and then £100. more to bind him apprentice or make him a scholar—to my said godson Robert Chester £300. when 24 years of age—to my said son Henry a Mourning cloak, and to his wife £10. for mourning—to my son Granado Chester, Doctor of Divinity £100.—to my son Robert Chester D.D. and his wife each £10 for mourning, and to his son Robert my godson £100.—to my brother in law Mr. John Stone a mourning gown—to my son Edward Chester a gown, my horse, and my seal ring with arms—to my brother in law Mr. Edward Capon a cloak—to my son in law Sir Thomas Nightingale Baronet, a cloak—to my son in law Edward Ratcliffe Esquire, a cloak, and to my daughter his wife £20. for mourning and a ring—to my daughter Theodosea Nightingale widow £20. for mourning and a ring—to my son in law Samuel Hinton, D^r of the Civil Law a gown. And to my daughter his wife £20 for mourning and a ring, and to their daughter Anne Hinton £20. when 18 years of age—to my son in law John Piggott Esq. and my daughter his wife, mourning—to each of my grandchildren a ring of the value of 20 shillings, with this posy, “Christus unica salus”—to my kinsman Thomas Smith, Gent. a cloak—to the poor of Royston £5.—to the poor of Barkway and Northampsted £5.—to my cousin Magdalen Deane alias Addams 40 shillings a year for life, and to her daughter Anne, my cousin, wife of [blank] Tymberell, 20 shillings—to my nephew Henry Thornburgh £20. and mourning, and to each of his children £5.—to Mr. More, vicar of Royston, 20 shillings and a gown—to my godson Chester Greene 20 shillings—to Dr. Smith, vicar of Barkway, 20 shillings—all residue of personalty to my son Edward Chester, Esquire, whom I appoint my sole executor.

Codicil, dated 16 March 1639/40—to my said sons Granado Chester, D.D., and Robert Chester, D.D., £300. which they shall dispose for the benefit of my son Henry—to my said son Henry an annuity of £20 for life—All my messuages, lands, tenements, &c. to my said son Edward for life, with remainder to his son John Chester and his heirs male, remainder to the other sons of my said son Edward and their heirs male in succession, remainder to my said son Granado, &c., remainder to my said son Robert, &c., remainder to my said son Henry, &c.

Codicil, dated 7 April 1640—to Granado, second son of my said son Robert Chester, £50.—to Anne Hinton daughter of my said son Samuel Hinton £30. more when 18 years of age, or, if she die before, then same to her 2 younger sisters when 18.”

[The Will was proved in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, 3 February, 1640-1, by Edward Chester, son and executor.

Recorded in Book “Evelyn,” at folio 25.]

C. Page xxiii.

NICHOLS' PROGRESSES OF QUEEN ELIZABETH.

Were it not that the title-page of Chester's Love's Martyr (1601) designates it “the first Effiyy of a new Brytish Poet,” I should have felt disposed to assign a somewhat vivid piece in Nichols' Progresses, to Chester. It is entitled "The Principal Addresse in Nature of a New Year's Gifte; seeminge thereby the Author intended not to haue his Name knowne." It is taken from Cotton MSS., Vespasian, E 8. It is possible that, notwithstanding the words "the first Effay," this anonymous production really was Chester's, but not re-claimed by him later. Be this as it may, there are memorable and illustrative things in it. Thus, in relation to the prominent part 'Nature' fills in Love's Martyr, it is noteworthy that, similarly here, 'Nature' gives the "principal Addresse." Equally noteworthy, too, is it, that one of Chester's titles, Love's Martyr, occurs in this set of courtly poems, e.g.:

" Horace, honour'd August, the high't of names,
And yet his harte from Mecene never swervde;
Ovid helde trayne in Venus courte, and servde,
Cheife Secretarye to all those noble dames,
Martyres of love, who so broylde in his flames,
As bothe their trauth and penance well deservde
All in fine gold to have theyr image kervde."

More noteworthy still is the precise lamentation of Chester over Elizabeth's un-married state as in our closing quotation. Again, she is sung of as 'the Mayden Queen' with many lovers:

". . . . two Capetts, three Cezares affayde
And had repulle of the great Britton Mayde"

And:

" For we suppose thou hast forswore
To matche with man for evermore"

And:

" In woman's brest
Hath harbourd faye the lyon's harte"

And the gazer on her 'bewtye' has a

". ieble eye
That cannot view her stedfastly"

Broadly looked into, this "Principal Addresse in Nature," throughout, is quite in the same vein with Love's Martyr in its laudation of Elizabeth. A few quotations will doubtless be acceptable. This is the opening :

“ Gracious Princeffe, where Princes are in place
 To geve you gold, and plate, and perles of price,
 It seemeth this day, fave your royall advice,
 Paper presentes shoulde have but little grace;
 But fith the tyme fo aptly ferves the case,
 And as some thinke, you’re Highnes takes delighte
 Oft to perufe the ftyles of other men,
 And eft youre felf, with Ladye Sapphoe’s pen,
 In fweet meafures of poefye t’endite,
 The rare affectes of your heavenly fprighte;
 Well hopes my mufe to skape all manner blame,
 Uttering your honours to hyde her owner’s name.”

Avowedly the autlior regards Elizabeth as a pre-eminent theme, e.g., “ The Author choofinge by his Verfe to honour the Queens Majestie of England, Ladye Elizabeth, boldly preferreth his Choife and the Excellencye of the Subject before all others of any Poet auncient or moderne.” And again : “ That her Majestie furmoundeth all the Princesses of our tyme in Wifedome, Bewtye, & Magnanimitie : & ys a Thinge verye admirable in nature.” In accord with this are the several ‘addresses’ placed under the nine Muses. I must content myself with one further quotation : “ That her Majestie (two things except) hath all the Parts that justly make to be sayd a most happy Creature in this World.”

Parthe III. Erato.

“ Youthfull bewtye, in body well difpofed,
 Lovelye favoure, that age cannot deface;
 A noble harte where nature hath inclofed
 The fruitful feedes of all vertue and grace,
 Regall estate coucht in the treble crowne,
 Ancestrall all, by linage and by right,
 Stone of treasures, honor, and just renowne,
 In quiet raigne, a fure redouted might:
 Fast frindes, foes few or faint, or overthrowen,
 The stranger toonges, and the hartes of her owne,
 Breife bothe Nature and Nourriture have doone,
 With Fortune’s helpe, what in their cunning is —

To yelde the erthe, a Princelye Paragon.
 But had shee, oh! the two joys she doth misse,
 A Cæsar to her husband, a Kinge to her foone, [son]
 What lacks her Highnes then to all erthly blisse?

I add, that "Parthe VII, Euterpe," is a summary description of Elizabeth's person, of which that in Love's Martyr is simply an expansion.

D. Page xxxiv.

OTHER 'PHŒNIX' AND KINDRED REFERENCES.

In "Sorrowes Joy"—a somewhat interesting set of poems among the many that 'speeded' the departing Queen and welcomed the coming King, which Nichols also has reprinted—there are exactly such descriptions of Elizabeth as are found in Love's Martyr, with the 'Phœnix' perpetually recurring, e.g.

"Nature, Art, Fortune vexed out of measure,
 All firmly vowd to frame her equal neuer."

.....
 "Wild Savedges ador'd her living name
 The Earth's bright glorie and the Worlds cleare light."

.....
 "Such one Eliza was whilst shee did live :
 One Phœnix dead, another doth suruiue."

.....
 "Thus is a Phœnix of her ashes bred

.....
 "Since that to death is gone that sacred Deitie
 That Phœnix rare."

.....
 "A sweeter Muse neare breathed on these lands."

.....
 "Loue frowed cinnamon on Phœnix nest."

.....
 "Or when as Phœnix dies : Phœnix is dead,
 And fo a Phœnix followes in her stead ;
 Phœnix for Phœnix."

See our Introduction (p. xlvi) for one very remarkable parallel with Chester's title of Love's Martyr. With relation to the superlative flatteries of Elizabeth by Chester and contemporaries, Hume has observed—"Even when Elizabeth was an old woman, she allowed her courtiers to flatter her, with regard to her excellent beauties." Cf. Birch, vol. ii, pp. 442-43. When Elizabeth was nearly 70, Coke, at the trial of Essex in 1601, said gravely, that he and his partisans "went rather into the city than to the Court, in regard the lustre of the divine Majesty glistered so brightly in the Royal Majesty, and did so dazzle their eyes, that they durst approach no nearer." (Camden, Trans. 614, Orig. 11, 230, and cf. my Dr. Farmer Chetham M.S., in Narrative of the Trial of Essex and Southampton.)

E. Page xlvi.

MELVILL'S ACCOUNT OF ELIZABETH.

Whitaker, in his "Additions and Corrections made in the second edition of Mary, Queen of Scots, Vindicated" (1789), has worked in under a passionate animus, many extracts from contemporary letters, &c. Bating the twist, he gives them all, they are of the rarest interest, and go to confirm and illustrate almost every detail in Love's Martyr. I refer the student-reader to the book. I content myself here with an incident at Court that vivifies Chester's praise of Elizabeth's musical gifts (p. 13, st. 2).

"She [Elizabeth] asked, if she [Mary] played well? I said, Reasonably for a Queen. That same day, after dinner, my Lord of Hunsdean [Hundson] drew me up to a quiet gallery, that I might hear some musick (but he said he durst not avow it) where I might hear the Queen play upon the virginals. After I had hearkened awhile, I took by the tapestry that hung before the door of the chamber; and seeing her back was towards the door, I entered within the chamber, and stood a pretty space hearing her play excellently well. But she left off immediately, as soon as she turned her about and saw me. She appeared to be surprized to see me, and came forward seeming to strike me with her hand; alledging she used not to play before men, but when she was solitary to shun melancholy. She asked, how I came there? I answered, as I was walking with my lord of Hunsdean, as we past by the chamber-door, I heard such melody as ravished me; whereby I was drawn in ere I knew how: excusing my fault of homeliness [familiarity] as being brought up in the court of France, where such freedom was allowed, the French easiness of manners being then as eminent, as it has since been She then called for my lady Strafford out of the next chamber, for the Queen was alone. She inquired, whether my Queen or she played best? In that, I found myself obliged to give her the praise." (pp. 145-6.)

F. Page xlix.

LETTER FROM A CORRESPONDENT IN ENGLAND TO A SCOTTISH NOBLEMAN, AT THE CLOSE OF ELIZABETH'S REIGN.

I am indebted to my friend J. M. Thomson, Esq., Edinburgh, for an exact copy of this very noticeable Letter. As it has never been printed in extenso I deem it expedient to give it without mutilation. The italicized lines are surely very remarkable in their revelation of Elizabeth's too-late discovery of the wrong against her truest and noblest self in sacrificing Essex. The Letter is valuable, also, as reflecting the troubled state of the nation at the time. The original unsigned MS.—for it was perilous to sign such a letter— is in the Advocates Library, Edinburgh, and it runs thus :

“ Albeit that I haue not aunswered your Lordships letter ; neuertheless I hoope, that my silence shal receiue that favorable constructio[n] which my innocency may challenge of right. For I was resolved to commit no letter to the hands of Fortune, seing that the expectation of a litle tyme, might secure the passage of those papers, which I decreed to consecrate only to your self. And if the debt I owe you, might be payed by woordes, I would frank[ly] spende al my tyme in acknowledgement of your fauours ; which beare fruite of such sorte, that so soone as I haue receaued them, they begin to bud forth, & to produce new blossomes.

“ Neuertheless my hoope is, that al the world shal knowe, that pow[er] in requiting, hath rather fayled mee then will. Therfor pardon mee I beseech you, if wanting meanes to discharge the debt I owe I am constrained to runn on the old skoare, & to spende stil out of your L^{dps} stocke.

“ I haue at length sent his Ma^{ty} an abstract of such Gentlem[ens] names, as are in greatest accompt in Englande. The greatest part wherof are knowne vnto my self : the rest I haue had intelligence of, by many wary questions, & sundry relations, of those, that weer well assured of that which they informed. And concerning the Apologetical preface, I haue deliuered my opinion, wherin I jumpe just with your L^{dps} censure therof : hooping that h[is] highnes will take your word in my behalfe, that my difference in the forme of an Apology, springeth not from any spirit of contra[di]ction, but from the obedience I owe, to aunswer, truly, vnto euery demaunde his Majesty shal propounde vnto mee. Also I haue sent a discorsiue aunswer vnto certeyne questions : wherin I suppoof[se] that though p'haps I may seeme to shoote at reuers, I haue not shott very wide from the marke. Our Queene is troubled w[ith] a Rheume in her arme, which vexeth her very much : besides the greefe shee hath conceiued for my L^d of

Essex his death, shee sleepech not somuch by day as shee used, nether taketh rest by night: her delight is to sit in the darke, & sometimes with shedding of tears to bewyle Essex. This is the reason, that wee haue so many horses about London: the particularitie wherof I refer to Mr. Foules. In any case let mee intreate you to sollicite his Ma^{ty}, to send often, & though the journey bee longe, & peynefull, I doubt not, but that Mr. Foules, will gladly vndertake the charge, wherin so good seruice may bee performed. For it is expedient that the messenger bee skilful in our present estate, trusted by us, & knowne to bee confidente with the kinge. Concerning my self, or the seruice which I may performe, ether in this place, or any whatso euer, I protest that I remayne firme, & ready to bee employed, whensoever his Majesty, shal grace mee with his commaundement. For I breathe no other contentment, then that, which may turne to the aduancement of so gracious a Prince, & the ease of this distressed Cuntry. In what state wee stande at this present, may better bee related by Mr. Foules, Quaeque ipse miserrima vidit, then by a short narration of perpetual woes.

“Therfor I will aduertise your L^p, of your owne affaire: wherin I haue traueyled to the vttermoast of my power, & gotten a particular information of al Caris proceedings touching Whorlton. The common voice of the Tennants is, that hee payed only a 1000 marks to the Queene: but hauing conferred with himself, I founde him much discontented as hee pretended, for the great price hee had payed Videlicet: 1800^l: But I beleue him not therin. Neither doth 3; or I thinke it fit that any thirde person should compounde with him for it. For it is certeyne that seing it is already leased, it wil not bee bought but at an vnreasonable rate: & the tyme wil come when hee wilbee glad to take half the money hee hath disbursed for his interest therin. The Queene hath sold a greate part of the Duchy of Cornwell & Lancaster, which landes must ether bee recalled, as wee haue a president therof in Henry the fourths tyme, or bought agayne to vuite them to the Crowne. I haue sent your L^p a draught of the suruay of Whorlton, which I got cunningly out of the Checker. Likewise you shal receiue a copy of a Letters Patents, taken out of the which is counted to conteyne the moast general woordes, that may bee used in a good & perfect assurance. And albeit t[hat] the name of a Rectory agree not with your Manors, it importeth not, seing that mutatis mutandis, forasmuch [as] concerneth the names, the whole process of the graunte is to [be] obserued. I feare that you can hardly reade itt, for it is written in badd Lattin, & abbreviations, which is the man[ner] of the clarks that copy any recorde out of the Chauncery. The graunte you sent mee with the clause of renewing the Letters patents in Die Hlo. is held to bee better then any other assurance that can nowe bee made by the kinge. I will deteyne your L^p no longer: beseeching you to build upon that good foundation of my affection, which your merite hath firmly layd. For my desir is to streyne my vttermoast ability, to bee alwaies the foremost in

Your L^ps Service.”

G. Page lxi.

SHAKESPEARE CENSURED.

I refer to Henry Chettle's England's Mourning Garment, &c. (1603). In this somewhat remarkable celebration of Elizabeth, Shakespeare, as author of the Rape of Lucrece, is thus appealed to :

“ Nor doth the siluer tonged Melicert
Drop from his honied muse one fable teare
To mourne her death that graced his defert,
And to his laies opend her Royall eare.
Shepheard remember our Elizabeth,
And sing her Rape, done by that Tarquin, Death.”

Is it accidental that CHAPMAN and MARSTON — other two of the authors of the “new compositions,” be it noted — are similarly censured and urged? Could these lines in Chettle be possibly meant to hit at Chester and the “new compositions”?

— — — “worst of worst,
Bayards and beafts accurst, with grofest flattery nurst:
Haue fung her sacred name, and praif'd her to their shame,
Who was our last and first.”

H. Page lxxii.

ERRATA OF THE ORIGINAL.

- Page 12, st. 3, l. 2, comma after ‘springs’ instead of period (.) — corrected.
- „ 13, st. 3, l. 2, comma after ‘flower’ instead of period (.) — corrected.
- ibid.*, st. 4, l. 1, ‘yee’ for ‘yea’ — corrected.
- „ 14, st. 1, l. 4, ‘Venus’ printed ‘Venvs’ — corrected.
- „ 22, numbered 41 instead of 14 — corrected.
- „ 23, To those of light beleeve — st. 1, l. 5, no comma after ‘conceit’ — corrected.
- ibid.*, st. 2, l. 5, comma after ‘find’ — corrected.
- „ 77, st. 2, l. 6, no stop after ‘spight’ — corrected.
- „ 83, Iohannis Leylandij, &c., l. 12, the comma after ‘petit.’

- Page 89, Heading — ‘Dialogue’ for ‘Dialogue’ — corrected.
 „ 92, st. 1, l. 3, no comma after ‘enchantment’ — corrected.
 „ 104, st. 3, l. 2, ‘gods’ for ‘godd[es]s.’
 „ 111, numbered ‘101’ — corrected to ‘103.’
 „ 113, st. 1, l. 3, ‘cle’ for ‘clere,’ and l. 6, ‘the m’ for ‘the m[inde].’
 „ 128, st. 1, l. 1, ‘Memnodides’ should have been ‘Memnonides’ certainly.
 „ 131, st. 2, l. 3, ‘fometing’ for ‘something’ — corrected
 „ 137, st. 4, l. 4, ‘secrecly’ for ‘secretly.’
 „ 142, 143, are mis-numbered ‘118’ and ‘119’ for ‘134 and ‘135’ — corrected.
 „ 153 to 175, numbered 141 to 163 for 145 to 167 — corrected.
 „ 167, margin — l. 14, ‘feele’ for ‘feele,’ and l. 20, ‘poreft’ for ‘pureft’ — corrected.
 „ 179–195, are mis-numbered 167 to 183 for 171 to 187 — corrected.

See also various suggestions and criticisms in the Notes and Illustrations. A comma at the end of a line was a favorite contemporary punctuation.

ERRATA OF OUR REPRINT.

- Page 11, st. 3, l. 1, put comma after ‘thing.’
 „ 29, st. 1, l. 4, spell ‘keepe’ for ‘keep.’
 „ 31, st. 2, l. 4, spell ‘harmelesse’ for ‘harmlesse.’
 „ 34, st. 1, l. 1, put comma after ‘Elfloda.’
 „ 37, st. 4, l. 7, spell ‘deedes’ for ‘deeds.’
 „ 38, st. 4, l. 2, spell ‘tooke’ for ‘took.’
 „ 43, l. 7, spell ‘owne’ for ‘own.’
 „ 44, heading, l. 2, put comma after ‘Coronation.’
 „ 47, l. 3, spell ‘litle’ for ‘little,’ and st. 1, l. 2, ‘wel’ for ‘well.’
 „ 77, st. 2, l. 1, spell ‘battell’ for ‘battel.’
 „ 78, st. 1, l. 1, spell ‘prepar’d’ for ‘prepared.’

- Page 84, l. 8, read 'off fpring' for 'offspring,' and l. 11, spell 'fweete' for 'sweet.'
- „ 85, Hee endeth, &c., l. 2, put comma after 'feate.'
- „ 93, st. 4, l. 3, put comma after 'Hercules.'
- „ 96, st. 2, l. 5, capital to 'Fifhes'; and st. 4, l. 1, spell 'Iacke' for 'Iack.'
- „ 98, st. 3, l. 7, spell 'verie' for 'very.'
- „ 108, st. 2, l. 2, spell 'Turbut' for 'Turbot.'
- „ 112, st. 4, l. 6, spell 'food' for 'foode.'
- „ 115, st. 2, l. 4, spell 'meate' for 'meat.'
- „ 127, st. 2, l. 5, put comma after 'way.'
- „ 128, st. 5, l. 3, spell 'dayly' for 'daily.'
- „ 168, st. 3, l. 5, spell 'tels' for 'tells.'
- „ 172, st. 2, l. 6, spell 'fauoring' for 'fauouring.'
- „ 194, Heading of Ode— I have extended the contrac
tions for ov and στ.

A. B. G.

ROBERT CHESTER'S
LOVE'S MARTYR, 1601,

WITH SHAKSPERE'S "PHENIX AND TURTLE," ETC., ETC.

LOVES MARTYR: OR,
ROSALINS COMPLAINT.

*Allegorically shadowing the truth of Loue,
in the constant Fate of the Phoenix
and Turtle.*

A Poeme enterlaced with much varietie and raritie;
now first translated out of the venerable Italian Torquato Cæliano, by ROBERT CHESTER.

With the true legend of famous King Arthur, the last of the nine Worthies, being the first Efsay of a new Brytish Poet: collected out of diuerse Authentick Records.

To these are added some new compositions, of seuerall moderne Writers whose names are subscribed to their seuerall workes, upon the first subiect: viz. the Phoenix and Turtle.

Mar: — Mutare dominum non potest liber notus.

LONDON
Imprinted for E. B.

1601.

TO THE HONORAble, and (of me before all other) honored Knight, Sir John Salisburie

one of the Esquires of the bodie to the Queenes most excellent Maiestie, Robert

Chester wisheth increase of vertue and honour.

Posse & nolle, nobile.

Honorable Sir, hauing according to the directions of some of my best-minded friends, finished my long expected labour; knowing this ripe iudging world to be full of enuie, euery one (as sound reason requireth) thinking his owne child to be fairest although an Æthiopian, I am emboldened to put my infant wit to the eye of the world vnder your protectiō

A 3

THE EPISTLE DEDICATORIE.

knowing that if Absurditie like a theefe
haue crept into any part of these Poems,
your well-graced name will ouer-shadow these defaults, and the knowne Character of your vertues, cause the common back-biting enemies of good spirits, to be silent. To the World I put my Child to nurse, at the expencc of your fauour, whose glorie will stop the mouthes of the vulgar, and I hope cause the learned to rocke it asleepe (for your sake) in the bosome of good wil. Thus wishing you all the blefsings of heauen and earth; I end.

Yours in all seruice,

R^O. CHESTER.

The Authors request to the Phœnix.

P*Hœnix of beautie, beauteous Bird of any
To thee I do entitle all my labour,
More precious in mine eye by far then many,
That feedst all earthly senses with thy saour :
Accept my home-writ praises of thy loue,
And kind acceptance of thy Turtle-doue.*

*Some deepe-read scholler fam'd for Poetrie,
Whose wit-enchanting verse deserueth fame,
Should sing of thy perfections passing beautie,
And eleuate thy famous worthy name :
Yet I the least, and meanest in degree,
Endeuoured haue to please in praising thee.*

R. Chester.

To the kind Reader.

Of bloody warres, nor of the sacke of Troy,
Of Pryams mured sonnes, nor Didoes fall,
Of Hellens rape, by Paris Troian boy,
Of Cæsars victories, nor Pompeys thrall,
Of Lucrece rape, being rauisht by a King,
Of none of these, of sweete Conceit I sing.

*Then (gentle Reader) ouer-reade my Muse,
That armes herselfe to flie a lowly flight,
My vtun'd stringed verse do thou excuse,
That may perhaps accepted, yeeld delight:
I cannot clime in praises to the skie,
Least falling, I be drown'd with infamie.*

Mea mccum Porto.

R. Ch.

THE Annals of great Brittaine.

OR,

A MOST EXCELlent Monument, wherein may be scene all the antiquities of this Kingdome, to the fatisfaction both of the Vniuersities, or any other place stirred with Emulation of long continuance.

Excellently figured out in a worthy Poem.

LONDON
Printed for MATHEW LOWNES.
1611

I

ROSALINS COM-PLAINT, METAPHORI-
cally applied to Dame Nature at a Parliament held (in the high Star-chamber) by the Gods, for the preferuauon and increase of Earths beaucous Phoenix.

A Solemne day of meeting mongst the Gods,
And royall parliament there was ordained :
The heauenly Synod was at open ods,
And many harts with earthly wrongs were pained ;
Some came to craue excuse, some to complaine
Of heauic burdend griefes they did sustaine.

Vesta she told, her Temple was defiled :
Iuno how that her nuptiall knot was broken ;
Venus from her sonne Cupid was exiled :
And Pallas tree with ignorance was shoken :
Bellona rau'd at Lordlike cowardice,
And Cupid that fond Ladies were fo nice.

To this Asssembly came Dame Nature weeping,
And with her handkercher through wet with teares,
She dried her rosie cheekes, made pale with fighting,
Hanging her wofull head, head full of feares :
And to Ioues selfe plac'd in a golden seate,
She kneeld her downe, and thus gan to intreate :

Thou mightie Imperator of the earth,
Thou euer-liuing Regent of the aire,
That to all creatures giu'ft a liuely breath,

B

And thundrest wrath downe from thy fire chaire,
Behold thy handmaid, king of earthly kings,
That to thy gracious sight fad tidings brings.

One rare rich Phanix of exceeding beautie,
One none-like Lillie in the earth I placed ;
One faire Hclena, to whom men owe dutie :
One countrey with a milke-white Doue I graced :
One and none such, since the wide world was found
Hath euer Nature placed on the ground.

Head. Her head I framed of a heauenly map,
Wherein the seuenfold vertues were enclosed,
When great Apollo slept within my lap,
And in my bosome had his rest reposed,
I cut away his locks of purest gold,
And plac'd them on her head of earthly mould.

Haire. When the least whistling wind begins to sing,
And gently blowes her haire about her necke,
Like to a chime of bells it soft doth ring,
And with the pretie noise the wind doth checke,
Able to lull asleepe a pensfue hart,
That of the round worlds forrowes beares a part.

Forehead. Her forehead is a place for princely Ioue
To sit, and confure matters of import :
Wherein men reade the sweete concepts of Loue,
To which hart-pained Louers do resort,
And in this Tablet find to cure the wound,
For which no salue or herbe was euer found.

· Vnder

Vnder this mirrour, are her princely eyes :
 Two Carbuncles, two rich imperiall lights ;
 That ore the day and night do foueraignize,
 And their dimme tapers to their rest she frights :
 Her eyes excell the Moone and glorious Sonne,
 And when she rifeth al their force is donne.

Eyes.

Her morning-coloured cheekes, in which is plac'd,
 A Lillie lying in a bed of Rofes ;
 This part aboue all other I haue grac'd,
 For in the blew veines you may reade sweet pofies :
 When she doth blufh, the Heauens do wax red,
 When she lookes pale, that heauenly Front is dead.

Cheekes.

Her chinne a litle litle pretie thing
 In which the sweet carnatian Gelli-flower,
 Is round encompast in a chriftall ring,
 And of that pretie Orbe doth beare a power :
 No forme of Enuie can this glorie touch,
 Though many should affay it ouermuch.

Chinne.

Her lippes two rubie Gates from whence doth fpring,
 Sweet honied deaw by an intangled kiffe,
 From forth these glories doth the Night-bird fing,
 A Nightingale that no right notes will miffe :
 True learned Eloquence and Poetric,
 Do come betwene these dores of excellencie.

Lippes.

Her teeth are hewed from rich crystal Rockes,
 Or from the Indian pearle of much esteem,
 These in a clofet her deep counfell lockes,

Teeth.

And are as porters to so faire a Queene,
 They taste the diet of the heau'nly traine,
 Other base groffeneffe they do still disdaine.

Tongue. Her tongue the vtterer of all glorious things,
 The siluer clapper of that golden bell,
 That neuer foundeth but to mightie Kings,
 And when she speakes, her speeches do excell:
 He in a happie chaire himselfe doth place,
 Whose name with her sweet tongue she means to grace.

Necke. Her necke is Vestas siluer conduict pipe,
 In which she powers perfect chastitie,
 And of the muskie grapes in sommer ripe,
 She makes a liquor of ratiemie,
 That dies this swanne-like piller to a white,
 More glorious then the day with all his light.

Breasts. Her breasts two crystal orbes of whitest white,
 Two little mounts from whence lifes comfort springs.
 Between those hillockes Cupid doth delight
 To sit and play, and in that valley sings:
 Looking loue-babies in her wanton eyes,
 That all grosse vapours thence doth chafesize.

Armes. Her armes are branches of that siluer tree,
 That men surname the rich Hesperides,
 A precious circling shew of modestie,
 When she doth spread these glories happines:
 Ten times ten thousand blessings he doth taste,
 Whose circled armes shall cling about her waste.

Her

Rofalins complaint.

5

Her hands are fortunes palmes, where men may reade
His first houres destiny, or weale or woe,
When she this sky-like map abroad doth spreade,
Like pilgrimes many to this Saint do go,
And in her hand, white hand, they there do see
Loue lying in a bed of yuorie.

Hands.

Her fingers long and small do grace her hand ;
For when she toucheth the sweete sounding Lute,
The wild vntamed beafts amaz'd do stand,
And carroll-chanting birds are sudden mute :
O fingers how you grace the filuer wires,
And in humanitie burne Venus fires !

Fingers.

Her bellie (δ grace incomprehenfible)
Far whiter then the milke-white lillie flower.
O might Arabian Phoenix come inuisible,
And on this mountaine build a glorious bower,
Then Sunne and Moone as tapers to her bed,
Would light loues Lord to take her maidenhead.

Bellie.

Be still my thoughts, be filent all yee Muses,
Wit-flowing eloquence now grace my tongue :
Arise old Homer and make no excufes,
Of a rare peece of art muft be my fong,
Of more then moft, and moft of all beloued,
About the which Venus sweete doues haue houered.

Nota.

There is a place in louely paradize,
From whence the golden Gchon ouerflowes,
A fountaine of fuch honorable prize,

B 3

That none the facred, facred vertues knowes,
 Walled about, betok'ning fure defence,
 With trees of life, to keepe bad errors thence.

Thighes. Her Thighs two pillers fairer far then faire,
 Two vnderprops of that celestially house,
 That Mansion that is Innos siluer chaire,
 In which Ambrosia VENUS doth caroufe,
 And in her thighs the prety veines are running
 Like Christall riuers from the maine streames flowing.

Legges. Her legges are made as graces to the rest,
 So pretie, white, and so proportionate,
 That leades her to loues royall sportiue nest,
 Like to a light bright Angel in her gate :
 For why no creature in the earth but she,
 Is like an Angell, Angell let her be.

Feete. Her Feete (now draw I to conclusion)
 Are neat and litle to delight the eye,
 No tearme in all humane inuention,
 Or in the veine of sweet writ Poetrie
 Can ere be found, to giue her feet that grace,
 That beares her corporate Soule from place to place.

And if by night she walke, the Marigold,
 That doth inclose the glorie of her eye,
 At her approach her beauty doth vnfold,
 And spreads her selfe in all her royaltie,
 Such vertue hath this Phoenix glassy shield,
 That Floures and Herbs at her faire fight do yeeld.

And

And if she grace the Walkes within the day,
Flora doth spreade an Arras cloth of flowers,
 Before her do the prety Satires play,
 And make her banquets in their leauie Bowers :
 Head, Haire, Brow, Eyes, Cheeks, Chin and all,
 Lippes, Teeth, Tong, Neck, Brefts, Belly are maiefticall.

This Phœnix I do feare me will decay,
 And from her ashes neuer will arise
 An other Bird her wings for to display,
 And her rich beauty for to equalize :
 The Arabian fiers are too dull and base,
 To make another spring within her place.

Therefore dread Regent of these Elements,
 Pitie poore Nature in her Art excellling,
 Giue thou an humble eare to my laments,
 That to thee haue a long true tale beene telling,
 Of her, who when it please thee to behold,
 Her outward sight shall bewties pride vnfold.

At these words Ioue stood as a man amazed,
 And Iunos loue-bred bewtie turnd to wight,
Venus she blusht, and on dame Nature gazed,
 And Vesta she began to weepe outright :
 And little Cupid poore boy strucke in loue,
 With repetition of this earthly Doue.

But at the last Ioue gan to rouse his spirit,
 And told dame Nature in her sweet discourse ;
 Her womans Toung did run before her Wit,

B 4

Such a faire foule her felfe could neuer nurfe,
 Nor in the vaffic earth was euer liuing,
 Such beauty that all beauty was excelleng.

Nature was ftrucked with pale temeritie,
 To fee the God of thunders lightning eyes ;
 He fhooke his knotty haire fo wrathfully,
 As if he did the heauenly rout defpife :
 Then downe vpon her knee dame Nature fals,
 And on the great gods name aloud fhe cals.

Ioue thou fhalt fee my commendations,
 To be vnworthie and impartiall,
 To make of her an extallation,
 Whofe beauty is deuine maiefticall ;
 Looke on that painted picture there, behold
 The rich wrought Phoenix of Arabian gold.

Ioues eyes were fetled on her painted eyes,
Ioue blufhing fmil'd, the picture fmil'd againe :
Ioue fpoke to her, and in his heart did rife
 Loues amours, but the picture did difdaine
 To loue the god, Ioue would haue ftole a kiffe,
 But Iuno being by, denyed him this.

When all the reft beheld this counterfeit,
 They knew the fubftance was of rarer price :
 Some gaz'd vpon her face, on which did waite
 As meffengers, her two celeftiall eyes ;
 Eyes wanting fire, did giue a lightning flame,
 How much more would her eyes mans fences tame ?
 Then

Then all the Gods and Goddeffes did decree,
 In humble maner to intreat of Ioue
 And euery power vpon his bended knee,
 Shewd faithfull feruice in dame Natures loue,
 Intreating him to pacifie his Ire,
 And raife another Phanix of new fire.

Her picture from Ioues eyes hath banisht Hate,
 And Mildnesse plaind the furrowes of his brow,
 Her painted shape hath chastifed debate,
 And now to pleafure them he makes a vow :
 Then thus Ioue spake, tis pittie she should die,
 And leaue no offspring of her Progenie.

Nature go hie thee, get thee Phabus chaire,
 Cut through the skie, and leaue Arabia,
 Leaue that il working peece of fruitlesse ayre,
 Leaue me the plaines of white Brytania,
 These countries haue no fire to raife that flame,
 That to this Phanix bird can yeeld a name.

There is a country Clymat fam'd of old,
 That hath to name delightfome Paphos Ile,
 Ouer the mountaine tops to trudge be bold,
 There let thy winged Horfes rest awhile :
 Where in a vale like Cipariffus groue,
 Thou shalt behold a fecond Phanix loue.

A champion country full of fertill Plaines,
 Green grassie Medowes, little prettie Hills,
 Abundant pleature in this place remaines,

C

And plenteous sweetes this heauenly clymat filles :
 Faire flowing bathes that iffue from the rockes,
 Aboundant heards of beafts that come by flockes.

High ftately Cædars, fturdie bigge arm'd Okes,
 Great Poplers, and long trees of Libanon,
 Sweete fmelling Firre that frankenfence prouokes,
 And Pine apples from whence fweet iuyce doth come :
 The fommer-blooming Hawthorne ; vnder this
 Faire Venus from Adonis stole a kiffe.

Fine Thickets and rough Brakes for fport and pleafure,
 Places to hunt the light-foote nimble Roe :
 Thefe groues Diana did account her treafure,
 And in the cold fhades, oftentimes did goe
 To lie her downe, faint, weary on the ground,
 Whileft that her Nymphs about her daunft a round.

A quire of heauenly Angels tune their voyces,
 And counterfeit the Nightingale in finging,
 At which delight fome pleafure fhe reioyces,
 And Plenty from her cell her gifts is bringing :
 Peares, Apples, Plums, and the red ripe Cherries,
 Sweet Strawberries with other daintie berries.

Here haunt the Satyres and the Driades,
 The Hamadriades and pretie Elues,
 That in the groues with skipping many pleafe,
 And runne along vpon the water fhelues :
 Heare Mermaidcs fmg, but with Ulyffes eares,
 The country Gallants do difdaine their teares.

The

The Crocadile and hissing Adders sting,
 May not come neere this holy plot of ground,
 No Nightworme in this continent may sing,
 Nor poifon-spitting Serpent may be found :
 Here Milke and Hony like two riuers ran,
 As fruitfull as the land of Canaan.

What shall I fay ? their Orchards spring with plentie,
 The Gardens smell like Floras paradice,
 Bringing increase from one to number twentie,
 As Lycorice and sweet Arabian spice :
 No place is found vnder bright heauens faire bliffe,
 To beare the name of Paradise but this.

Hard by a running streame or cryftall fountaine,
 Wherein rich Orient pearle is often found,
 Enuiron'd with a high and steepie mountaine,
 A fertill foile and fruitful plot of ground,
 There shalt thou find true Honors louely Squire,
 That for this Phanix keeps Prometheus fire.

His bower wherein he lodgeth all the night,
 Is fram'd of Cædars and high loftie Pine,
 I made his houfe to chastice thence despight,
 And fram'd it like this heauenly rooffe of mine :
 His name is Liberall honor, and his hart,
 Aymes at true faithfull seruice and defart.

Looke on his face, and in his browes doth fit,
 Bloud and sweete Mercie hand in hand vnited,
 Bloud to his foes, a president most fit

C 2

For fuch as haue his gentle humour fpered :
 His Haire is curl'd by nature mild and meeke,
 Hangs careleffe downe to fhrowd a blufhing cheek

Giue him this Ointment to annoint his Head,
 This precious Balme to lay vnto his feet,
 Thefe fhall direct him to this Phanix bed,
 Where on a high hill he this Bird fhall meet :
 And of their Affhes by my doome fhall rife,
 Another Phanix her to equalize.

This faid the Gods and Goddeffes did applaud,
 The Cenfure of this thundring Magiftrate,
 And Nature gaue him euerlafting laud,
 And quickly in the dayes bright Coach fhe gate
 Downe to the earth, fhe's whirled through the ayre ;
Ioue ioyne thefe fires, thus Venus made her prayer.

An Introduction to the Prayer.

GVide thou great Guider of the Sunne and Moone,
 Thou elementall fauourer of the Night,
 My vndeferued wit, wit fprong too foone,
 To giue thy greatneffe euerie gracious right :
 Let Pen, Hand, Wit and vndeferuing tongue,
 Thy praife and honor fing in euerie fong.

In my poore prayer guide my Hand aright,
 Guide my dull Wit, guide all my dulled Senfes,
 Let thy bright Taper giue me faithfull light,

And

And from thy Booke of life blot my offences :
 Then arm'd with thy protection and thy loue,
 Ile make my prayer for thy Turtle-doue.

A Prayer made for the prosperitie of a filuer coloured Doue, applied to the becautous Phoenix.

O Thou great maker of the firmament,
 That rid'st vpon the winged Cherubins,
 And on the glorious shining element,
 Hear'st the sad praiers of the Scrapius,
 That vnto thee continually sing Hymnes :
 Bow downe thy lifting cares thou God of might,
 To him whose heart will praise thee day and night.

Accept the humble Praiers of that foule,
 That now lies wallowing in the myre of Sinne,
 Thy mercie Lord doth all my powers controule,
 And seareth reins and heart that are within :
 Therefore to thee Ichouah Ile begin :
 Lifting my head from my imprisoned graue,
 No mercie but thy mercie me can faue.

The foule vntamed Lion still goes roring,
 Old hell-bread Sathan enemy to mankind,
 To leade me to his iawes that are deuouring,
 Wherein no Grace to humane flesh's assign'd,

But thou celestiall Father canst him bind :
Tread on his head, tread Sinne and Sathan downe,
And on thy seruants head fet Mercies crowne.

Thus in acceptance of thy glorious fight,
I purge my deadly sinne in hope of grace,
Thou art the Doore, the Lanthorne and the Light,
To guide my sinfull feete from place to place,
And now O Christ I bow before thy face :
And for the siluer coloured earthly Doue,
I make my earnest prayer for thy loue.

Shrowde her ô Lord vnder thy shadowed wings,
From the worlds enuious malice and deceit,
That like the adder-poisoned serpent stings,
And in her way layes a corrupted baite,
Yet raise her God vnto thy mercies height :
Guide her, ô guide her from pernicious foes,
That many of thy creatures ouerthrowes.

Wash her O Lord with Hyfope and with Thime,
And the white snow she shall excell in whiteneffe,
Purge her with mercie from all sinfull crime,
And her foules glorie shall exceed in brightnesse,
O let thy mercie grow vnto such ripenesse :
Behold her, O behold her gracious King,
That vnto thee sweet songs of praise will sing.

And as thou leadst through the red coloured waues,
The hoast of thy elected Israel,
And from the wrath of Pharoe didst them saue,

Appoin-

Appointing them within that land to dwell,
 A chofen land, a land what did excell :
 So guide thy filuer Doue vnto that place,
 Where the Temptations enuie may outface.

Increase thy gifts bestowed on thy Creature,
 And multiply thy blessings manifold,
 And as thou haft adorned her with nature,
 So with thy blessed eyes her eyes behold,
 That in them doth thy workmanship vnfold,
 Let her not wither Lord without increase,
 But bleffe her with ioyes offspring of sweet peace.
Amen. Amen.

To thofe of light beleefe.

Y*ou gentle fauourers of excellling Muses,
 And gracers of all Learning and Defart,
 You whose Conceit the deepeft worke perufes,
 Whofe Iudgements ftill are gouerned by Art :
 Reade gently what you reade, this next conceit,
 Fram'd of pure loue, abandoning dceit.*

*And you whose dull Imagination,
 And blind conceited Error hath not knowene,
 Of Herbes and Trees true nomination,
 But thinke them fabulous that fhall be showne :
 Learne more, fearch much, and furely you fhall find Plaine honeft Truth and Knowledge comes behind.*

Then gently (gentle Reader) do thou fauour,

C 4

*And with a gracious looke grace what is written,
 With smiling cheare peruse my homely labour,
 With Enuies poisoned spitefull looke not bitten :
 So shalt thou cause my willing thought to striue,
 To adde more Honey to my new-made Hiue.*

A meeting Dialogue-wise betweene Nature, the Phœnix, and the Turtle Dove.

Nature.

ALl haile faire Phœnix, whither art thou flying?
 Why in the hot Sunne dost thou spread thy wings?
 More pleafure shouldst thou take in cold shades lying,
 And for to bathe thyfelfe in wholfome Springs,
 Where the woods feathered quier sweetely fings :
 Thy golden Wings and thy breafte beauteous Eie,
 Will fall away in Phœbus royaltie.

Phœnix.

O stay me not, I am no Phœnix I,
 And if I be that bird, I am defaced,
 Vpon the Arabian mountaines I must die,
 And neuer with a poore yong Turtle graced ;
 Such operation in me is not placed :
 What is my Beautie but a painted wal,
 My golden fpreading Feathers quickly fal.

Nature.

Why dost thou fhead thy Feathers, kill thy Heart,
 Weep out thine Eyes, and ftaine thy golden Face?
 Why dost thou of the worlds woe take a part,
 And in relenting teares thy felfe difgrace?
 Ioyes mirthful Tower is thy dwelling place ;

All

All Birdes for vertue and excellling beautie,
Sing at thy reuerend feet in Loue and Dutie.

Oh how thou feed'st me with my Beauties praising!
O how thy Praise sounds from a golden Tounge!
O how thy Tounge my Vertues would be raising!
And raising me thou dost corrupt thy song;
Thou see'st not Honie and Poifon mixt among;
Thou not'st my Beautie with a icalous looke,
But dost not see how I do bayte my hooke.

Phoenix.

Tell me, ô tell me, for I am thy friend,
I am Dame Nature that first gaue thee breath,
That from Ioues glorious rich feate did descend,
To set my Feete vpon this lumpish earth:
What is the cause of thy sad fullen Mirth?
Hast thou not Beauty, Vertue, Wit and Fauour:
What other graces would'st thou craue of Nature?

Nature.

What is my Beauty but a vading Flower?
Wherein men reade their deep-conceiued Thrall,
Alluring twentie Gallants in an hower,
To be as seruile vassalls at my Call?
My Sunne-bred lookes their Senses do exhall:
But (ô my grieffe) where my faire Eyes would loue,
Foule bleare-eyed Enuie doth my thoughts reprooue.

Phoenix.

What is my Vertue but a Tablitorie:
Which if I did bestow would more increase?
What is my Wit but an inhumane glorie:
That to my kind deare friends would proffer peace?

D

But O vaine Bird, giue ore in silence, ceafe ;
 Malice perchance doth hearken to thy words,
 That cuts thy threed of Loue with twentie fwords.

Nature. Tell me (O Mirroure) of our earthly time,
 Tell me fweete Phanix glorie of mine age,
 Who blots thy Beauty with foule Enuies crime,
 And locks thee vp in fond Suspitions cage ?
 Can any humane heart beare thee fuch rage ?
 Daunt their proud stomacks with thy piercing Eye,
 Vnchaine Loues fweetneffe at thy libertie.

Phanix. What is't to bath me in a wholesome Spring,
 Or wash me in a cleere, deepe, running Well,
 When I no vertue from the fame do bring,
 Nor of the balmie water beare a fmell ?
 It better were for me mongst Crowes to dwell,
 Then flocke with Doues, whẽ Doues fit alwayes billing,
 And wafte my wings of gold, my Beautie killing.

Nature. Ile chaine foule Enuy to a brazen Gate,
 And place deepe Malice in a hollow Rocke,
 To some blacke defert Wood Ile banish Hate,
 And fond Suspition from thy fight Ile locke :
 Thefe fhall not ftirre, let anie Porter knocke.
 Thou art but yong, frefh, greene, and must not paffe,
 But catch the hot Sunne with thy fteeled glaffe.

Phanix. That Sunne fhines not within this Continent,
 That with his warme rayes can my dead Blood chearish,
 Groffe cloudie Vapours from this Aire is fent,

Not

Not hot reflecting Beames my heart to nourish.
 O Beautie, I do feare me thou wilt perish ;
 Then gentle Nature let me take my flight,
 But ere I passe, fet Emmie out of fight.

Ile coniure him, and raife him from his graue,
 And put vpon his head a punishment :
Nature thy sportiue Pleasure meanes to faue ;
 Ile send him to perpetuall banishment,
 Like to a totterd Furie ragd and rent :
 Ile baffle him, and blind his Iealous eye,
 That in thy actions Secrecie would pryce.

Ile coniure him, Ile raife him from his Cell,
 Ile pull his Eyes from his conspiring head,
Nature Ile locke him in the place where he doth dwell ;
 Ile starue him there, till the poore slaue be dead,
 That on the poisonous Adder oft hath fed :
 These threatnings on the Helhound I will lay,
 But the performance beares the greater sway.

Stand by faire Phoenix, spread thy Wings of gold,
 And daunt the face of Heauen with thine Eye,
Phoenix Like Iunos bird thy Beautie do vnfold,
 And thou shalt triumph ore thineemie :
 Then thou and I in Phæbus coach will flie,
 Where thou shalt see and tast a secret Fire,
 That will adde spreading life to thy Desire.

Arise thou bleare-cy'd Emmie from thy bed,
 Thy bed of Snakie poison and corruption,
Nature D 2

Vnmaske thy big-fwolne Cheekes with poyfon red,
 For with thee I must trie Conclusion,
 And plague thee with the Worlds confusion.
 I charge thee by my Power to appeare,
 And by Celestiall warrant to draw neare.

Phenix. O what a mistie Dampe breakes from the ground,
 Able it selfe to infect this noysome Aire :
 As if a caue of Toades themselues did wound,
 Or poyfoned Dragons fell into dispaire,
 Hells damned sent with this may not compare,
 And in this foggie cloud there doth arise
 A damned Feend ore me to tyrannize.

Nature. He shall not touch a Feather of thy wing,
 Or euer haue Authoritie and power,
 As he hath had in his dayes secret prying,
 Ouer thy calmie Lookes to send a shower :
 Ile place thee now in secrecies sweet Bower,
 Where at thy will in sport and dallying,
 Spend out thy time in Amarus discourfing.

Phenix. Looke Nurce, looke Nature how the Villaine sweates,
 His big-fwolne Eyes will fall vnto the ground,
 With fretting anguish he his blacke breast beates,
 As if he would true harted minds confound :
 O keepe him backe, his fight my heart doth wound :
 O Ennie it is thou that mad'st me perish,
 For want of that true Fire my heart should nourish.

Nature. But I will plague him for his wickednesse,

Ennie

Ennie go packe thee to some forreine soyle,
 To some desertfull plaine or Wilderneffe,
 Where savage Monsters and wild beasts do toyle,
 And with inhumane Creatures keep a coyle.
 Be gone I say, and neuer do returne,
 Till this round compast world with fire do burne.

What is he gone? is Ennie packt away? Phoenix.
 Then one fowle blot is moued from his Throne,
 That my poore honest Thoughts did seeke to slay:
 Away fowle grieffe, and ouer-heauie Mone,
 That do ore charge me with continuall grones.
 Will you not hence? then with downe-falling teares,
 Ile drowne my selfe in ripeneffe of my Yeares.

Fie peeuish Bird, what art thou franticke mad? Nature.
 Wilt thou confound thy selfe with foolish Grieffe?
 If there be cause or meanes for to be had,
 Thy Nurse and nourisher will find reliefe:
 Then tell me all thy Accidents in briefe;
 Haue I not banisht Enny for thy sake?
 I greater things for thee ile vndertake.

Ennie is gone and banisht from my sight, Phoenix.
 Banisht for euer comming any more:
 But in Arabia burnes another Light,
 A dark dimme Taper that I must adore,
 This barren Countrey makes me to deplore:
 It is so saplesse that the very Spring,
 Makes tender new-growne Plants be with'ring.

D 3

The noifome Aire is growne infectious,
 The very Springs for want of Moifture die,
 The glorious Sunne is here peftiferous,
 No hearbes for Phificke or fweet Surgrie,
 No balme to cure hearts inward maladie :
 No gift of Nature, ſhe is here defaced,
 Heart-curing Balfamum here is not placed.

Nature. Is this the fumme and ſubſtance of thy woe?
 Is this the Anker-hold vnto thy bote?
 Is this thy Sea of Griefe doth ouerflow?
 Is this the Riuer ſets thy ſhip aflote?
 Is this the Leſſon thou haſt learn'd by rote?
 And is this all? and is this plot of Ground
 The ſubſtance of the Theame doth thee confound?

Phanix. This is the Anker-hold, the Sea, the Riuer,
 The Leſſon and the ſubſtance of my Song,
 This is the Rocke my Ship did ſeeke to ſhiuer,
 And in this ground with Adders was I ſtung,
 And in a lothſome pit was often flung :
 My Beautie and my Vertues captiuatē,
 To Loue, diſſembling Loue that I did hate.

Nature. Cheare vp thy ſpirit Phanix, prune thy wings,
 And double-gild thy Fethers for my newes ;
 A Nightingale and not a Rauen ſings,
 That from all blacke contention will excuſe
 Thy heauy thoughts, and ſet them to peruſe
 Another Clymat, where thou maiſt expreſſe,
 A plot of Paradice for worthineſſe.

Loue

Ioue in diuine diuineſſe of his Soule,
 That rides vpon his firie axaltree,
 That with his Mace doth humane fleſh controule,
 When of mans decdes he makes a Regiſtric,
 Louing the good for ſingularitie :
 With a vail'd Count'nance and a gracious Smile,
 Did bid me plant my Bird in Paphos Ile.

What ill diuining Planet did preſage,
 My timeleſſe birth ſo timely brought to light ?
 What fatal Comet did his wrath engage,
 To worke a harmleſſe Bird ſuch worlds deſpight,
 Wrapping my dayes bliſſe in blacke fables night ?
 No Planet nor no Comet did conſpire
 My downefall, but foule Fortunes wrathful ire.

Phœnix.

What did my Beautie moue her to Diſdaine ?
 Or did my Vertues ſhadow all her Bliffe ?
 That ſhe ſhould place me in a deſart Plaine,
 And ſend forth Enuie with a Judas kiſſe,
 To ſting me with a Scorpions poisoned hiſſe ?
 From my firſt birth-right for to plant me heare,
 Where I haue alwaies fed on Griefe and Feare.

Raile not gainſt Fortunes ſacred Deitie,
 In youth thy vertuous patience ſhe hath tyred,
 From this baſe earth ſhee'le liſt thee vp on hie,
 Where in Contents rich Chariot thou ſhalt ride,
 And neuer with Impatience to abide :
Fortune will glorie in thy great renowne,
 And on thy feathered head will ſet a crowne.

Nature.

Phoenix. T'was time to come, for I was comfortlesse,
 And in my Youth haue bene Infortunate ;
 This Ile of Paphos I do hope will blesse,
 And alter my halfe-rotten tottering state ;
 My hearts Delight was almost ruinate.
 In this rich Ile a Turtle had his nest,
 And in a Wood of gold tooke vp his rest.

Nature. Fly in this Chariot, and come fit by me,
 And we will leave this ill corrupted Land,
 We'le take our course through the blew Azure skie,
 And fet our feete on Paphos golden sand.
 There of that Turtle Doue we'le vnderstand :
 And visit him in those delightfull plaines,
 Where Peace conioyn'd with Plenty still remains.

Phoenix. I come, I come, and now farewell that strond,
 Vpon whose craggie rockes my Ship was rent ;
 Your ill befeeming follies made me fond,
 And in a vastie Cell I vp was pent,
 Where my fresh blooming Beauty I haue spent.
 O blame your felues ill nurtred cruell Swaines,
 That fild my scarlet Glorie full of Staines.

Nature. Welcome immortal Bewtie, we will ride
 Ouer the Semi-circle of Europa,
 And bend our course where we will see the Tide,
 That partes the Continent of Affrica,
 Where the great Cham gouernes Tartaria :
 And when the starric Curtaine vales the night,
 In Paphos sacred Ile we meane to light.

How

How glorious is this Chariot of the day,
 Where Phœbus in his cryftall robes is fet,
 And to poore paffengers directs a way :
 O happie time fince I with Nature met,
 My immelodious Difcord I vnfret :

Phœnix.

And fing sweet Hymnes, burn Myrrhe & Frankenfence,
 Honor that Ile that is my fure defence.

Looke Phœnix ore the world as thou doft ride,
 And thou fhalt fee the pallaces of Kings,
 Great huge-built Cities where high States abide,
 Temples of Gods, and Altars with rich off'rings,
 To which the Priefts their facrifices brings :
 Wonders pafte wonder, ftrange Pyramides,
 And the gold-gathering Strond of Euphrates.

Nature.

O what rich pleasure dwelleth in this Land !
 Greene fpringing Medowes, high vpreared Hills,
 The white-fleeft Ewe brought tame vnto the hand,
 Faire running Riuers that the Countrie fills,
 Sweet flowers that faire balmy Deaw diftills,
 Great peopled Cities, whose earth-gracing fhow,
 Time is afham'd to touch or ouerthrow.

Phœnix.

Be filent gentle Phœnix, Ile repeate,
 Some of thefe Cities names that we defcrie,
 And on their large foundation Ile intreate,
 Their Founder that firft rear'd them vp on hie,
 Making a glorious Spectacle to each eie :
 Warres wald Defender and the Countries grace,
 Not battred yet with Times controlling Mace.

Nature.

E

*This Alfred first deuided
England into Shires, being King of Northumbes.*

Alfred the father of faire Elfreda
Founded three goodly famous Monasteries,
In this large Ile of sweete Britania,
For to refresh the poore foules miseries,
That were afflicted with calamities :
One in the Towne surnamed Edlingsey,
Which after ages called Athelucy.

Alfred buried in the Cathedrall Church of Winchestre.

The second House of that Deuotion,
He did erect at worthy Winchestre,
A place well planted with Religion,
Called in this age the newly-builed Minster,
Still kept in notable reparation :
And in this famous builed Monument,
His bodie was interd when life was spent.

The Vniuersity of Oxford built by Alfred.

The last not least surpassing all the rest,
Was Oxfords honorable foundation,
Since when with Learnings glorie it is blest,
Begun by the godly exhortation
Of the Abbot Neotus direction :
From whose rich womb pure Angell-like Diuinitie,
Hath sprong to saue vs from Calamitie.

This Sore is a River that runneth by Leicester, called of some Brenber water.

Leyre the sonne of Baldud being admitted,
To beare the burden of the British sway,
A Prince with Natures glorie being fitted,
At what time Ioas raigned King of Iuda,
To make his new got Fame to last for aye,
By Sore he built the Towne of Cacrleir,
That to this day is called Leycester.

Bellin

Belin that famous worthy Brytaine King,
That made the Townes of France to feare his frowne,
And the whole Romish Legion to sing.
And to record his gracious great renowne,
Whose host of men their Townes were firing :
 Builded in Southwals height Caerlion,
 Or termed Arwiske Caerlegion.

*In this Citie were three famous Churches
one of S. Julius the Martyr, the second of S. Aron : and the other the mother
Church of all Demetia.*

This glorious Citie was the onely Pride,
In eldest age of all Demetia :
Where many notable Monuments abide,
To grace the Countrey of Britania,
That from Times memorie can neuer slide :
Amphibulus was borne in this sweete place,
Who taught S. Albon, Albon full of grace.

*This Belin also builded a notable Gate in Lō-
don now called Billingsgate & Belins Castle.*

King Lud furnam'd the great Lud-hurdibras,
The sonne of Leil, builded the famous Towne
Of Kaerkin, with a huge Tower of brasse,
Now called Canterburie of great renowne,
Able to bide the raging Foes stout frowne :
 The Metropolitans feate where Learning fits,
 And chiefe of all our English Bishhoprickes.

*Lud, father to Baldud, a man
well seen in the Sciences of Astronomie and Necromancie.*

This noble King builded faire Caerguent,
Now cleped Winchester of worthie fame,
And at Mount Paladour he built his Tent,
That after ages Shaftsburie hath to name,
His first foundation from King Leyls sonne came :
 About which building Prophet Aquila,
 Did prophesie in large Brytania.

*This Baldud
sonne of Lud-Hurdibras, made first the hot Baths at Caerbran, now called Bathe.*

E 2

King Leill a man of great religion,
 That made his bordring neighbours for to yeeld,
 He also repaired the Citie of Caer Leon, now called Canjter. And on their knees to pleade Submifsion, Being eldelt fonne to Brute furnamed Greeneſhield,
 The Citie of Caerleits he did build,
 Now called Carleyle by corruption,
 And Time that leades things to confuſion.

The Cittie of Cambridge a famous Vniuerſitie,
 The Nurſe of Learning and Experience,
 built in the dayes of Gurguntius the ſon
 of Beline, by one Cantaber a Spaniard, brother to Partholony, or as ſome write by Gorbonian.
 The Cheariſher of true Diuinitie,
 That for the Soules good wifedome doth commence,
 Confuting Vice, and driuing Error thence :
 Was built by Sigisbert: but wrought effectually
 By Kings and Lords of famous memorie.

Rithmi gratia*.

Ebranke the fonne of ſtout Mempritiuſ,
 Hauing in matrimoniall copulation,
 Twentie one wiues in large Britanicus*,
 And thirtie daughters by iuſt computation,
 And twentie ſonnes of eſtimation,
 Builled Caerbranke famous for the name,
 Now called Englands Yorke a place of Fame.

He in Albania large and populous,
 Now termed Scotland of the Scottiſh Sect,
 Becauſe his deedes ſhould ſtill be counted famous,
 The Caſtle of Maidens there he did erect,
 And to good purpoſe did this worke effect :
 But iron-eating Time the Truth doth ſtaine,
 For Edingburgh the Citie doth remaine.

And

And in that Maiden Castle he did frame,
 To grace the building to the outward eie,
 Nine Images of stone plac'd in the fame,
 Which since haue stay'd times perpetuities,
 In the true forme of worke-mans excellencie :
 Not any whit diminish't, but as perfect
 As in the first-dayes minute they were fet.

Nature I muse at your description,
 To see how Time that old rust-cankard wretch,
 Honors forgetfull Friend, Cities confusion,
 That in all Monuments hath made a Breach,
 To auncient names brought alteration :
 And yet at this day such a place remains,
 That all Times honor past with honor staines.

Phoenix.

Those carued old-cut stonie Images,
 That beautifie the Princes stately Towers,
 That graces with their grace the Pallaces,
 And high imperiall Emperizing bowers,
 Were neuer raz'd by Times controlling houres :
 Nine worthie women almost equiualent,
 With those nine worthie men so valient.

Nature.

Three of the nine were Iewes, and three were Gentiles,
 Three Christians, Honors honorable Sexe,
 That from their foes did often beare the spoiles,
 And did their proud controlling neighbours vex,
 Which to their name did Noblenesse annexe,
 An Embleame for true borne Gentilitie,
 To imitate their deeds in chivalrie.

E 3

The first Minerva a right worthie Pagon,
 That many manlike battailes manly fought,
 She first deuiz'd Artillerie of yron,
 And Armour for our backes she first found out,
 Putting our liues deare hazard from some doubt :
 She gouerned the Libians, and got Victories,
 With Honor by the lake Tritonides*.

* Locus Minerua.

Our maine pitcht Battels she first ordered,
 Setting a Forme downe to this following Age,
 The orders of Incamping she first registred,
 And taught the lawes of Armes in equipage,
 To after time her skill she did engage :
Apollo was her deare begotten sonne,
 In Abrahams time she liu'd till life was donne.

Semiramis Queene of Affiria,
 Was second worthie of this worlds great wonder,
 She conquered large Æthiopia,
 And brought the Necke of that stout Nation vnder,
 Wasting the Countries of rich India :
 Her dayes of Honor and of Regiment,
 Was in the time of Isaacks gouernment.

The third and chiefeft for Audacioufnesse,
 And Enterprites that she took in hand,
 Was Tomyris full of true Noblenesse,
 Queene of the North (as I do vnderstand,
 From forth her eyes she lightned Honors Brand,
 And brandished a Sword, a sword of Fame,
 That to her weake Sexe yeilded Hectors name.

When

When she receiued newes her sonne was dead,
 The Hope and Vnderprop of Scythia,
 She put on Armour, and encountered
 The Monarch Cyrus King of Perfia,
 And Gouvernor of rich Getulia :
 Slue him in fight her Fame for to renew,
 Two hundred thousand Souldiers ouerthrew.

Amongst the Hebrew women we commend,
Iahel the Kenite for the first in bountie,
 Whose vncomprehensible valour in the end,
 Did free and set at large her captiu'd Countrie,
 Oppressed with tyrannicall Miserie :
 From dangers imminent of fire Warre,
 By killing hand to hand her foe great Sifar.

Debora an Hebrew worthie the second place,
 She fortie yeares did gouerne Israell,
 In peace preferu'd her Land, her land of Grace,
 Where honest sportiue Mirth did alwaies dwell :
 Her holy holinesse no tongue can tell,
 Nations astonied at her happinesse,
 Did grieue to loose her Wisedomes worthinesse.

Judith the third that redeliuered,
 The strong besieged Citie of Bethulia,
 And when the proud Foe she had vanquished,
 And ouercame hot-spur'd Affiria,
 Bringing in triumph Holofernes head,
 She got a great and greater Victorie,
 Then thousand Souldiers in their maestic.

The first of Christians was faire Maud the Countesse, Countesse of Aniow, daughter to a King,
Englands first Henry: Almaines Empreffe,
 Heire indubitate, and her Fathers offspring,
 She titles to the English Crowne did bring:
 She ne're desisted from the warlike field,
 Till that vsurped Stephen of Blois did yeeld,
 And condiscended to her sonnes dear right,
 That war-like Maude had reobtain'd by might.

The second was Elizabeth of Aragon,
 Queene and wife to honorable Ferdinando:
 She stoutly fought for propagation
 Of Christian Faith; brought to subuersion,
 The forsaken infidels of Granado,
 Reducing that proud prouince all in one,
 To follow Christs vnspotted true Religion.

The last was Iohane of Naples true borne Queene,
 Sister to Ladislaus King of Hungarie,
 A woman that defended (as twas seene,)
 Her countries great and gracious libertie,
 By force of laudable Armes and Chiualrie,
 Against the Sarafins inuasion,
 And proud hot warres of princely Aragon.

Thus haue I in the honor of their worth,
 Laid ope their Progenie, their Deedes, their Armes,
 Their offspring, and their honorable Birth,
 That is a Lanthorne lightning their true Fames,
 Which Truth can neuer burne in Enuies flames:

Worthy

Worthie of wonder are these three times three,
Folded in brazen Leaues of memorie.

Windfor a Castle of exceeding strength,
First built by Aruiragus Brytaines King,
But finished by Arthur at the length,
Of whose rare deedes our Chronicles do ring,
And poets in their verse his praise do sing:
For his Round-table and his war-like Fights,
Whose valiantnesse the coward Mind affrights.

This Brytish King in warres a Conquerer,
And wondrous happie in his Victories,
Was a companion of this noble Order,
And with his person grac'd these Dignities,
Great dignities of high exceeding Valour:
For he himselfe the selfe-same Honor tooke,
That all his following States did euer brooke.

This Paragon whose name our time affrights,
At Windfor Castle dubbed in one day,
One hundred and iust fortie valiant Knights,
With his keene trustie Sword, and onely stay,
(Cald Dridwin) that his Loue did ouerway:
And with that Sword the very day before,
He slue as many Saxon foes or more.

But English Edward third of Memorie,
In blessed and religious zeale of Loue,
Built vp a Colledge of exceeding glory,
That his kind care to England did approue.

F

This Collidge doth this Castle beautifie :
 The Honor of the place is held so deare,
 That many famous Kings are buried there.

But one rare thing exceeding admirable
 That to this day is held in great renowne,
 And to all Forreiners is memorable,
 The name of which makes Englands foes to frowne,
 And puls the pride of forreine Nations downe,
Knights of the Garter and Saint Georges Croffe,
 Betok'ning to the Foe a bloudie losse.

Here followeth the Birth, Life and Death of honourable Arthur King of Brittain.

To the courteous Reader.

*C*ourteous Reader, having spoken of the first foundation of that yet renowned castle of Windsor by Aruiragus king of Britain, & finished by that succeeding prince of worthy memory famous king Arthur; I thought good (being intreat-ed by some of my honourable-minded Friends, not to let slip so good and fit an occasion, by reason that there yet remaines in this doubtfull age of opinions, a controuersie of that esteemed Prince of Brittain) to write not according to ages obliuio, but directed onely by our late Historiographers of England, who no doubt haue taken great paines in the searching foorth of the truth of that first Christian worthie: and whereas (I know not directed

directed by what blindness) there haue bene some Writers (as I thinke enemies to truth) that in their erroneous censures haue thought no such mā cuer to be liuing; How fabulous that should seeme to be, I leaue to the iudgement of the best readers, who knowe for certaine, that that neuer dead Prince of memory, is more beholding to the French, the Romane, the Scot, the Italian, yea to the Greekes themselves, then to his own Countrymen, who haue fully and wholly set foorth his fame and liuelyhood: then how shamelesse is it for some of vs, to let slip the truth of this Monarch? And for more confirmatiō of the truth, looke but in the Abbey of Westminster at Saint Edwards shrine, there shalt thou see the print of his royal Scale in red wax closed in Berrill, with this inscription, Patricius Arthurus Gallie, Germaniæ, Daciæ Imperator. At Douer likewise you may see Sir Gawins skull and Cradocks mantle: At Winchester, a Citie well knowne in England, his famous round Table, with many other notable monuments too long to rehearse: Besides I my selfe haue seen imprinted, a french Pamphlet of the armes of king Arthur, and his renowned valiant Knights, set in colours by the Heraulds of France: which charge of impressiō would haue been too great, otherwise I had inserted them orderly in his Life and Actions: but (gentle Reader) take this my paines gratefully, and I shal hereafter more willingly strine to employ my simple wit to thy better gratulation; I haue here set downe (turned from French prose into English meter) the words of the Herald vnder the arms of that worthy Brittainc.

King Arthur in his warlike Shield did beare
 Thirteene rich Crownes of purified gold:
 He was a valiant noble Conquerer,
 As ancient Memorie hath truly told:
 His great Round-table was in Britanie,
 Where chosen Knights did do their homage yearely.

F 2

The strange Birth, honorable Coronation and most unhappie Death of famous Arthur King of Brytaine.

OF noble Arthurs birth, of Arthurs fall,
 Of Arthurs solemne Coronation,
 Of Arthurs famous deedes Heroicall,
 Of Arthurs battels and inuasion,
 And that high minded worthie Brytish King,
 Shall my wits memorie be deifying.

In the last time of Vter furnam'd Pendragon,
 So called for his wittie pollicies,
 Being a King of estimation,
 In famous Brytaine mongst his owne allies,
 There was a mightie Duke that gouern'd Cornwaile,
 That held long warre, and did this King affaile.

This Duke was nam'd the Duke of Tintagil:
 After these hot bred warres were come to end,
 He sojourn'd at a place cald Terrabil,
 From whence Pendragon for this Duke did fend,
 And being wounded fore with Cupids sting,
 Charg'd him his Wife vnto the Court to bring.

His Wife a passing Ladie, louely, wife,
 Chaste to her husbands cleare vnspotted bed,
 Whose honor-bearing Fame none could supprize,

But

But Vesta-like her little time she led :
Igrene her name on whose vnequall beautie
Pendragon doted, led by humane folly.

At length he broke his mind vnto a Lord,
 A trustie Councillour and noble Friend,
 That foone vnto his minds grieffe did accord,
 And his Kings louing loue-thoughts did commend,
 Telling Pendragon this should be his best,
 To tell the Dutcheffe of his sweete request.

But she a Woman, sterne, inexorable,
 Willing fond Lufts inchauntments to resist,
 All his tongues smoothing words not penetrable,
 In her chaste bosomes Gate could not insift,
 But straight she told her Husband how she sped,
 Left that his grace should be dishonoured.

And counfeld him to passe away in haste,
 That Nights darke duskie mantle might oreshade,
 Their flying bodies, leaft at last they taste,
 More miserie then Time did ere inuade,
 " For Lust is such a hot inflamed thing,
 " It gouerneth mans senses, rules a King.

And as the Duchesse spake, the Duke departed,
 That neither Vicer nor his Councell knew,
 How his deepe bosomes *Lord the Dutcheffe thwarted,
 But marke the story well what did ensue :
 Soone as the King perceiued their intent,
 Intemperate Rage made him impatient.

* Cupid.

F 3

Away with Muficke for your ftrings do iarre,
 Your found is full of Difcords, harfh and ill,
 Your Diapazon, makes a humming warre
 Within mine cares, and doth my fences fill
 With immelodious mourning ; She is gone
 That rul'd your felues and Instruments alone.

Away fond riming Ouid, left thou write
 Of Prognus murther, or Lucretias rape,
 Of Igreus iourney taken in the night,
 That in the blacke gloom'd filence did efcape :
 O could no Dogge haue bark'd, no Cocke Laue crow'd,
 That might her paffage to the King haue fhew'd.

No mirth pleafde Vter, but grimme Melancholy
 Haunted his heeles, and when he fate to reft,
 He pondred in his mind Igrenas beautie,
 Of whom his care-craz'd head was full poffeft :
 Nothing was now contentiue to his mind,
 But Igreus name, Igrene to him vnkind.

At laft his noble Peeres with pitie mou'd,
 To fee the Kings fodaine perplexitie,
 With a great care that their Liege Emperour lou'd,
 For to allay his great extremitie,
 Did counfell him to fend for Garloyes wife,
 As he would anfwer it vpon his life.

Then prefently a Meffenger was fent,
 To tell the Duke of his wifes fecret folly :
 This was the fubftance of his whole intent,

Tō

To bring his wife to Court immediatly :
 Or within threescore dayes he did protest,
 To fetch him thither to his little rest.

Which when the Duke had warning, straight he furnish'd
 Two Castles with well-fenc'd artillerie,
 With vitailles and with men he garnish'd,
 His strongest Holds for such an enemye :
 And in the one he put his hearts-deare Treasure,
 Faire Igrene that he loued out of measure,

That Castle which the Duke himselfe did hold,
 Had many Posternes out and issues thence,
 In which to trust his life he might be bold,
 And safely the warres Furie to commence :
 But after-telling time did wonders worke,
 That Foxes in their holes can neuer lurke.

Then in all haste came Vter with his hoast,
 Pitching his rich paulions on the ground,
 Of his aspiring mind he did not boast,
 For Loue and Anger did his thoughts confound,
 Hot warre was made on both sides, people slaine,
 And many Death-doore-knocking Soules complaine.

Loue and minds anguish so perplext the King
 For Igrene that incomparable Dame,
 That Cupids sicknesse pearc'd him with a sting,
 And his warres lowd Alarums ouercame,
Venus intreated Mars awhile to stay,
 And make this time a sporting Holiday.

Then came sir Ulfius, a most noble Knight,
 And askt his King the cause of his disease,
 Being willing in a subiects gracious right,
Vter Pendragons mind in heart to please :
 Ah said the King, Igrene doth captiuate
 My Heart, and makes my Senfes subiugate.

Courage, my gracious Liege, I will go find
 That true diuining prophet of our Nation,
Merlin the wife that shall content your mind,
 And be a Moderator in this action :
 His learning, wifedome, and vnseene experience,
 Shall quickly giue a Salue for loues offence.

So Vlfius at the length from him departed,
 Asking for Merlin as he past the way,
 Who by great fortunes chance sir Vlfius thwarted,
 As he went by in beggers base aray :
 Demanding of the Knight in baseness meeke,
 Who was the man he went so farre to seeke ?

Vlfius amazed at his base attire,
 Told him it was presumption to demaund
 The name of him for whom he did enquire,
 And therefore would not yeeld to his command :
 Alas said Merlin I do plainly see,
Merlin you seeke, that Merlin I am he.

And if the King will but fulfill my heft,
 And will reward my true deseruing heart,
 In his loues agonies he shal be blest

So

So that he follow what I shall impart,
 Vpon my Knighthood he will honor thee,
 With fauour & rewards most royally.

Then Vlfius glad departed in all haft,
 And rode amaine to King Pendragons fight,
 Telling his Grace Merlin he met at laft,
 That like a Lampe will giue his Louclaies light.
 Where is the man? I wifht for him before.
 See where he ftands my Liege at yonder doore.

When Vter faw the man, a fudden ioy,
 And vncompre'nded gladneffe fild his hart :
 With kind embracements met him on the way,
 And to him gan his fecrets to impart.
 Leauē off, quoth Merlin, I do know your mind,
 The faire-fac'd Lady Igreue is vnkind.

But if your Maiefty will here proteft,
 And fweare as you are lawfull King annoited,
 To do my will, nothing fhall you moleft,
 But follow my direftions being appointed.
 I fweare quoth Vter by the Euangelifts,
 He dyes for me that once thy will refifts.

Sir, faid the Prophet Merline, this I craue,
 That fhall betoken well what ere betide,
 The firft faire sportiue Night that you fhall haue,
 Lying fafely nuzled by faire Igreues fide,
 You fhall beget a fonne whole very Name,
 In after-ftcaling Time his foes fhall tame.

G

That child being borne your Grace must giue to me,
 For to be nourished at my appointment,
 That shal redound much to his maiestie,
 And to your Graces gracious good intent :
 That shall be done : (quoth Merlin) let's away,
 For you shall sleepe with Igrene ere't be day.

And as Ioue stole to faire Alcmenas bed,
 In counterfeiting great Amphytrio,
 By the same lust-directed line being led,
 To Igrene's louely chamber must you go :
 You shall be like the Duke her husbands greatnesse,
 And in his place possesse her Husbands sweetnesse.

And you my noble Lord, sir Vlfus,
 Shall be much like sir Bruftias a faire Knight,
 And I will counterfeit the good Jordanus,
 And thus weele passe together in the night,
 But see you question not, fay you are diseased,
 And hic to bed there shall your heart be pleased.

But on the morrow do not rise my Liege,
 Vntill I come to councell for the best,
 For ten miles off you know doth lie the Siege,
 That will not turne these night-sports to a iest,
 Pendragon pleas'd hast'd for to embrace,
 The sweet'ft got pray that euer King did chase.

Soone as the Duke of Tintagill did perceiue,
 That Vter left alone his royall armie,
 He issued from his Castle to bereaue,

The

The souldiers of their liues by pollicie :
 But see his fortune, by that wily traine,
 That he had laid for others he was flaine.

The subtill-luft directed King went on,
 Maskt in a strange deuifed new found shape,
 To simple-minded Igrene vnlike Pendragon,
 And three long houres lay in his louers lap :
 There he begat the christian King of Kings,
 Whose fame Caiſter Swannes in pleasure sings.

Aſoone as day-betok'ning Phabus Chariot,
 Had croft his ſifters waggon in the ſkie,
Merlin in haſte to Vters chamber got,
 Bidding good morrow to his Maieſtie :
 And told him vnrecalled Time did ſtay,
 To haſte him from his pleaſure thence away.

Vter amaz'd with Igrene in his armes,
 Wiſht that the Prophet had no vſe of tongue,
 Whoſe doleſull ſound breath'd forth theſe harſh Alarmes,
 And like the night-Crow craokt a deadly ſong ;
 Ah what a hell of grieſe t'was to depart,
 And leaue the new-got Treafure of his heart.

Then by the lawne-like Hand he tooke his louer,
 Being warm'd with blood of a diſſembling Husband,
 Deſire in her cheekes ſhe could not ſmother,
 And her Loue-dazeling eye none could withſtand :
 He kiſt her twice or thrice and bad adue,
 As willing his nights pleaſure to renew :

G 2

But when the late betrayed Lady knew,
 How that her true betrothed Lord was flaine,
 Ere that nights reuelling did first enfue,
 In fecret to her felfe ſhe wept amaine :
 Amaz'd and maruelling who that ſhould be,
 That rob'd her husband of his treafurie.

And to her felfe ſhe gan for to relate,
 The iniuries of her vnſpotted life,
 And in her mind ſhe liu'd difconſolate,
 Banning her baſe-bad Fortune being a wife ;
 Wiſhing for euer ſhe had liu'd a maide,
 Rather than her chaſt thoughts ſhould be betraid.

The noble Councell that attended Vter,
 Began with grauitie for to deuife,
 That (where their King had doted much vpon her)
 Her beautie his young thoughts to equalize,
 To knit them both in Hymens ſacred right,
 And then in lawfull wife to taſt delight.

This motion made vnto their Soueraigne,
 Of a warme luſtic ſtomacke youthfull bloud,
 Thought it a heauen ſuch a Saint to gaine,
 That would reuiue his ſpirits, do him good :
 And gaue conſent to haue her honoured,
 With marriage Rites, the which were ſoone performed.

Halfe a yeare after as the King and Queene,
 Then growing great with child a bed were lying,
 The Curtaines drawne vnwilling to be ſcene :

This

This policie the King himfelfe deuifing :
 Asking whofe child it was that fhe did beare,
 Speake gentle Igreue tell me without feare.

The Queene amazed at this queftion,
 Being fully wrapt in pale timiditie,
 Knew not to anfwer this fad action,
 Becaufe fhe fully knew her innocencie :
 He vrg'd her ftill, at length fhe waxed bold,
 And ftoutly to the King the truth fhe told.

With that he kift his Queene that was beguil'd,
 And did recomfort her being halfe forlorne,
 Telling t'was he that did beget the child,
 The child that from her faire wombe fhould be borne :
 With that a fudden ioy did repoffeffe
 Her pensue hart, whome Fortune late did bleffe.

Then Merlin (that did alwaies loue the King,
 As bearing chiefe affiance to his countrey)
 Sought to prouide for the childs nourifhing,
 Therein to fhew his well difpofed dutie.
 As thou decreeft faid Vter, muft it be,
 My deare Sonnes fortunes Ile commit to thee.

Well faid the Prophet, I do know a Lord,
 A faithfull paffing true difpofed man,
 That to your Graces pleafure will accord,
 And in your feruice do the beft he can :
 Commit your child vnto his cuftodie,
 A man renoun'd in famous Britany.

G 3

His name Sir Heclor : send a Messenger,
 To will him come vnto the Court with speede,
 And that your Maiestie must needs conferre,
 Of matters helpfull in a Princes neede.

When he is come your Grace may certifie,
 You'le put your sonne & heire to his deliuerie.

And when that Fortunes child kind Fortunes heire,
 (For so the Destinies prognosticate)
 Shall be brought foorth into the open aire,
 That of faire Igrene lately was begate :
 At yonder priuie Posterne being vnchristened,
 You must deliuer it me to be baptized.

As Merlin had deuised, so t'was done :
 For all the Court to him did yeeld obeyfance :
 And now Sir Heclor to the king is come,
 And to Pendragon made his deare affiance,
 Wishing his Wife might nourish that bright sonne,
 Whose Mornings glorie was not yet begunne.

Then when the louely Queene was foone deliuered,
 Of that rich bearing Burthen to her ioy,
 The King himfelfe in perfon hath commaunded,
 Two Ladies and two Knights to beare the boy,
 Bound vp in cloth of gold being rich of State,
 And giue it to the pooreman at the gate,

So Merlin had the Prince at his disposing,
 Committing it to Heclors faithfull wife :
 Now nothing wanted but the sweete baptizing,

To

To grace the Prince of Princes all his life :
 A holy reuerent Man indu'de with fame,
Arthur of Britaine cald the Princes name.

After the royall Solemnation,
 Of that blacke mournfull weping funerall,
 Of Vter that we name the great Pendragon,
 By subtill practise brought vnto his fall :
 The sixteenth yeare of his victorious raigne,
 By poison was this braue Pendragon slaine.

His body vnto Stone-heng being brought,
 Hard by his brother Aurelius is he laid,
 In a faire Monument then richly wrought,
 Dead is the King whose life his foes difmaid,
 But from his loynes he left a sonne behind,
 The right Idca of his fathers mind.

Great Arthur whom we call the Britaines King,
 A man renown'd for famous victories,
Saxons and Pictes to homage he did bring,
 As you may read in auncient histories :
 Our later Chronicles do testifie,
 King Arthurs noble mind in Chiuallrie.

Twelue noble battels did King Arthur fight,
 Against the Saxons men of hardie strength,
 And in the battels put them still to flight,
 Bringing them in subiection at the length :
 He neuer stroue to driue them quite away,
 But stragling here and there he let them stay.

Valerius witnessed that K.
Arthur conquered thirty king-domes, for as the a great co-
 many of Geuer-
 nors held vnder
 their iurisdiction the Island together with France and Germanie.

In Southry, Kent, and Norfolke did they dwell,
 Still owing homage to king Arthures greatnesse,
 Whose puiffance their pride did alwaies quell,
 Yet did he temper rigour with his meeknesse :
 And like a Lion scorn'd to touch the Lambe,
 Where they submissiue-like vnto him came,

Against the Pictes he held continuall warre,
 The which vnto the Saxons were allide,
 And with the subtill Scot did alwaies iarre,
 Who neuer true to Arthur would abide :
 But (scorning his aduancement to the Crowne)
 Did thinke by force to pull his greatnesse downe.

The chiefeft cause of this hot mortall strife,
 That mou'd these Kings to be diffentious,
 Was that the King of Pictes had tane to wife
 The eldest sifter of Aurelius,
 And Cornon King of Scots had married
 The youngest sifter to his Princely bed.

Wherefore they thought the Brytish Regiment,
 Should haue descended to the lawfull heires
 Of Anna, wife to both in gouernment,
 And he as King to rule their great affaires :
 And do inferre king Arthures barstardie,
 And vniust claime to that high dignitie.

And presently they do dispatch in haft,
 Ambassadors to famous Brytanie,
 Of their great Peeres for to demaund at last,

The kingdomes Crowne and kingdomes Royaltie :
 Who scorn'g for to heare a stranger nam'd,
 Crowned king Arthur, whom the world hath fam'd.

The Coronation of King Arthur, and the Solemnitie thereof: the proud message of the Romanes, and the whole resolution of King Arthur and his Nobles.

THe appointed time and great Solemnitie,
 Approch'd of king Arthurs Coronation,
 To which high states of mightie Dignitie,
 Asssembled at the Citie of Caerleon,
 In Cæsars time call'd Vrbs Legionum :
 A Title doubtlesse bearing some import,
 Where many famous Brytaines did resort.

To grace king Arthur whom the Britaines loued,
 Came three Arch bishops Englands chiefe renowne,
 Both London, Yorke, and Dubright Honor moued,
 On Arthurs head to set the British Crowne,
 That after puld the pride of Nations downe :
 Vnto the Pallace of this princely King,
 They were conuay'd where true-born Fame did spring.

Dubright (because the Court at that time lay Within the compasse of his Diocesse)
 In his own person on this Royall day,
 Richly to furnish him he did addresse,
 His loue vnto his King he did expresse,

H

And at his hands the King was dignified,
When Aue Caesar lowd the people cride.

This happie Coronation being ended,
The King was brought in sumptuous royaltie,
With all the peoples harts being befriended,
To the Cathedrall church of that same See,
Being the Metropolitall in nobilitie,
With lowd exclaiming ioy of peoples voyce,
That God might bleffe their Land for such a choice

On either hand did two Archbishops ride,
Supporting Arthur of Britania,
And foure Kings before him did abide,
Angifell King of stout Albania,
And Cadual King of Vencdoxia,
Cador of Cornewaille mongst these Princes past,
And Sater of Denetia was the last.

These foure attired in rich ornaments,
Foure golden Swords before the King did beare,
Betokening foure royall Gouernments,
And foure true Noble harts not dreading feare,
That Ennie from their breasts can neuer teare :
Before them playd such well-tun'd melodie,
That birds did sing to make it heauenly.

King Arthurs Queene vnto the Church was brought,
With many noble Peeres being conducted :
Her Armes and Titles royally were wrought,
And to her noble Fame were garnished,

That

That Infamie had neare diminished :

Foure Queenes before her bore foure filuer Doues,
Expressing their true Faith and husbands Loues.

To braue King Arthur on this solemne feast,
This day of high vnspeakeable dignitie,
Came foure graue discreet persons of the best,
From Romes Lieutenant, proud in Maiestie,
Carying in token of their Embassage
Greene Oliue boughs, and their dear Lieges message.

*The Epistle of Lucius Tiberius the Romane Lieutenant, to Arthur
King of Britanie.*

LVcius Tiberius, Romes great gouernour,
To Arthur King of large Britania,
As he deserueth fauour at our hands :
Rome and the Romane Senators do wonder,
And I my selfe exceedingly do muse,
To thinke of thy audacious haughtie mind,
And thy tyrannicall dealing to our State :
Hote firie Anger boyleth in my breast,
And I am mou'd with honour of the cause,
For to reuenge thy Iniuries to Rome :
And that like one or' proud of his estate,
Refusest to acknowledge her thy head,
Neither regardest speedily to redresse,
Thy base and blind obliuous ouersight,
And vniust dealings to offend the Senate,

H 2

*Unto whose high imperiall Dignitie,
 Unlesse Forgetfulnesse do beare thine eyes,
 Thou knowest the whole huge Circle of the world,
 Are made Contributorie and owe vs homage.
 The tribute that the Britaines ought to pay,
 The which the Senate did demaund of thee,
 Being due vnto the Romaine Emperie :
 For that braue Iulius Cæsar had enioy'd
 And many worthy Romanes many yeares,
 Thou in contempt of vs and our Estate,
 Our honorable Estate and our dignitie,
 Presum'st iniuriously for to detaine :
 The confines of wel-seated Gallia,
 The Provinces of Sauoy and Daulphine,
 With hot-flam'd fierie warre hast thou subdu'd,
 And gotten in thy large possession ;
 The Ilands of the bordring Ocean,
 The Kings whercof so long as we enioy'd them,
 Payd tribute to our Noble auncestors.
 The Senate highly mou'd with thy presumption,
 Determine for to redemaund amends,
 And restitution for thy open wrongs :
 I therefore from the noble Senatours,
 Commaund thee on thy true Allegiance,
 To Rome, to them, to me, and our Estate,
 That in the midst of August next ensuing,
 Thou do repaire to Rome, there for to answer,
 Before the worthie Senate and the Lords
 Thy Trespasse ; and abide arbitrement,
 Such as by them shall there be ordred,
 And iustice shall impose vpon thy head :*

Which

*Which thing if thou presumptuously refuse,
I will forthwith invade thy Territories,
Wast thy whole Countrey, burne thy Townes and Cities;
And what so ere thy rashnesse hath detain'd,
From Rome or from the Romaine Emperie,
I will by dint of sword subduc againe.
Thus arm'd with hopefull Resolution,
Weele stay thy answer of submission.*

Lu. Tib.

Cador the Duke of Cornewaile his Oration to the King.

R *Enormed Arthur and thrice worthie Britaine:
O how a liucy bloud doth fill my veins,
At this proud message of the heretic Romaines,
I hitherto my Lord haue bene in feare,
Lest that the worthy Britaines with much ease,
And long continuall, peace and quietnesse,
Should grow to too much slouth and cowardize,
And lose that honorable Reputation,
Of Chiuallric and Martiall discipline:
Wherein (right Noble King) we haue bene counted,
For to surmount all Nations of the world.
For where the use of Armes is not esteem'd,
But buried in Obliuions loathsome caue,
And wanton dallying held in esteem,
It cannot chuse but pale-face Cowardize,
Must dimme and cleane deface all worthy Vertue.
Five yeares haue fully runne their monthly course,*

H 3

*Since we put off our armour from our backs,
 Or heard the Trumpets clangor in our cares,
 Or marcht in triumph with the rattling Drum,
 Being nuzzled in effeminate delights,
 God willing that our names should not be blotted
 With the foule staine of beastly sluggardie,
 Hath stirred vp the proud insulting Romanes,
 To whet our dull edg'd swords not now in use,
 To cut their heads off in this rightfull cause,
 And scoure our rustie Armour long laid vp,
 To buckle with so proud an enemie,
 Therefore great Arthur in thy greatnesse raise
 Thy colours vp, for to vpreare thy praise.*

Ca. Cor.

The Oration of King Arthur to his Lordes and Followers.

M*Y Fellowes and my deare Companions,
 Both in the aduerse chances of our age,
 And prosperous successefull happinesse,
 Whose true vspeakable fidelities,
 In giuing counsell touching warres abroad,
 And home-bred mutinies amongst our selues,
 With good successefulnesse haue I perceau'd,
 In your deepe wisedomes and your grauitie.
 Affoord me now your honorable aides,
 Wisely foreseeing what you think conuenient,
 Touching the proud command ment sent from Rome,
 A thing at first carefully deliberated,
 Is in the end most easily tollerated:*

We

*We therefore shall with easier burden brooke,
The haughty message of Tiberius Lucius,
If amongst our selves in wiselome we conferre,
How and which way to answer his demaund,
And surely (noble Followers) I suppose,
We haue no cause to feare their sorreine braues.
For that vpon a most vniust request,
He seekes to haue a tribute paid from Britaine,
Because forsooth in Iulius Cæsars time,
Through iarres and discords of the ancient Brytains,
The tribute hath bene due and payable:
For when our countrie was at full possess,
With ciuill garboiles and domesticke brawles,
Their Cæsar did ariue within this land,
And with this armed souldiers full of force,
Brought in subiection that vniquiet Nation,
By this allcadgance they vniustly craue,
Tribute and satisfaction at our hands,
For nothing that is got by violence,
May iustly be possess by violence.
Sith therefore he presumeth to demaund,
A thing being most vnlawfull at our hands,
By the same reason let vs demaund of him,
Tribute at Rome mauger their Romish power,
And he that is the mightier in force,
Let him possess the honor of the tribute,
For if his allegations and demaunds,
Be forcible and worthie to be kept,
Because their Cæsar and some Romane Princes,
Haue sometimes conquered Brytania,
By the like reason I do thinke that Rome,*

*Ought to pay tribute and to do vs homage,
 Because my Predecessors conquered it :
 Bellin the noble King of Brytanie,
 With his braue brother Brennus warlike ayde,
 Being then accounted Sauoies noble Duke,
 Razed the wals of Rome, and set his Standard
 With victorie vpon the Citie gates,
 And in the middle of their Market place,
 Hung vp twentie of their chiefest Noblemen.
 And Constantine the sonne of Helena,
 And Maximinianus my uccer Cousins,
 Were both inthroni'd in the Imperiall seate,
 And gouernment of Romes great Emperie.
 As touching Fraunce and other Hands there,
 We neede not answer their out-brauing termes :
 For they refused to defend their owne,
 When we by force redeem'd them from their hands.
 Then counsell me thrise-worthy Brytaine Peccres,
 Abandoning base cowardize and feares.*

K. Arthur.

The Answer of Howell King of litle Brytaine.

T*Hough all your wisdomes and your grauities,
 Handmaidcs to Counsell and Nobilitie,
 Should be engraue'd in one golden leafe,
 More to the purpose could not you inferre,
 Then thy most graue and exquisite Oration,
 Thy eloquent and Tully-like aduise*

Hath

*Hath furnisht vs with such experiment,
 Whereby we ought incessantly to praise,
 In you the wisdome of a constant man :
 For if with all post expedition,
 You will prepare a voyage unto Rome,
 That doth expect our haste and royall comming,
 According to the reasons you allage,
 I doubt not but that faire Victoria,
 Will sit in triumph on our conquering Helmes,
 To fright the mindes of Romish aduersaries,
 Sith we defend our auncient libertie,
 Disdaining for to beare a scruiile yoke,
 Which to this day the Britaines do maintaine :
 Let vs go chearefully and demaund of them,
 With Iustice what vniustly they demaund :
 For he that doth deface anothers right,
 And thinkes vniustly for to dispossesse,
 And take from him his owne inheritance
 Deseruedly, and with a worthy meanes,
 Not violating large and hostile Armes,
 May he be put from that which is his owne,
 By him to whom the wrong is offered.
 Seeing therefore that the Romanes would usurpe,
 The royall dignitie of worthy Britaine,
 Due to your honorable auncestors,
 I doubt not (noble King) but weele regaine,
 That which your Predecessors haue possess,
 Euen in the middle of their proudest Citie,
 If we may come to buckle with our foes.
 This is the consiēt that true hearted Britaines,
 So long haue wisht to happen to our age.*

I

*These be the prophesies of wise Sibilla,
 Long time agoe, plainly and truly told,
 And now at length fulfilled to our ioy,
 That of the third race of the worthie Britaines,
 There should be borne a Prince to repossesse,
 The Romish Empire and their Dignitie:
 For two of these the prophesie is past,
 In Belin and that worthie Constantine,
 Who ouercame, and gaue the Armes of Rome:
 Now haue we none but you my gracious Liege,
 The third and last, not least in all our eyes,
 To whom this high Exploit is promised:
 Make haste therefore most royall Soueraigne,
 For to receiue that which our God will giue,
 Hasten for to subdue their willing minds,
 Which prefer vp their honor to your hands,
 Hasten deare Liege for to aduance vs all,
 That willingly will spend our liues and lands,
 For the aduancement of our libertie.
 And to atchieue this Labour worthie King,
 Ten thousand armed souldiers will I bring.*

Ho. K. of Brit

Angusel King of Albania his Answere to the King.

*S*ince first I heard my Soueraigne speake his mind,
 Ful fraught with Eloquēce and learned Counsel,
 A sodaine ioy did so possesse my soule,
 As that in words I cannot vtter forth

As

The explanation of my willing thoughts :
In all our Victories and Conquests wonne,
Subduing many Regions, many Kings,
Nothing at all in honour haue we gain'd,
If that we suffer the proud-minded Romanes,
And haucie Germaines to vsurpe vpon vs,
And do not now reuenge those bloudie slaughters,
Enacted on our friends and countrymen.
And sith occasion now is profered,
And Libertie to trie our force of Armes,
I do reioyce to see this happie day,
Wherein we may but meet and ioyne with them :
I thirst my Lord in heart for sweet reuenge,
As if three dayes I had beenc kept from drinke ;
The wounds I should receiue vpon that day
Would be as pleasant to my labouring soule,
As Water to a thirstie Traueller,
Or else Releasement to a man condemn'd,
Nay death it selfe were welcome to my bosome,
For to reuenge our Fathers iniurics,
Defend our libertie, aduance our King :
Let vs giue onfet on that meacocke Nation,
Those fond effeminate vnruly peole,
And fight it out vnto the latest man ;
That after we haue spread our wauiug Colours,
In signe of Triumph and of Victorie,
We may enjoy the Honors they possesse,
And for my part renowned valiant King,
Two thousand armed horsemen will I bring.

An. K. Alb.

A Royall armie Arthur hath prouided,
 To beard the brauing Romanes in their Countrie,
 And like a Martialist hath them diuided,
 To buckle with so proud an Enemy :
 And Courage ioynd with Resolution,
 Doth pricke them forwards to this Action.

The Britains hawtie and refulued men,
 Stout, valiant, of Bellonas warlike brood,
 Chear'd on their Followers, and began agen
 For to reuiue their new decayed blood :
 And to redeeme to Arthur and his Line,
 What once was wonne by valiant Constantine.

Now founds his Drumme a march in chearfull fort,
 Now his loud winded Trumpets checke the aire,
 And now the Britains to him do resort,
 Not fearing warres affliction or despaire :
 But all with one voyce promise victorie
 To Arthur King of famous Britainy.

His Colours they are wauing in the wind,
 Wherein is wrought his Armes of ancestrie,
 His Pendants are in formall wise assign'd,
 Quartred at large by well read Heraldrie :
 Cuffing the ayre that struggles for to kisse,
 The gaudineffe of faire King Arthurs blisse.

Within his spreading Ensigne first he bore,
 Allotted from his royall familie,
 Three flying Dragons and three Crownes he wore,

Per-

Portraid de Or, the field of Azure die,
 His fathers Coate, his Mothers Countries grace,
 His honors Badge, his cruell foes deface.

At last vnto himfelfe he hath assumed,
 And tooke to Armes proper to his desire,
 As in his faithfull mind being best accounted,
 And fitting to those thoughts he did require :
 A crosse of Siluer in a field of Vert,
 A gracious Embleame to his great desert.

On the first quarter of this field was figured,
 The image of our Ladie with her Sonne
 Held in her armes ; this he desired,
 Wherein his new-growne valour was begonne :
 And bearing this fame Figure forth right nobly,
 Did maruellous Actes and teates of Chiuallrie.

This Signe in elder ages being odious,
 And hated of the bad deseruing mind,
 By his deare blood is made most pretious
 Our vnpure Sinne by him being full rebind :
 A great triumphant Signe, a Signe of ioy,
 A blessed Crosse to free vs from annoy.

To this the righteous man bowes downe his head,
 And this the heauenly Angels do adore,
 By this our vnpure foules with life is fed,
 And Diuels fearing this do much deplore :
 Hereon he vanquisht Sathan, Hell, and Sinne,
 And by this Signe our new-life we begin.

Wife, learned Historiographers do write,
 That this pure Signe of the most holy Crosse
 Was sent from God, to Mercuries delight,
Iulian the Apostata's onely losse,
 And that an Angell brought to Mercurie,
 All Armour for his backe most necessarie.

A Shield of Azure herein coloured,
 A flowrie Crosse between two golden Roses,
 That the proud Iewes minds much distempred,
 Whose vertue in it selfe true Time encloses
 A rich wrought Shield and a most heauenly Armour,
 That to the proud Foe strucke a deadly terrour.

And in the time of Charles the seuenth french King
 The Sunne giuing glorie to the dim-fac'd Morne,
 When early rising Birds alowd did sing,
 And faire cleare clouds the Element did adorne,
 To Englishmen and French from heauen was sent
 A milke-white Crosse within the Firmament.

Which heauenly Signe of both these nations seene,
 The haughtie French mou'd with rebellion
 Against their lawfull King and true-borne Queene,
 Began to yeeld their true submission,
 And tooke it as a great admonishment,
 And Signe betok'ning bitter detriment.

Thus we may see, that the Religion
 Which they conceiued of this blessed fight,
 Altered their minds to veneration,

And

And mollified their harts then full of spight,
 Yeelding vnto their Prince obedience,
 And true submission for their great offence.

This sight of honor, to the French Kings fame
 They did behold, a spectacle to Fraunce,
 At the same time when the third Edward came,
 And in the land his colours did aduance,
 Sending to Clodoueus then their King
 Which there became a Christian by Baptizing.

*Hæc sunt Francorum celebranda insignia Regum,
 Quæ demissa polo, sustinet alma fides
 Et nobis cœlica dona :
 Et pia Francorum placeant insignia Regum,
 Aurca cœlesti primum suffulta colore
 Lilia, Cæsarijs olim iam credita ceruis
 Auri flamma dehinc, veterum victoria Regum.*

And euer since great Clodoucus raigne,
 They did remaine as Ensignes to that Nation,
 Where still before three Toades they did sustaine,
 Their onely pourtraiture of commendation,
 By honor to the English Kings pertaining, (ning.
 That conquer'd Fraunce, when all their pride was wai-

His barbed Horses beat the yeelding ground,
 And with their neighing terrifide their foe,
 Prowd of their riders, in whose harts are found
 A promie to the Romanes ouerthrow.

The glistering shine of their well-fashion'd armour,
Tels all men here doth ride a Conquerour.

Their Armour strongly made and firmly wrought,
Not to the vse of old decayed Time,
Who with their gilded shewes are good for nought,
But like to stonie wals not made with lime,
The Brytaincs went not proudly armoured,
But strong, as scorning to be conquered.

In Calis he his colours doth aduance,
Who all for feare do entertaine this Prince,
And passeth through the regiment of France,
And doth with puiffance the French conuince :
Still marching vp to Paris and to Roane,
Bringing that Countrie in subiection.

And hauing got his Title and his Name
A Title got with famous victorie,
He marcheth forward to enlarge his Fame,
Leauing faire France in his authoritie,
By sword and clemencie he conquer'd Ifland,
And wonne by famous warre the land of Gothland.

Now more and more his armie doth increase,
And mightie Kings do offer him their aide,
So in the country they might liue in peace,
His warlike followers so their minds dismaid :
The name of Arthur King of Britanic,
Hath fear'd the Romish force from Italy.

At

At last he comes to meete his enemye,
 High-harted Lucius that his letters sent,
 To great Carleon with such Maiestie,
 That stiffely did demaund a base intent :
 But now he wisht King Arthur were away,
 For feare he lost the Honor of the day.

The Britaines valour was so admirable,
 As when a Lion meeteth with his Pray ;
 King Arthurs courage so inestimable,
 That nere a Romaine durst his strength assay :
 But like the dust with wind did take their flight,
 Yeelding by Warre what they demaund by Might.

Here lay a heape of Romans slaughtered,
 Trode vnder foote by proud victorious Steedes,
 And here one Friend another murdered,
 Not able for to helpe him in his neede :
 Here bruised Souldiers that alowd did cry,
 Braue Arthur helpe vs in our miserie.

And after he had wonne so great a Field,
 And ouerthrew the Romaine Lucius,
 He pardon'd those that graciously would yeeld,
 And leaue their Leader proud Tiberius :
 Who left his men for feare, and would not fight,
 But hid himselfe in darknesse of the Night.

This base retraite and glorious Victorie,
 To Arthur's honour and Tiberius shame,
 Was spred through Rome, through France, through Italy,

K

An extollation to the Brytish name :
 Who forraged about, yet all did flie,
 Till Arthur tooke them to his pitying mercie.

Forwards towards Rome these Britaines make their way,
 Sounding Defiance as they passe along,
 Their conquering Ensignes still they do display,
 In Armes and hautie courage passing strong :
 All Cities offer peace, all Townes submit
 To Arthurs greatnesse, as a thing most fit.

But as they passe huge Mirmcdons do striue,
 Surnamed Giants, for to stop this King,
 And vow by Paganisme (by which they thriue,)
 His bodie in Oceanus to fling :
 And daunt his followers, who as Fame hath said,
 Of great bigge monstros men were not afraid.

At last they march vpon a large broade plaine,
 When first these hautie Giants he doth spie,
 The Britaines scorne for to retire againe,
 But either winne the honor, or else die :
 Courage quoth Arthur, better die with fame,
 Then yeeld or turne to our immortall shame.

At length they meete, and meeting cope together,
 As when two fauage Boares are full of ire,
 The Victorie as yet inclin'd to neither,
 But from their Creafts and Shields did sparckle fire :
 Inkindled Wrath from Arthurs breast hath sprong,
 That he made passage through the thickest throng.
 The

The King of Giants Arthur meetes withall,
 And copes with him : for in his strength did stand
 His Kingdomes great aduancement, or his fall,
 His Subiects peace, his quietnesse of land :
 But this renowne to Britaine doth remaine,
 The Giant, Arthur hand to hand hath flaine.

When he was downe the rest did faint for feare,
 Which when the British armie had espied,
 Their true-borne valour did they not forbear,
 But all the greene grasse with their bloud they died :
 And made such slaughter of these monfrous men,
 That after-time hath registred agen.

After this Conquest is King Arthur minded,
 With all his royall power to march to Rome,
 And with his Lords he hath determined,
 This gallant Resolution, and this Doome :
 To crowne himselfe by warre their Emperour,
 And ouer all a mightie Governour.

And had not Fortune and Rebellion,
 Stir'd vp his Cousin Mordreds hautie mind,
 At home to make ciuill inuasion,
 Who fought King Arthurs glory for to blind,
 With honour had he re-inkindled fire,
 To burne the wals of Rome to his desire.

But O iake Mordred, thou deceitfull Kinsman,
 (Begot of Treasons heyre) thus to rebell,
 Against thy noble Nephew, who hath wonne

K 2

Cities and peopled Townes that did excell :
 And all he did was for to glorifie
 His Royall kindred and his Noble countrey.

But thou some base-borne Haggard mak'ft a wing,
 Against the Princely Eagle in his flight,
 And like a hissing Serpent seek'ft to sting
 The Lion that did shield thee from despight :
 But now being wakened by his Countries wrong,
 With warre he meanes to visite you ere long.

The news of this proud Rebell in his Land,
 Was like deepe piercing arrowes at his hart,
 Intemperate Rage did make them vnderstand
 King Arthurs furie, and fond Mordreds smart,
 Who vow'd reuengement most vnnaturall,
 On him that fought to bring his friends to thrall.

He founds Retraite with heart-fulvne heauineffe,
 That he must leaue faire Rome vnconquered,
 And marcheth through the Land in quietneffe,
 To be reueng'd on the Vfurper Mordred :
 At this sweet newes of his departing thence,
 The Romaines praise the Rebels excellence.

King Arthur heard at his returne towards Brytaine,
 How Mordred had proclaim'd himselfe there King,
 Those that resisted, he by force hath flaine,
 Vnto their Countries ground a gentle offering,
 And to the Saxon Cheldricke is allide,
 Who landing to their lawfull King denide.

By

By force they driue King Arthur from the shore,
 And like rebellious Monsters kill his men,
 Which when he viewes, he striueth more and more,
 And his great puiffant strength renewes againe,
 And maugre all the power they withstand,
 At Sandwich Noble Arthur taketh Land :

And ioyning battel with his enemies,
 The traytrous Rebels are difcomfited,
 And Mordred all in haft away he flies,
 By Treafons bloudie Traine & murther led,
 To gather Power to renew the fight,
 Vrg'd forward by the Saxon Cheldricks fpight.

The Noble Arthur in this conflict loft
 Some of his followers whom he lou'd too deare ;
 The death of gentle Gawen grieu'd him moft,
 As by his outward forrow did appeare :
 This Gawen was proud Mordreds lawfull brother,
 Legitimate by father and by mother.

O mirrouer of true borne gentilitie,
 Faire mappe of Honor in his gentle blood,
 That rather chofe to loue his noble countrie,
 And feeke the meanes to do his life Liege good,
 Then to defend his kindred by that warre,
 That made the Sonne and moft kind Father iarre.

Kind Gawen, trustie worthie Gentleman,
 Belou'd of Arthur, as deseruedly,
 Recording Time thy faithfulnesse shall scan,

K 3

And loyall Truth wrapt vp in memorie :
 Shall fay in thy Kings quarrell being iust,
 At laft thou diedft, not in thy Brothers trust.

Thy gentle King prepared thy Funeral,
 And laid thy bodie in a Sepulchre,
 In thine owne country richly done and royall,
 At Roffe whose auncestrie shall still endure :
 And like a Nephew, mourn'd and wept for thee,
 Griewing to loofe Brytish Nobilitie.

But to proceede in this vnluckie fight,
 King Angufel was flaine whom Arthur loued,
 A man in whom his countrie tooke delight,
 That ne're with home-bred Treacherie was moued
 In falfe-faith'd Scotland was his bones interd,
 To which before King Arthur him prefer'd.

That vniuft Mordred, Mifchiefes nourifher
 Times bad infamer, Traitor to the State,
 Of his whole Countrie bounds the chiefe perturber,
 Whose name to this day mongft them growes in hate.
 Fled from the battell, getting fhips he faild
 Westward towards Cornwail whẽ his force was quail'd.

But when King Arthur heard of his departure,
 Caufing the refuse Rebels for to flie,
 To make the way of his defence more fure,
 With fpeed he re-inforft his royall armie,
 With new fupplie of hardie men at Armes,
 Whose Refolution fear'd no following harmes.

With

With his whole force he marcheth after him,
 Where all the Kentish men reioyce to see
 King Arthurs Colours, whose rich pride doth dim
 The faire-fac'd Sunne in all his Maiestie :
 Not resting till he came vnto the place,
 Where Mordred was encamped for a space.

By Winchester a Citie of renowne,
 The Traitorous armie of this Mordred lay,
 On whose proud gather'd troupe the Sunne did frowne,
 Fore-shewing to his men a blacke-fac't day :
 And so it prou'd before the selfe-same night ;
Mordred and his best friends were slaine in fight.

At Camblane was this bloudie battell ended,
 Where fame-acthieuing Arthur fore was wounded,
 With gallant Britaine Lords being attended,
 Whose sword (cald Pridwin) manie had confounded,
 Yet Fortunes vnscene immortalitie,
 Sometimes cuts downe sprigs of a Monarchie.

At this dayes dolefull stroke of Arthurs death,
 The glorious shining Sunne lookt pale and wanne,
 And when this Monarch lofed forth his breath,
 The Britaines being amaz'd about him ranne :
 And with their nailes did teare their flesh asunder,
 That they had lost their King the worlds great Wonder.

Ouer this litle Iland he had raigned,
 The full iust terme of fixe and twentie yeares,
 When twelue most famous battels he obtained,

As in our auncient Chronicles appeares,
 And in the Church-yard of faire Glastenburie,
 They held King Arthurs wofull obfequie.

And in the time of fecond Henrics dayes,
 Betweene two pillars was his body found,
 That in his life deferu's immortall praife,
 Layd fixteene foote deepe vnderneath the ground ;
 Because his Saxon foes whom he did chafe,
 Should not with fwords his liueleffe corps deface.

In the laft yeare of Henrics royaltie,
 More then fixe hundred after his buriall,
 By the Abbot of the houle of Glastenburie,
 At laft they found King Arthurs funerall :
Henry de Bloys the Abbots name they gaue,
 Who by the Kings commaund did find the graue.

The principall and chiefe occafion
 That mou'd King Henry for to feeke the place,
 Was that a Bardth in Welch diuifion,
 Recorded Arthurs actes vnto his Grace :
 And in the foresaid Church-yard he did fing,
 That they fhould find the body of the King.

And thofe that dig'd to find his bodie there,
 After they enterd feuen foote deepe in ground,
 A mightie broade ftone to them did appeare,
 With a great leaden Croffe thereto bound,
 And downwards towards the corpses the Croffe did lie,
 Containing this infcripted poefie.

Hic

Hic iacet sepultus inclytus Rex, Arthurus in Insula Analonie.

His bodie whose great actes the world recorded,
When vitall limitation gaue him life,
And Fames shrill golden Trump abroad had founded,
What Warres he ended, what Debate, what Strife,
What Honor to his countrey, what great Loue,
Amongst his faithfull subiects he did proue.

Was not interd in sumptuous royaltie,
With funerall pompe of kindred and of friends,
Nor clofde in marble stone wrought curiously,
Nor none in mourning blacke his King attends,
But in a hollow tree made for the nonce,
They do enter King Arthurs princely bones.

Their outward habite did not shew their mind,
For many millions of sad weeping eies,
In euery streete and corner you might find,
Some beating their bare breast, and some with out cries,
Curfing and Banning that proud Mordreds soule,
That did by warre his princely life controule.

The Kings that were attendant on his traine,
Forgot their kingdomes, and their royall crownes,
Their high proud hautie hearts with griefe were flaine,
Strucke in amaze with Fortunes deadly frownes :
For they had lost their Scepter, Seate, and all,
By princely Arthurs most vnhappie fall.

L

The trunke being opened, at the last they found
 The bones of Arthur King of Brytanie,
 Whose shin-bone being fet vpon the ground,
 (As may appeare by auncient Memoric)
 Reacht to the middle thigh within a spanne,
 Of a tall proper well fet bigge lim'd Man.

And furthermore they found King Arthurs skull,
 Of such great largeness that betwixt his eyes,
 His foreheads space a spanne broad was at full,
 That no true Historiographer denies :
 The forenam'd Abbot liuing in those daies,
 Saw what is written now to Arthurs praife.

The print of tenne wounds in his head appeared,
 All grown together except onely one,
 Of which it seemes this worthie Brytaine died :
 A true Memoriall to his louing Nation ;
 But that was greater far then all the rest,
 Had it bene lesser Brytaine had bene blest.

In opening of the Tombe they found his wife,
 Queene Guiniuere interred with the King,
 The Tresses of her haire as in her life,
 Were finely platted whole and glistering :
 The colour like the most pure refin'd gold,
 Which being toucht straight turned into mould.

Henry de Bloyes at the length translated
 The bones of Arthur and his louely Queene,
 Into the great Church where they were interred,

Within

Within a Marble toombe, as oft was seene :
 Of whom a worthie Poet doth rehearse,
 This Epitaph in sweete Heroicke Verse.

*Hic iacet Arthurus flos regum, gloria regni,
 Quem mores, probitas commendant laude perenni.*

Iohannis Leylandij antiquarij Encomion funerale, in vitam, facta, mortemq; Regis Arthuri inclitissimi.

*S*axonicas toties qui fudit Marte cruento
 Turmas, & peperit spolijs sibi nomen opimis,
 Fulmineo toties Pictos qui contudit ense,
 Imposuitque iugum Scoti cervicibus ingens,
 Qui tumidos Gallos, Germanos quiq. feroces
 Pertulit, & Dacos bello confregit aperto :
 Denique Mordredum è medio qui sustulit illud
 Monstrum, horrendum ingens, dirum seuumque tyrannum,
 Hoc iacet extinctus monumento Arthurus alto,
 Militiæ clarum decus & virtutis alumnus,
 Gloria nunc cuius terram circumuolat omnem,
 Ætherij que petit, sublimia tecta tonantis.
 Vos igitur gentis Proles generosa Britannæ
 Induperatori ter magno assurgite vestro :
 Et tumulo sacro Roseas inferte Corollas,
 Officij testes redolentia munera vestri.

Thus Englished.

He that so oft the Saxon Troupes did foile,
 And got a name of worth with richest spoile :
 He that with brandisht sword the Picts destroyd,
 And yok'd the Scots, their stubborn necks annoy'd :
 He that the loftie French and Germanes fierce did smite,

L 2

And Dacians force with Warre did vanquish quite :
 He lastly which cut off that monster Mordreds life,
 A cruell Tyrant, horrible, mightie, full of strife :
Arthur lyes buried in this Monument,
 Warres chiefeft garland, Vertues sole intent ;
 Whose Glorie through the world ftill fwiftly flies,
 And mounts with Fames wings vp to the thundring skies.
 You gentle Offspring of the Britaines blood,
 Vnto this puiffant Emperour do honours good,
 And on his Tombe lay Garlands of sweete Rofes,
 Sweete gifts of Dutie, and sweet louing pofies.

Finis Epitaphij.

No. Arth.

The true Pedigree of that famous Worthie King Arthur, collected out of many learned Authors.

TWelue men in number entred the vale of Aualon :
Ioseph of Arimathea was the chiefeft we confesse, Iofue the sonne of Ioseph his father did attend on,
 With other ten, these Glaston did poffesse,
Hilarius the Nephew of Ioseph first begate
Iofue the Wife : Iofue Aminadab,
Aminadab Castellors had by fate :
Castellors got Manael that louely Lad,
 And Manael by his wife had faire-fac'd Lambard,
 With another deare sonne furnamed Vrlard ;
 And Lambard at the length begot a sonne,

That

That had Igrene borne of his wife,
 Of this Igrene, Vter the great Pendragon
 Begot King Arthur famous in his life,
 Where by the truth this Pedigree doth end,
Arthur from Iosephs loynes did first descend.
Peter Cousin to Ioseph of Arimathca,
 Being sometimes King of great Arcadia,
 Begat Erlan that famous worthy Prince,
 And Erlan gat Melianus, that did conuince
 His neighbour foes, Melianus did beget
Edor, and Edor Lothos name did fet,
 That tooke to wife the sifter of King Arthur :
 A Virgine faire, chaste, louely, and most pure,
 Of whom this Lotho had foure louely boyes,
 Their fathers comfort and their mothers ioyes,
Walwanus, Agranaius, Garchus and Guerelise,
 That in their countrey much did foueragnize :
 All which were men of great authoritie,
 And famous in the land of Britanic.

Here endeth the Birth, Life, Death, and Pedigree of King Arthur of Britanie, & now, to where we left.

○ Nature tell me one thing ere we part,
 What famous towne and situated Seate
 Is that huge Building that is made by Art,
 Against whose wals the cryfall streames do beate,
 As if the flowing tide the stones would eate :
 That lies vpon my left hand built so hie,
 That the huge top-made Steeple dares the Skie ?

Phoenix.

L 3

Nature. That is the Britaines towne old Troynouant,
 The which the wandring-Troyans Sonne did frame
 When after shipwracke he a place did want,
 For to reuiue his Honor-splitted Name,
 And raifd againe the cinders of his Fame,
 When from Sydonian Dido they did steale,
 To reare the Pillars of a Common-weale.

Since when to come more nearer to our time,
Lud the great King did with his wealth enlarge,
 The famous builded Citie of this Clime,
 And Ludstone to be cald he gaue in charge,
 And London now that Towne is growne at large :
 The flowing Riuer Thamafis is nam'd,
 Whofe Sea-ensuing Tide can neare be tam'd.

Phœnix. O London I haue heard thee honoured,
 And thy names Glorie rais'd to good intent,
 Lawes Councell chamber in thy wals is bred,
 The schoole of Knowledge and Experiment :
 Wife Senators to gouerne thee is lent.
 All things to beautifie a Royall Throne,
 Where Scarfitie and Dearth did neuer grone.

Nature. Leaue off thy Praifes till we haue more leasure,
 And to beguile the wearie lingring Day,
 Whofe long-drawne Howers do tire vs out of measure :
 Our cunning in Loue-songs let vs assay,
 And paint our Pleasure as some good Array :
 I will beginne my cunning for to tast,
 And your Experience we will try at last.

Here Nature singeth to this dittie following.

What is Loue but a toy,
 To beguile mens Senfes ?

Whita

What is Cupid but a boy,
 Boy to cause expences,
 A toy that brings to fooles oppressed thrall,
 A boy whose folly makes a number fall.

What is Loue but a child,
 Child of little substance,
 Making Apes to be wild,
 And their pride to aduance,
 A child that loues with giegawces to be toying,
 And with thinne shadowes alwaies to be playing.

Loue is sweete, wherein sweete ?
 In fading pleasures, wanton toyes,
 Loue a Lord, and yet meete,
 To crosse mens humours with annoyes :
 A bitter pleasure, pleasing for a while,
 A Lord is Loue that doth mans thoughts beguile.
 O sing no more, you do forget your Theame,
 And haue prophan'd the sacred name of Loue,
 You dip your tongue in an vnwholsome Streame,
 And from the golden Truth your notes remoue
 In my harsh Dittie I will all reprove :
 And vnaccustom'd I will trie my skill,
 To pleasure you, and to confute your will.

The Phoenix her Song to the Dittie before.

O Holy Loue, religious Saint,
 Mans onely hony-tasting Pleasure,
 Thy glory, learning cannot paint,
 For thou art all our wordly Treasure :
 Thou art the Treasure, Treasure of the soule,
 That great celestiall powers dost controule.

What greater blisse then to embrace

The perfect patterne of Delight
 Whose heart-enchanting Eye doth chafe
 All formes of forow from mans sight
 Pleasure, Delight, Wealth, and earth-ioyes do lye
 In Venus bosome, bosome of pure beautie.

That mind that tasteth perfect Loue
 Is farre remoted from annoy :
Cupid that God doth sit above,
 That tips his Arrowes all with ioy :
 And this makes Poets in their Verse to sing
 Loue is a holy, holy, holy thing.

Nature. O voice Angelicall, O heauenly song,
 The golden praise of Loue that thou hast made,
 Deliuerd from thy sweete smoothd honied tong,
 Commaunds Loue selfe to lye within a shade,
 And yeeld thee all the Pleasures may be had :
 Thy sweete melodious voice hath beautifide
 And guilded Loues rich amours in her pride.

Phoenix. Enough, enough, Loue is a holy thing,
 A power deuine, deuine, maiesticall :
 In shallow witted braines as you did sing,
 It cares not for the force materiall,
 And low-borne Swaines it nought respects at all :
 She builds her Bower in none but noble minds,
 And there due adoration still she finds.

Nature. Stay Phoenix stay, the euening Starre drawes nie,
 And Phæbus he is parted from our sight,

And

And with this Wagon mounted in the Skie,
 Affording passage to the gloomie night,
 That doth the way-faring Passenger affright :
 And we are fet on foote neere to that Ile,
 In whose deep bottome plaines Delight doth smile.

O what a muskie sent the ayre doth cast,
 As if the Gods perfum'd it with sweete Myrrhe :
 O how my bloud's inspired and doth taste,
 An alteration in my ioynts to stirre,
 As if the good did with the bad conferre :
 The ayre doth moue my Spirites, purge my Sence,
 And in my body doth new warre commence.

Phoenix.

Looke round about, behold yon fruitfull Plaine,
 Behold their meadow plots and pasture ground,
 Behold their chrystall Riuers runne amaine,
 Into the vaste huge Seas deuouring found,
 And in her bowels all her filth is found :
 It vomiteth by vertue all corruption,
 Into that watrie plaine of defolation.

And while the day giues light vnto our eies,
 Be thou attentiu, and I will relate,
 The glorie of the plaines that thou descri'st,
 Whose fertill bounds farre doth extenuate,
 Where Mars and Venus arme in arme haue fate :
 Of plants of hearbs, and of high springing trees,
 Of sweete delicious fauors, and of Bees.

In this delightfome countrey there doth grow,

M

The Mandrake cald in Greece Mandragoras,
 Some of his vertues if you looke to know,
 The iuyce that freshly from the roote doth passe,
 Purgeth all fleame like blacke Helleborus :
 Tis good for paine engendred in the eies ;
 By wine made of the roote doth sleepe arise.

Theres Yellow Crowbels and the Daphadill,
Good Harry, herbe Robert, and white Cotula,
Adders grassc, Eglantine, and Aphodill,
Agnus Castus, and Acatia,
 The Blacke Arke-Angell, Coloquintida,
 Sweete Sugar Canes, Sinkefoile, and boies Mercurie, Goosefoote, Goldsnap, and good Gratia Dei.

Moffe of the Sea, and yellow Succoric,
 Sweete Trefoile, Weedwind, the wholesome Wormewood,
Muskmealons, Moustaile, and Mercurie,
 The dead Arkeangell that for wennes is good,
 The Souldiers perrow, and great Southernewood :
 Stone hearts tongue, Blessed thistle, and Sea Trifoly,
 Our Ladies cushion, and Spaines Pellitorie.

Phœnix. No doubt this Clymate where as these remaine,
 The women and the men are fam'd for faire,
 Here need they not of aches to complaine,
 For Phisickes skill growes here without compare :
 All herbes and plants within this Region are,
 But by the way sweete Nature as you go,
 Of Agnus Castus speake a word or two.

That

That shall I briefly ; it is the very handmaid
 To Vesla, or to perfect Chastitic,
 The hot inflamed spirite is allaid
 By this sweete herbe that bends to Luxury,
 It drieth vp the feede of Venerie :

Nature.

The leaues being laid vpon the sleepers bed,
 With chafnesse, cleannesse, purenesse he is fed.

Burne me the leaues, and straw them on the ground,
 Whereas foule venemous Serpents vse to haunt :
 And by this vertue here they are not found,
 Their operation doth such creatures daunt,
 It causeth them from thence for to auaunt :

If thou be stung with Serpents great or lesse,
 Drink but the feede, and thou shalt find redresse.

But to proceed, heres Clary or Cleare-cie,
Calues snout, Cukoe flowers, and the Cuckoes meate,
Calathian Violets, Dandelion, and the Dewberrie,
Leopards foote, and greene Spinage which we vse to cate,
 And the hot Indian Sunne procuring heate :

Great wild Valerian, and the Withie wind
 The water Cresses, or ague-curing Woodbind.

There's Foxgloue, Forget me not, and Coliander,
Galingal, Goldcups, and Buprestis,
Small honesties, Eyebright, and Coculus Panter,
Double tongue, Moly, and the bright Anthillis,
Smelling Clauer, and Æthiopsis :

Floramore, Euphorbium, and Esula,
White bulbus violet, and Cassia fistula.

M 2

Phenix. By the way sweete Nature tell me this,
Is this the Moly that is excellent,
For strong enchauntments, and the Adders hiss?
Is this the Moly that Mercurius sent
To wife Vlyffes, when he did preuent
The witchcraft, and foule Circe's damned charmes,
That would haue compast him with twentie harmes?

Nature. This is the Moly growing in this land,
That was reueal'd by cunning Mercurie
To great Vlyffes, making him withstand
The hand of Circes fatall forcerie,
That would haue loden him with miserie :
And ere we passe Ile shew some excellence,
Of other herbs in Phisickes noble Science.

There Mugwort, Scua and Tithimailles,
Oke of Ierusalem, and Lyriconfaucie,
Larkes spurre, Larkes claw and Lentiles,
Garden Nigella, Mill, and Pionie,
Woody Nightshade, Mints, and Sentorie,
Sowbread, Dragons, and Goats oregan
Pelemcum, Hellebore, and Osmond the Waterman.

Firft of this Mugwort it did take the name,
Of Artemesia wife to Mausolcus,
Where funne-bred beautie did his heart inflame,
When she was Queene of Helicarnassus,
Diana gaue the herbe this name to vs :
Because this vertue to vs it hath lent,
For womens matters it is excellent.

And

And he that shall this herbe about him beare,
 Is freed from hurt or daunger any way,
 No poised Toade nor Serpent shall him feare,
 As he doth trauell in the Sunne-shine day,
 No wearinesse his limmes shall ought assay :
 And if he weare this Mugwort at his breast,
 Being traueilling, he nere shall couet rest.

There is blacke Hellebore cald Melampodium,
 Because an Arcadian shepheard first did find
 This wholsome herbe Melampus nam'd of some,
 Which the rich Proctus daughters wits did bind,
 When she to extreame madnesse was inclin'd :
 It cured and reuiu'd her memorie,
 That was possest with a continuall frenzie.

There Centrie in Greeke Centaurion,
 That from the Centaure Chiron tooke the name,
 In Spaine t'was cald Cintoria long agone,
 And this much honor must we giue the same,
 Wild Tygers with the leaues a man may tame :
 Tis good for sinewed aches, and giues light
 To the blacke mistie dimnesse of the fight.

Fames golden glorie spreadeth this report,
 Vpon a day that Chiron was a guest,
 To arme-strong Hercules and did resort
 Vnto his house to a most sumptuous feast,
 And welcome was the Centaure mongst the rest.
 But see his lucke, he on his foote let fall,
 Great Hercul's shaft, and hurt himselfe withal.

A mightie arrow not for him to weeld,
 The wound being deepe, and with a venom'd point,
 To Deaths areftment he began to yeeld,
 And there with fundrie Balmes they did annoint,
 His wounded foote being strucken through the ioynt :
 All would not ferue till that an old man brought,
 This Centaurie that cafe to him hath wrought.

There's Osnoud balcpate, Plebane, and Oculus Christi,
Sleeping nightshade, Salomons feale, and Sampire,
Sage of Ierufalem, and fweete Rofemarie,
Great Pilofella, Sengreene, and Alexander,
Knights Milfoile, Mafticke, and Stocke gillofer,
 Hearts cafe, herbe twopence, and Hermodaçtill,
 Narciffus, and the red flower Pimpernell.

Phœnix. That word Narciffus is of force to steale,
 Cold running water from a stony rocke :
 Alas poore boy thy beautie could not heale
 The wound that thou thyfelfe too deepe didft locke ;
 Thy fhadowed eyes thy perfect eyes did mocke.
 Falne beautie fed true beautie from the deepe,
 When in the glaffe water thou didft peepe.

O Loue thou art imperious full of might,
 And doft reuenge the crie difdaining louer
 His lookes to Ladies eyes did giue a light,
 But pride of beautie, did his beautie fmother,
 Like him for faire you could not find another :
 Ah had he lou'd, and not on Ladies lower,
 He neare had bene transformed to a flower.

This

This is an Embleame for those painted faces,
 Where deuine beautie rests her for awhile,
 Filling their browes with stornes and great disgraces,
 That on the pained foule yeelds not a fmile,
 But puts true loue into perpetuall exile :

Nature.

Hard hearted Soule, such fortune light on thee,
 That thou maist be transform'd as well as he.

Ah had the boy bene pliable to be wonne,
 And not abusde his morne excellng face,
 He might haue liu'd as beauteous as the Sunne,
 And to his beautie Ladies would giue place,
 But O proud Boy, thou wroughtst thine owne disgrace :
 Thou lou'st thy selfe, and by the selfe fame loue,
 Didst thy deuineesse to a flower remoue.

But to proceed, theres Christi oculus,
 The feede of this Horminum drunke with wine,
 Doth stirre a procurations heate in vs,
 And to Libidenous lusts makes men incline,
 And mens vnable bodies doth refine :
 It brings increase by operation,
 And multiplies our generation.

There's Carrets, Cheruile, and the Cucumer,
Red Patiens, Purflane, and Gingidium,
Oxe eie, sheepe killing Penygraffes, and the golden flower
Cuckoe pintell, our Ladies seale, and Saga pinum,
Thecophraflus violet, and Vincetoxicum :
Saini Peters wort, and louely Venus haire,
 And Squilla, that keepes men from foule despaire.

O this word Carrets, if a number knew
 The vertue of thy rare excelling roote,
 And what good help to men there doth ensue,
 They would their lands, and their liues sell to boote,
 But thy swete operation they would view :
 Sad dreaming Louers slumbring in the night,
 Would in thy honie working take delight.

The Thracian Orphcus whose admired skill
 Infernall Pluto once hath rauished,
 Causing high Trees to daunce againt their will,
 And vntam'd Beast with Musicks Harpe hath fed,
 And fishes to the shore hath often led,
 By his experience oftentimes did proue,
 This Roote procur'd in Maides a perfect loue,

Purflane doth comfort the inflamed hart,
 And healeth the exulcerated kidnies :
 It stoppeth all defluxions falling smart,
 And when we sleepe expelleth dreames and fancies :
 It driues Imaginations from our eyes,
 The iuyce of Purflane hindreth that desire
 When men to Venus games would faine aspire.

Theres Rocket, Iack by the hedge, and Loue in idlcnesse,
Knights water Sengreene, and Siluer maidenheare,
Paris Nauewes, Tornesol, and towne Cresses,
Starre thistle that for many things is deare,
 And Scia that in Italy Corne doth beare :
 Wake-robbins, Hyacinth, and Hartichocke,
 Letuce that mens fence asleepe doth rocke.

O poore

O poore boy Ilyacintus thy faire face
 Of which Apollo was enamored,
 Brought thy lifes Lord too timely to that place,
 Where playing with thee thou wast murdered,
 And with thy bloud the grasse was sprinckled :
 Thy bodie was transformed in that hower,
 Into a red white mingled Gilli-flower.

Phoenix.

But yet Apollo wept when he was flaine,
 For playing with him, cleane against his will
 He made him breathlesse, this procur'd his paine :
 True loue doth feldome seeke true loue to kill ;
 O Loue thou many actions dost fulfill !
 Search, feek, & learn what things there may be shown,
 Then fay that Loues sweet secrets are vnknowne.

Nature.

And as a token of Apolloes sorrow,
 A siluer coloured Lillie did appeare,
 The leaues his perfect sighes and teares did borrow,
 Which have continued still from yeare to yeare ;
 Which shewes him louing, not to be seure,
 At at is written as a mourning Dittie,
 Vpon this flower which shewes Apolloes pittie.

O Schoole-boyes I will teach you such a shift,
 As will be worth a Kingdome when you know it,
 An herbe that hath a secret hidden drift,
 To none but Treauants do I meane to shew it,
 And all deepe read Phisitions will allow it :
 O how you play the wags, and faine would heare
 Some secret matter to allay your feare.

N

Theres garden Rocket, take me but the seed,
 When in your Maisters brow your faults remaine,
 And when to faue your selues there is great need,
 Being whipt or beaten you shall feel no paine,
 Although the bloud your buttocks seeme to staine :
 It hardneth so the flesh and tender skin,
 That what is seene without comes not within.

The Father that desires to haue a boy,
 That may be Heire vnto his land and liuing,
 Let his espoused Loue drinke day by day,
 Good Artichocks, who buds in August bring,
 Sod in cleare running water of the spring ;
 Wiues naturall Conception it doth strengthen,
 And their declining life by force doth lengthen.

In Sommer time, when sluggish idleneffe
 Doth haunt the bodie of a healthfull man,
 In Winter time when a cold heauie slownesse
 Doth tame a womans strength do what she can,
 Making her look both bloudlesse, pale and wan,
 The vertue of this Artichocke is such,
 It stirres them vp to labour very much.

Theres Sowbread, Stauwort, and Starre of Hierusalem,
 Base or flat Veruine, and the wholefome Tansie,
Go to bed at noone, and Titimale,
Hundred headed thistle, and tree-clasping Iuie,
Storks bill, great Stouecrop, and seed of Canary,
 Dwarfe gentian, Snakeweed, and sommer Sauory,
 Bell rags, prickly Boxe, and Raspis of Couentry.

This

This Sowbread is an herbe that's perillous,
 For howfoeuer this fame Roote be vsed,
 For women growne with child tis dangerous,
 And therefore it is good to be refused:
 Vnlesse too much they seeke to be misused.

O haue a care how this you do apply,
 Either in inward things or outwardly.

Those that about them carrie this fame Sowbread
 Or plant it in their gardens in the Spring,
 If that they onely ouer it do tread,
 Twill kill the issue they about them bring,
 When Mother Lullabie with ioy should sing:
 Yet wanton scaping Maides perhaps will tast,
 This vnkind herbe, and snatch it up in hast.

Yet let me giue a warning to you all,
 Do not perfume too much in dalliance,
 Be not short-heeld with euery wind to fall:
 The Eye of heauen perhaps will not dispence
 With your rash fault, but plague your fowle offence,
 And take away the working and the vertue,
 Because to him you broke your promis'd dutie.

Theres Iuic, that doth cling about the tree,
 And with her leaue armes doth round embrace
 The rotten hollow withered trunke we see,
 That from the maiden Ciffus tooke that place,
 Grape-crowned Bacchus did this damzell grace:
 Loue-piercing windowes dazeled so her eye,
 That in Loues ouer-kindnesse she did dye.

· N 2

A rich-wrought sumptuous Banquet was prepared,
 Vnto the which the Gods were all invited :
 Amongst them all this Ciffus was inſnared,
 And in the ſight of Bacchus much delighted :
 In her faire boſome was true Loue vnited,
 She daunc't and often kiſt him with ſuch mirth,
 That fudden ioy did ſtop her vitall breath.

Affoone as that the Nouriſher of things,
 Our Grandam Earth had taſted of her bloud,
 From fourth her bodie a freſh Plant there ſprings,
 And then an Iuy-climbing Herbe there ſtood,
 That for the fluxe Diffenterie is good :
 For the remembrance of the God of wine,
 It therefore alwaies claſpes about the Vine.

There is Angellica or Dwarfe Gentian,
 Whoſe roote being dride in the hot ſhining Sunne,
 From death it doth preferue the poynſoned man,
 Whoſe extreame torment makes his life halfe gone,
 That from deaths mixed potion could not ſhunne :
 No Peſtilence nor no infectious aire,
 Shall do him hurt, or cauſe him to diſpaire.

Theres Carduus benediſſus cald the Bleſſed thiſtle,
Nefwort, Peniroyall, and Aſtrolochia,
Ycllow Wolfs-bane, and Roſe-smelling Bramble,
Our Ladies Bedſtraw, Brookelime, and Lunaria,
Cinque foile, Cats taile, and Creſſe Sciatica, Hollihockes, Mouſeare, and Pcty Morrell
 Sage, Scorpiades, and the garden sorrell.

Firſt

First of the Nesewort, it doth driue away,
 And poyfoneth troublefome Mice and long-tail'd Rats,
 And being fod in milke, it doth destroy
 Bees, Waspes, or Flies, and litle stinging Gnats :
 It killeth Dogs, and rest disturbing Cats,
 Boyled with vineger it doth affwage
 The ach proceeding from the tooths hot rage.

Sage is an herbe for health preferuatiue,
 It doth expell from women barrenesse :
Ætius saith, it makes the child to liue,
 Whose new-knit ioynts are full of feeblenesse,
 And comforteth the mothers wearinesse :
 Adding a liuely spirit, that doth good
 Vnto the painefull labouring wiues sicke blood.

In Egypt when a great mortalitie,
 And killing Pestilence did infect the Land,
 Making the people die innumerable,
 The plague being ceast, the women out of hand
 Did drinke of iuyce of Sage continually,
 That made them to increase and multiply,
 And bring forth store of children presently.

This herbe Lunaria, if a horse do grafe
 Within a medow where the same doth grow,
 And ouer it doth come with gentle pace,
 Hauing a horslocke at his foote below,
 As many haue, that fauegard we do know,
 It openeth the Locke, and makes it fall,
 Despight the barre that it is lockt withall.

N 3

Theres Standergras, Hares ballockes, or great Orchis, Prouoketh Venus, and procureth sport,
 It helps the weakned body that's amisse,
 And fals away in a confumptuous sort,
 It heales the Heclique feauer by report :
 But the dried shriueled roote being withered,
 Hindreth the vertue we haue vttered.

If Man of the great springing rootes doth eate,
 Being in matrimoniall copulation,
 Male children of his wife he shall beget,
 This speciall vertue hath the operation,
 If Women make the withered rootes their meate,
 Faire louely Daughters, affable, and wife,
 From their fresh springing loines there shall arise.

There's Rosemarie, the Arabians iustifie,
 (Phisitions of exceeding perfect skill,)
 It comforteth the braine and Memorie,
 And to the inward fence giues strength at will,
 The head with noble knowledge it doth fill.
 Conferues thereof restores the speech being lost,
 And makes a perfect Tongue with little cost.

Theres Dwale or Nightshade, tis a fatall plant,
 It bringeth men into a deadly sleepe,
 Then Rage and Anger doth their senses haunt,
 And like mad Aiav they a coile do keepe,
 Till leane-fac'd Death into their heart doth creepe,
 In Almaine graue experience hath vs tought,
 This wicked herbe for manie things is nought.

Oke

Oke of Ierusalem being throughly dried,
 And laid in preffes where your clothes do lie,
 No Mothes or venome mongft them fhall abide,
 It makes them fmell fo odoriferoufly,
 That it doth kill them all immediately :
 It helps the breaft that's ftopped with corruption,
 And giues mans breath fit operation.

Bleft be our mother Earth that nourifheth,
 In her rich womb the feede of Times increafe,
 And by her vertue all things flourifheth,
 When from her bofome ſhe doth them releafe,
 But are their Plants and Trees in this faire Ile,
 Where Floras sweete ſpread garden ſeemes to ſmile?

Phoenix.

As plentifull vnto thefe Ilanders,
 Are the fruit-bearing Trees, as be the Flowers :
 And to the chiefest Lords that are commanders,
 They ferue as pleaſant ouer-ſhading bowers,
 To banquet in the day, and ſport being late,
 And moſt of them I meane to nominate.

Nature.

Ther's the great ſturdie Oke and ſpreading Vine,
 Vnder whoſe branches Bacchus vfd' to ſleepe,
 The Rofe-tree and the loftie bearing Pine,
 That ſeemes (being toucht with wind) full oft to weepe,
 The Hawthorne, Chriffs-thorne and the Rofemary,
 The Tamariske, Willow, and the Almond-tree.

The moſt chaſt tree, that Chaſtneſſe doth betoken,
 The Hollyholme, the Corke and Goſeberry,

That neuer with tempestuous stormes is shooke,
 The Oline, Philbert, and the Barberie,
 The Masticke tree whose liquid gumme being dride,
 Is good for them that Rheume hath terrified.

Theres Iudas tree, so cal'd becaufe that Ierw,
 That did betray the innocent Lambe of God,
 There first of all his forrowes to renew,
 Did hang himselfe, plagu'd with a heauy rod,
 A iust reward for such an vniust slaue,
 That would betray his Maister to the graue.

Theres Ash-tree, Maple, and the Sycamore,
Pomegranate, Apricookes and Iunipere :
 The Turpentine that sweet iuyce doth deplore,
 The Quince, the Pearre-tree, and the young mans Medlar,
 The Fig-tree, Orenge, and the sweet moist Lennon,
 The Nutmeg, Plum-tree, and the louely Cytron.

Now for the Mirtle tree, it beares the name,
 Being once the gods Pallas best beloued,
 Of Mersin the younge fair Athenian Dame,
 Because in actiuenesse she much excelled :
 The lustie young men of Athenia,
 She still was honour'd of the wise Minerua.

Who willing her at Tilt and Tournament,
 At running, vaulting, and Actiuitie,
 And other exercife of gouernement,
 Not to be absent from her Deitie :
 Because that she as Iudge might giue the Crowne,
 And

And garland to the Victors great renowne.

But no forepasse'd age was free from Ennie,
 That spitefull honor-crazing enemy :
 For on a time giuing the equall glorie
 To him that wan it most deferuedly,
 The vanquisher in furie much displeas'd,
 Slue Merfin whom the Goddesse fauoured.

Pallas offended with their crueltye,
 Did gratefully reuenge her Maidens death,
 Transforming her into a Mirtle tree,
 Sweetly to flourish in the lower earth :
 The berries are a meanes for to redresse
 (Being decocted) swolne-fac'd Drunkenesse.

The stormie Winters greene remaining Bay
 Was Daphne, Ladon and the Earths faire daughter,
 Whom wife Apollo haunted in the day,
 Till at the length by chaunce alas he caught her :
 O if such faults were in the Gods aboue,
 Blame not poore filly men if they do loue.

But she not able (almost out of breath)
 For to resist the wife Gods humble sute,
 Made her petition to her mother Earth,
 That she would succour her, and make her mute :
 The Earth being glad to ease her miserie,
 Did swallow her, and turn'd her to a Bay tree.

Apollo being amazed at this sight,

O

Named it Daphne for his Daphnes honour,
 Twisting a Garland to his hearts delight,
 And on his head did weare it as a fauour :
 And to this day the Bay trees memorie
 Remaines as token of true Prophecie.

Some of the heathen, men of opinion,
 Suppose the greene-leau'd Bay tree can resist
 Inchauntments, spirites, and illusion,
 And make them seeme as shadowes in a mist,
 This tree is dedicate onely to the Sunne,
 Because her vertue from his vice begonne.

The Mose-tree hath such great large spreading leaues,
 That you may wrap a child of twelue months old
 In one of them, vnlesse the truth deceaues,
 For so our Herborists haue truly told :
 By that great Citie Aleph in Affyria,
 This tree was found hard by Venetia.

The fruite hereof (the Greekes and Christians)
 That do remaine in that large-spreading Citie,
 The misbeleeuing Iewes and Persians,
 Hold this opinion for a certaintie :
 Adam did eate in liuely Paradise,
 That wrapt mans free-borne foules in miseris.

Phanix. These trees, these plants, and this description,
 Of their sweete liquid gums that are distilling,
 Are to be held in estimation,
 For faire-fac'd Tellus glorie is excelling :

But

But what white siluer'd rich refembling plaine,
Is that where wooddie moouing trees remaine ?

That is the watry kingdome of Neptunus,
Where his high wood-made Towers dayly flote,
Bearing the title of Oceanus,
As hony-fpeaking Poets oft do quote :
And as the branches fpreading from the tree,
So do the Riuers grace this loucly Countrie.

Nature.

Wherein is bread for mans sweete nourifhment,
Fifhes of fundry forts and diuerfe natures,
That the inhabitants doth much content,
As a relieuement to all mortall creatures,
But for to make you perfect what they be,
I will relate them to you orderly.

There fwimmes the gentle Prawne and Pickerell,
A great deuourer of fmall little fifh,
The Puffin, Sole, and Sommer louing Mackrell,
In feafon held for a high Ladies difh :
The bigge bon'd Whale, of whom the skilfull Marriner,
Sometimes God knowes ftands in a mightie terrour.

The muficke-louing Dolphin here doth fwimme,
That brought Arion on his backe to fhore,
And ftayd a long while at the Seas deepe brimme,
To hear him play, in nature did deplore,
As being loth to leaue him, but at laft
Headlong himfelfe into the Sea he caft.

O 2

Here swimmes the Ray, the Sea-calfe and the Porpoise,
 That doth betoken raine or stormes of weather,
 The Sea-horse, Sea-hound, and the wide-mouth'd Plaice,
 A Spitchcoke, Stocke-fish, and the litle Pilcher,
 Whose onely moifture prest by cunning Art,
 Is good for those troubled with Aches smart.

Here swimmes the Shad, the Spitfish, and the Spurling,
 The Thornebacke, Turbot, and the Peregrine,
 The Twine, the Trout, the Scallop, and the Whiting,
 The Scate, the Roch, the Tench and pretie Wrinckle:
 The Purple-fish, whose liquor vsually,
 A violet colour on the cloth doth die.

Here swimmes the Pearch, the Cuttle and the Stocke-fish,
 That with a wooden staffe is often beaten,
 The Crab, the Pearch, which poore men alwayes with,
 The Ruffe, the Piper good for to be eaten:
 The Barbell that three times in euery yeare,
 Her natural young ones to the waues doth beare.

Phoenix. His great deuine Omnipotence is mightie,
 That rides vpon the Heauens axeltree,
 That by increase amongst vs sends such plentie,
 If to his Mightinesse grateful we will be:
 But stubborne necked Iewes do him prouoke,
 Till he do loade them with a heaueie yoke.

Nature. Truth haue you said; but I will here expresse
 The richesse oi the Earths hid secrecie,
 The salt Seas vnseene, vnknowne worthinesse,

That

That yeelds vs precious stones innumerably,
 The rarenesse of their vertue fit for Kings,
 And such this cuntry climate often brings.

Herein is found the Amatist, and Abestone,
 The Topaze, Turches, and Gelatia,
 The Adamant, Dionise, and Calcedon,
 The Berill, Marble and Elutropia,
 The Ruby, Saphire, and Asterites,
 The Iacinth, Sardonix, and Argirites.

The Smaragd, Carbuncle, and Alabaster,
Cornellis, Crusopasse, and Corrall:
 The sparkling Diamond, and the louely Iafser,
 The Margarite, Lodestone, and the bright-ey'd Chryfall,
Ligurius, Onix, Nitrum, and Gagates,
Abfiflos, Amatites, and the good Achates.

Here in this Iland are there mines of Gold,
 Mines of Siluer, Iron, Tinne and Lead,
 That by the labouring workman we behold:
 And mines of Brasse, that in the Earth is fed,
 The stone Lipparia, Galaclites, and Panteron,
Enidros, Iris, Dracontites, and Afrion.

The Adamant, a hard obdurate stone,
 Inuincible, and not for to be broken,
 Being placed neare a great bigge barre of Iron,
 This vertue hath it, as a speciall token,
 The Lodestone hath no power to draw away
 The Iron barre, but in one place doth stay.

Yet with a Goates warme, fresh and liuely blood,
 This Adamant doth breake and riue in funder,
 That manie mightie, huge strokes hath withstood :
 But I will tell you of a greater wonder,
 It reconciles the womans loue being lost,
 And giueth prooffe of Chastneffe without cost.

The purple coloured Amatist doth preuaile
 Against the wit-oppressing Drunkenesse,
 If euill Cogitations do assaile
 Thy sleepe thoughts wrapt vp in heauineffe,
 It foone will driue them from thy minds disturbing,
 And temporize thy braine that is offending.

The white-veind enterlin'd stone Achates,
 Bespotted here and there with spots like blood,
 Makes a man gracious in the peoples eyes,
 And for to cleare the fight is passing good :
 It remedieth the place that's venemous,
 And in the fire smels odoriferous.

The Gemme Amatites hath this qualitie,
 Let a man touch his vesture with the fame,
 And it resisteth fier mightily :
 The vertue doth the force of burning tame,
 And afterwards cast in the fiers light,
 Burnes not at all, but then it seemes most bright.

The faire stone Berrill is so precious,
 That mightie men do hold it verie rare :
 It frees a man from actions perillous,

If

If of his lifes deare blood he haue a care,
 And now and then being put into the Eyes,
 Defends a man from all his enemies.

The stone Ceranicum spotted ore with blue,
 Being safe and chafly borne within the hand,
 Thunders hote raging cracks that do enfue
 It doth expell, and Lightnings doth withstand,
 Defending of the house that many keepe,
 And is effectuall to bring men asleepe.

The Diamond the worlds reflecting eye,
 The Diamond the heauens bright shining starre,
 The Diamond the earths most purest glorie :
 And with the Diamond no Stone can compare ;
 She teacheth men to speake, and men to loue,
 If all her rarest vertues you will proue.

The Diamond taught Musicke first his cunning,
 The Diamond taught Poetry her skill,
 The Diamond gaue Lawyers first their learning,
Arithmeticke the Diamond taught at will :
 She teacheth all Arts : for within her eye,
 The knowledge of the world doth safely lye.

Dradocos is a stone that's pale and wan,
 It brings to some men thoughts fantastical :
 It being layd vpon a cold dead Man,
 Lofeth the vertue it is grac'd withall ;
 Wherefore tis called the most holy stone :
 For, whereas Death frequenteth it is gone.

Achites is in colour violet,
 Found on the Bankes of this delightfome place,
 Both male and female in this Land we get :
 Whose vertue doth the Princely Eagle grace ;
 For being borne by her into her nest,
 She bringeth fourth her young ones with much rest.

This stone being bound fast to a womans side,
 Within whose purest wombe her child is lying,
 Doth hasten child-birth, and doth make her bide
 But little paine, her humours is releasing.
 If anie one be guiltie of Deccit,
 This stone will caufe him to forfake his meate.

Enidros is the stone that's alwayes sweating,
 Distilling liquid drops continually :
 And yet for all his daily moisture melting,
 It keeps the selfe same bignesse stedfastly :
 It neuer lesseneth, nor doth fall away,
 But in one stedfast perfectnesse doth stay.

*Perpetui fletus lachrymas distillat Enidros,
 Qui velut ex pleni fontis scaturigine manat.*

Gagates smelling like to Frankenfence,
 Being left whereas the poisonous Serpents breed,
 Driues them away, and doth his force commence,
 Making this beast on barren plaines to feed,
 And there to starue and pine away for meate,
 Because being there he finds no foode to eate.

This stone being put in a faire womans drinke,

Will

Will testifie her pure Virginitie,
 A most rare thing that some men neuer thinke,
 Yet you shall giue your iugement easly,
 For if she make her water presently,
 Then hath this Woman lost her honestie.

The Iacinth is a neighbour to the Saphire,
 That doth transforme it selfe to fundrie sights,
 Sometimes tis blacke and cloudie, sometimes cle
 And from the mutable ayre borrowes lights :
 It giueth strength and vigor in his kind,
 And faire sweete quiet sleepe brings to the m

Rabiates being clearely coloured,
 Borne about one doth make him eloquent,
 And in great honour to be faouered,
 If he do vse it to a good intent,
 Foule venomous Serpents it doth bring in awe,
 And cureth paine and griefe about the mawe.

The iron-drawing Lode-stone if you set
 Within a vessell, either Gold or Brasse,
 And place a peece of Iron vnder it,
 Of some indifferent size or smallest compasse,
 The Lodestone on the top will cause it moue,
 And by his vertue meete with it aboute.

The Meade stone coloured like the grassie greene,
 Much gentle ease vnto the Goute hath donne,
 And helpeth those being troubled with the Spleene,
 Mingled with Womans milke bearing a Sonne :

P

It remedi'th the wit-affailing Frenzie,
And purgeth the fad mind of Melancholie.

The stone Orites spotted ore with white,
Being worne, or hung about a womans necke,
Prohibiteth Conception and Delight,
And the child-bearing wombe by force doth checke :
Or else it haft'neth her deliuerie,
And makes the birth vnperfect and vntimely.

Skie colour'd Saphire Kings and Princes weare,
Being held most precious in their iudging sight :
The verie touch of this doth throughly cure
The Carbuncles enraging hatefull spight :
It doth delight and recreate the Eyes,
And all base groffenesse it doth quite despise.

If in a boxe you put an inuenomd Spider,
Whose poisonous operation is annoying,
And on the boxes top lay the true Saphire,
The vertue of his power shewes vs his cunning,
He vanquisheth the Spider, leaues him dead,
And to Apollo now is consecrated.

The fresh greene colour'd Smaragd doth excell
All Trees, Boughs, Plants, and new fresh springing Leaues :
The hote reflecting Sunne can neuer quell
His vertue, that no eyesight ere deceiues,
But ore faire Phabus glorie it triumpheth,
And the dimme duskie Eyes it polifheth.

The

The valiant Cæsar tooke his chiefe delight,
 By looking on the Σμαροvs excellence,
 To see his Romane souldiers how they fight,
 And view what wards they had for their defence,
 And who exceld in perfect chivalrie,
 And noblest bore himfelfe in victorie.

This Stone doth ferue to Diuination,
 To tell of things to come, and things being past,
 And mongst vs held in estimation,
 Giuing the ficke mans meat a gentle tast :
 If things shall be, it keepes in the Mind,
 If not, forgetfulnesse our Eyes doth blind.

The Turches being worne in a Ring,
 If any Gentleman hath cause to ride
 Supports, and doth sustaine him from all falling,
 Or hurting of him felfe what ere betide :
 And ere he suffer anie fearefull danger,
 Will fall it felfe, and breake, and burst a funder.

These wondrous things of Nature to mens eares
 Will almost prove (sweete Nature) incredible,
 But by Times ancient record it appears,
 These hidden secrets to be memorable :
 For his diuinesse that hath wrought this wonder,
 Rules men and beafts, the lightning and the thunder.

Phoenix.

For the worlds blindness and opinion,
 I care not Phoenix, they are misbelceuing,
 And if their eyes trie not conclusi.on,

Nature.

They will not trust a strangers true reporting.
 With Beasts and Birds I will conclude my storie,
 And to that All-in-all yeeld perfect glorie.

In yonder woodie groue and fertile plaine,
 Remaines the Leopard and the watrie Badger,
 The Bugle or wild Oxe doth there remaine,
 The Onocentaure and the cruell Tyger,
 The Dromidary and the princely Lion,
 The Bore, the Elephant, and the poisonous Dragon.

The strong neck'd Bull that neuer felt the yoke,
 The Cat, the Dog, the Wolfe, and cruell Viper,
 The lurking Hare that pretie sport prouokes,
 The Goatebucke, Hedgehogge, and the swiftfoote Panther,
 The Horfe, Camelopard and strong pawd Beare,
 The Ape, the Affe, and the most fearefull Deare.

The Moufe, the Mule, the Sow and Salamander,
 That from the burning fire cannot liue,
 The Weasell, Cammell and the hunted Beauer,
 That in pursute away his stones doth giue :
 The Stellio, Camelion and Vnicorne,
 That doth expell hot poison with his Horne.

The cruell Beare in her conception,
 Brings forth at first a thing that's indigest,
 A lump of flesh without all fashion,
 Which she by often licking brings to rest,
 Making a formal body good and found,
 Which often in this Iland we have found.

Hic

Hic format lingua fœtum, quem protulit Vrſa.

The great wild Bore of nature terrible,
 With two ſtrong Tuſhes for his Armorie,
 Sometimes affailes the Beare moſt horrible,
 And twixt them is a fight both fierce and deadly :
 He hunteth after Marioram and Organie,
 Which as a whetſtone doth his need ſupplie.

The Bugle or wild Oxe is neuer tam'd,
 But with an iron ring put through his ſnout,
 That of ſome perfect ſtrength muſt needs be fram'd,
 Then may you leade him all the world about :
 The Huntſmen find him hung within a tree,
 Faſt by the hornes and then thy uſe no pittie.

The Camell is of nature flexible,
 For when a burden on his backe is bound,
 To eaſe the labourer, he is knowne moſt gentle,
 For why he kneeleth downe vpon the ground :
 Suffering the man to put it off or on,
 As it ſeemes beſt in his diſcretion.

They liue ſome fiftie or ſome hundred yeares,
 And can remaine from water full foure dayes,
 And moſt delight to drinke when there appears,
 A muddie ſpring that's troubled many wayes :
 Between them is a naturall honeſt care,
 If one conioyneth with his Damme, tis rare.

The Dragon is a poiſnous venom'd beaſt,

P 3

With whom the Elephant is at enmitie,
 And in contention they do neuer rest,
 Till one hath flaine the other cruelly :
 The Dragon with the Elephant tries a fall,
 And being vnder he is flaine withall.

The bunch-backt, big-bon'd, swift-foote Dromidary
 Of Dromas the Greeke word borrowing the name,
 For his quicke flying speedy property :
 Which easily these countrey men do tame,
 Hel' go a hundredth miles within one day,
 And neuer seeke in any place to stay.

The Dogge a naturall, kind, and louing thing,
 As witnesseth our Histories of old :
 Their maister dead, the poore foole with lamenting
 Doth kill himselfe before accounted bold :
 And would defend his maister if he might,
 When cruelly his foe begins to fight.

The Elephant with tusshes Iuorie,
 Is a great friend to man as he doth trauell :
 The Dragon hating man most spitefully,
 The Elephant doth with the Dragon quarell :
 And twixt them two is a most deadly strife,
 Till that the man be past, and fau'd his life.

The Elephant scene in Astronomy,
 Will euery month play the Phisition :
 Taking delight his cunning ior to try,
 Giuing himselfe a sweete purgation,

And

And to the running springs himfelfe addrefse,
And in the fame wafh off his filthineffe,

The Gote-bucke is a beaft lafciuious,
And giuen much to filthy venerie ;
Apt and prone to be contentious,
Seeking by craft to kill his enemy :
His bloud being warme fuppleth the Adamant,
That neither fire or force could euer daunt.

The Hedghogge hath a fharp quicke thorned garment,
That on his backe doth ferue him for defence :
He can preface the winds incontinent,
And hath good knowledge in the difference
Betweene the Southerne and the Northren wind,
Thefe vertues are allotted him by kind.

Whereon in Constantinople that great City,
A marchant in his garden gaue one nourifhment :
By which he knew the winds true certainty,
Because the Hedghogge gaue him iuft prefagement :
Apples, or peares, or grapes, fuch is his meate,
Which on his backe he carries for to eate.

The spotted Linx in face much like a Lyon,
His vrine is of fuch a qualitic,
In time it turneth to a precious ftone,
Called Ligarins for his property :
He hateth man fo much, that he doth hide
His vrine in the earth, not to be fpide.

P. 4

The princely Lion King of Forrest-Kings,
 And chiefe Commaunder of the Wilderneffe,
 At whose faire feete all Beasts lay downe their offrings,
 Yeelding alleageance to his worthineffe :

His strength remaineth most within his head,
 His vertue in his heart is compaffed.

He neuer wrongs a man, nor hurts his pray,
 If they will yeeld submissiue at his feete,
 He knoweth when the Lionesse playes false play,
 If in all kindneffe he his loue do meete :

He doth defend the poore and innocent,
 And those that cruel-hearted Beasts haue rent.

Then is't not pittie that the craftie Foxe,
 The rauinous Wolfe, the Tyger, and the Beare,
 The slow-past-dull-brain'd heauie Oxe,
 Should striue so good a state to ouerweare ?

The Lion sleepest and laughes to see them striue,
 But in the end leaues not a beast aliue.

The Onocentaur is a monftrous beast ;
 Supposed halfe a man and halfe an affe,
 That neuer shuts his eyes in quiet rest,
 Till he his foes deare life hath round encompassst,
 Such were the Centaures in their tyrannie,
 That liu'd by humane flesh and villanie.

The Stellio is a beast that takes his breath,
 And liueth by the dew thats heauenly,
 Taking his Food and Spirit of the earth,

And

And so maintaines his life in chastitie,
 He takes delight to counterfeit all colours,
 And yet for all this he is venomous.

Tis strange to heare such perfect difference,
 In all things that his Mightinesse hath fram'd
 Tis strange to heare their manner of defence,
 Amongst all creatures that my Nurse hath nam'd :
 Are there no Wormes nor Serpents to be found
 In this sweete smelling Ile and fruitful ground ?

Phoenix.

Within a little corner towards the East,
 A moorish plot of earth and dampish place,
 Some creeping Wormes and Serpents use to rest,
 And in a manner doth this bad ground grace :
 It is vnpeopled and vnhabited,
 For there with poisonous ayre they are fed.

Nature.

Here liues the Worme, the Gnat and Grashopper,
Rinatrix, Lizard, and the fruitfull Bee,
 The Moth, Chelidras, and the Bloodsucker,
 That from the flesh suckes bloud most speedily :
Cerastris, Aspis and the Crocodile,
 That doth the way-faring passenger beguile.

The labouring Ant, and the bespeckled Adder,
 The Frogge, the Toad, and Sommer-haunting Flie,
 The prettie Silke-worm, and the poisonous Viper,
 That with his teeth doth wound most cruelly :
 The Hornet and the poisonous Cockatrice,
 That kills all birds by a most sly deuce.

Q

The Aspis is a kind of deadly Snake,
 He hurts most perillous with venom'd sting,
 And in purfute doth neare his foe forsake,
 But slaies a Man with poyfnous venoming :
 Betweene the male and female is such loue,
 As is betwixt the most kind Turtle doue.

This is the Snake that Cleopatra vsed,
 The Egyptian Queene belou'd of Anthony,
 That with her breasts deare blood was nourished,
 Making her die (faire foule) most patiently,
 Rather than Cæsars great victorious hand,
 Should triumph ore the Queene of such a land.

The Lizard is a kind of louing creature,
 Especially to man he is a friend :
 This property is giuen him by nature,
 From dangerous beasts poore Man he doth defend :
 For being sleepey he all fence forsaketh,
 The Lizard bites him till the man awaketh.

The Ant or Emote is a labouring thing,
 And haue amongst them all a publike weale,
 In fommer time their meate they are prouiding,
 And secrets mongst themselues they do conceale :
 The monstrous huge big Beare being sickly,
 Eating of these, is cured presently.

The fruitiull prety Bee liues in the hieue,
 Which unto him is like a peopled City,
 And by their daily labour there they thriue,

Bringing

Bringing home honied wax continually :
 They are reputed ciuill, and haue kings,
 And guides for to direct them in proceedings.

When that their Emperour or King is present,
 They live in peacefull fort and quietnesse,
 But if their officer or king be absent,
 They flie and swarme abroad in companies :
 If any happen casuall-wise to dye,
 They mourne and bury him right solemnly.

The Crocodile a saffron colour'd Snake,
 Sometimes vpon the earth is conuerfant,
 And other times liues in a filthy lake,
 Being opprested with foule needy want :
 The skin vpon his backe as hard as stone,
 Resisteth violent strokes of steele or iron.

Rinatrix is a poyfenous enuenom'd Serpent,
 That doth infect the riuers and the fountaines,
 Bringing to cattell hurt and detriment :
 When thirsty they forfake the steepy mountaines,
Rinatrix violator Aquæ, and infects the earth,
 With his most noysome stinking filthy breath.

The Scorpion hath a deadly stinging taile,
 Bewitching some with his faire smiling face,
 But presently with force he doth affaile
 His captiu'd praie, and brings him to disgrace :
 Wherefore tis cald of some the flattering worme,
 That subtilly his foe doth ouerturne.

Q 2

Orion made his boast the earth should bring
 Or yeeld no serpent forth but he would kill it,
 Where presently the Scorpion vp did spring,
 For so the onely powers above did will it :
 Where in the peoples prefence they did see,
 Orion stung to death most cruelly.

Of Wormes are diuers sorts and diuers names,
 Some feeding on hard timber, some on trees,
 Some in the earth a secret cabbine frames,
 Some liue on tops of Ashes, some on Oliues ;
 Some of a red watriſh colour, some of greene,
 And some within the night like Fire are feene.

The *Silke*worme by whose Webbe our Silkes are made,
 For she doth dayly labour with her weauing,
 A Worme that's rich and precious in her trade,
 That whilst poore foule she toyleth in her spinning,
 Leaues nothing in her belly but empty aire,
 And toying too much falleth to despaire.

Here liues the Caddes and the long leg'd Crane,
 With whome the Pigmies are at mortall strife,
 The Larke and Lapwing that with nets are tane,
 And so poore filly foules do end their life :
 The Nightingale wrong'd by Adulterie,
 The Nightcrow, Goshawke, and the chattring Pie.

The Phcafant, Storke, and the high towring Faulcon,
 The Swanne that in the riuier takes delight,
 The Goldfinch, Blackebird, and the big neck'd Heron

The

The skreeching Owle that loues the duskie night,
 The Partridge, Griffon, and the liuely Peacocke,
 The Linnet, Bulfinch, Snipe, and rauening Puttocke.

The Robin Redbrast that in Winter sings,
 The Pellican, the Iay, and the chirping Sparrow,
 The little Wren that many yong ones brings,
Hercin, Ibis, and the swift wingd Swallow :
 The princely Eagle and Caladrius
 The Cuckow that to some is prosperous.

The snow-like colour'd bird, Caladrius,
 Hath this inestimable natural prosperitie,
 If any man in sicknesse dangerous,
 Hopes of his health to haue recouerie,
 This bird will alwayes looke with chearefull glance,
 If otherwife, sad is his countenance.

The Crane directed by the leaders voice,
 Flies ore the seas, to countries farre vnknowne,
 And in the secret night they do reioice
 To make a watch among them of their owne ;
 The watchman in his clawes holds fast a stone,
 Which letting fall the rest are wak'd anone.

The Spring-delighting bird we call the Cuckow,
 Which comes to tell of wonders in this age,
 Her prettie one note to the world doth shew,
 Some men their destinie, and doth preface
 The womans pleasure and the mans disgrace,
 Which she fits finging in a secret place.

Q 3

The Winters enuious blast she neuer tasteth,
 Yet in all countries doth the Cuckoe sing,
 And oftentimes to peopled townes she hasteth,
 Ther for to tell the pleasures of the Spring :
 Great Courtiers heare her voyce, but let her flye,
 Knowing that she prefageth Destiny.

This prety bird sometimes vpon the steeple,
 Sings Cuckoe, Cuckoe, to the parish Priest,
 Sometimes againe she flies amongst the people,
 And on their Crosse no man can her resist,
 But there she sings, yet some disdaining Dames,
 Do charme her hoarse, lest she should hit their names.

She scornes to labour or make vp a nest,
 But creepes by stealth into some others roome,
 And with the Larkes deare yong, her yong-ones rest,
 Being by subtile dealing ouercome :
 The yong birds are restoratiue to eate,
 And held amongst vs as a Princes meate.

The Princely Eagle of all Birds the King,
 For none but she can gaze against the Sunne,
 Her eye-sight is so cleare, that in her flying
 She spies the smallest beast that euer runne,
 As swift as gun-shot vsing no delay,
 So swiftly doth she flie to catch her pray.

She brings her birds being yong into the aire,
 And sets them for to looke on Phabus light,
 But if their eyes with gazing chance to water,

Those

Those she accounteth bastards, leaues them quight,
 But those that haue true perfect constant eyes,
 She cheriseth, the rest she doth despise.

The Griffon is a bird rich feathered,
 His head is like a Lion, and his flight
 Is like the Eagles, much for to be feared,
 For why he kills men in the vgly night :
 Some say he keepes the Smaragd and the Iasper,
 And in pursute of Man is monstros eger.

The gentle birds called the faire Hircinie,
 Taking the name of that place where they breed,
 Within the night they shine so gloriously,
 That mans astonied senses they do feed :
 For in the darke being cast within the way
 Giues light vnto the man that goes astray.

Ibis the bird flieth to Nilus flood,
 And drinking of the water purgeth cleane :
 Vnto the land of Ægypt he doth good,
 For he to rid their Serpents is a meane ;
 He feedeth on their egges, and doth destroy
 The Serpents nests that would their Clime annoy.

The Lapwing hath a piteous mournfull cry,
 And sings a sorrowfull and heauy song,
 But yet shee's full of craft and subtilty,
 And weepeth most being farthest from her yong :
 In elder age she seru'd for Southfayers
 And was a Prophetesse to the Augurers.

Q 4

The birds of Ægypt or Mennodides,
 Of Mennon that was flaine in rescuing Troy,
 Are said to flie away in companies,
 To Priams pallace, and there twice a day
 They fight about the turrets of the dead,
 And the third day in battell are confounded.

The Nightingale the nights true Chorister,
Musickes chiefe louer in the pleafant Spring,
 Tunes Hunts-vp to the Sunne that doth delight her,
 And to Arions harp aloud will fing :
 And as a Bridegroomer that to church is comming,
 So he falutes the Sunne when he is rising.

The Romane Cæsars, happie Emperours,
 Especially those of the yongest fort,
 Haue kept the Nightingale within their towers,
 To play, to dally, and to make them sport,
 And oftentimes in Greeke and Latine tong,
 They taught those birds to sing a pleafant fong.

This bird as Hiftories make mention,
 Sung in the infant mouth of Stefichorus,
 Which did foretell due commendation,
 In all his actions to be prosperous :
 So Bees when Plato in his bed did lie,
 Swarm'd round about his mouth, leauing their honie.

The sluggish slouthfull and the daftard Owle,
 Hating the day, and louing of the night,
 About old sepulchers doth daily howle,

Frequenting

Frequenting barnes and houfes without light,
 And hides him often in an Iuy tree,
 Leaft with fmall chattring birds wrong'd he fhould be.

*Fædaque fic volucris venturi nuntia luctus,
 Ignavus Bubo, dirum mortalibus omen.*

The filthy meffenger of ill to come
 The fluggifh Owle is, and to danger fome.

This ill bedooming Owle fate on the fpeare,
 Of warlike Pirrhus marching to the field,
 When to the Græcian armie he drew neare,
 Determining to make his foes to yeeld,
 Which did forefhew finifter happineffe,
 And balefull fortune in his bufineffe.

The Parrat cald the counterfeiting bird,
 Deckt with all colours that fair Flora yeelds,
 That after one will fpeake you word for word:
 Liuing in wooddie groues neare fertile fields,
 They haue bene knowne to giue great Emperors wine,
 And therefore fome men hold them for deuine.

The proud fun-brauing Peacocke with his feathers,
 Walkes all along, thinking himfelfe a King,
 And with his voyce prognoficates all weathers,
 Although God knowes but badly he doth fing:
 But when he lookes downe to his bafe blacke Feete,
 He droopes, and is afhamed of things unmeete.

The mighty Macedonian Alexander,

R

Marching in louely triumph to his foes,
 Being accounted the worlds conquerour,
 In Indie spies a Peacocke as he goes,
 And maruelling to see fo rich a fight,
 Charg'd all men not to kill his sweete delight.

The Pellican the wonder of our age,
 (As Ierome faith) reuiues her tender yong,
 And with her purest bloud, she doth affwage
 Her yong ones thirst, with poisonous Adder stong,
 And those that were supposed three dayes dead.
 She giues them life once more being nourished.

The vnfatiate Sparrow doth prognosticate,
 And is held good for diuination,
 For flying here and there, from gate to gate,
 Foretels true things by animaduertion :
 A flight of Sparrowes flying in the day,
 Did prophesie the fall and sacke of Troy.

The artificiall nest-composing Swallow,
 That eats his meate flying along the way,
 Whose swiftnesse in our eyficht doth allow,
 That no imperiall Bird makes her his pray :
 His yong ones being hurt within the cies,
 His helps them with the herbe Calcedonics.

Cocinna and the great Volateran,
 Being Pompeis warlike and approued knights,
 Sent letters by these Birds without a man,
 To many of their friends and chiefe delights,

And

And all their letters to their tecte did tie,
Which with great speed did bring them hastily.

The sweete recording Swanne Apolloes ioy,
And firy scorched Phaetons delight,
In footed verse fings out his deep annoy,
And to the siluer riuers takes his flight,
Prognosticates to Sailers on the seas,
Fortunes prosperitic and perfect ease.

*Cignus in auspicijs semper latissimus ales,
Hoc optant nautæ, quia se non mergit in undis.*

But what sad-mournefull drooping foule is this,
Within whose watry eyes fits Discontent,
Whose snaile-pac'd gate tels something is amisse :
From whom is banisht sporting Meriment :
Whose feathers mowt off, falling as he goes,
The perfect picture of hart pining woes ?

Phœnix.

This is the carefull bird the Turtle Doue,
Whose heauy croking note doth shew his grieffe,
And thus he wanders seeking of his loue,
Refusing all things that may yeeld reliefe :
All motions of good turnes, all Mirth and Ioy,
Are bad, fled, gone, and falne into decay.

Nature.

Is this the true example of the Heart ?
Is this the Tutor of faire Conflancy ?
Is this Loues treasure, and Loues pining smart ?
Is this the substance of all honesty ?

Phœnix.

R 2

And comes he thus attir'd, alas poore foule,
That Definies foule wrath should thee controule.

See Nourfe, he stares and lookes me in the face,
And now he mournes, worfe then he did before,
He hath forgot his dull flow heauy pace,
But with swift gate he eyes vs more and more :
O shall I welcome him, and let me borrow
Some of his grieffe to mingle with my sorrow.

Nature. Farwell faire bird, Ile leaue you both alone,
This is the Doue you long'd fo much to see,
And this will proue companion of your mone,
An Vmpire of all true humility :
Then note my Phenix, what there may enue,
And fo I kisse my bird. Adue, Adue.

Phenix. Mother farewell ; and now within his eyes,
Sits sorrow clothed in a sea of teares,
And more and more the billowes do arise :
Pale Grieffe halfe pin'd vpon his brow appeares,
His feathers fade away, and make him looke,
As if his name were writ in Deaths pale booke.

Turtle. O stay poore Turtle, whereat hast thou gazed,
At the eye-dazling Sunne, whose sweete reflection,
The round encompast heauenly world amazed ?
O no, a child of Natures true complexion,
The perfect Phenix of rariety,
For wit, for vertue, and excelling beauty.

Haile

Haile map of forrow : Tur. Welcome Cupid's child. Phoenix.
 Let me wipe off those teares vpon thy cheekes,
 That stain'd thy beauties pride, and haue defil'd
 Nature it felfe, that so vsurping seekes
 To fit vpon thy face, for Ile be partener,
 Of thy harts wrapped forrow more hereafter.

Natures faire darling, let me kneele to thee, Turtle.
 And offer vp my true obedience,
 And sacredly in all humility,
 Craue pardon for presumptions foule offence :
 Thy lawne-snow-colour'd hand shall not come neare
 My impure face, to wipe away one teare.

My teares are for my Turtle that is dead,
 My forrow springs from her want that is gone,
 My heauy note sounds for the foule that's fled,
 And I will dye for him left all alone :
 I am not liuing, though I feeme to go,
 Already buried in the graue of wo.

Why I haue left Arabia for thy fake, Phoenix.
 Because those fires haue no working substance,
 And for to find thee out did vndertake :
 Where on the mountaine top we may aduance
 Our fiery alter ; let me tell thee this,
Solamen miseris socios habuisse doloris.

Come poore lamenting foule, come fit by me,
 We are all one, thy forrow shall be mine,
 Fall thou a teare, and thou shalt plainly see,

R 3

Mine eyes shall answer teare for teare of thine :
 Sigh thou, Ile sigh, and if thou giue a grone,
 I shall be dead in answering of thy mone.

Turtle. Loues honorable Friend, one grone of yours,
 Will rend my sicke-loue-pining hart afunder,
 One sigh brings teares from me like Aprill showers,
 Procur'd by Sommers hote loud cracking thunder :
 Be you as mery as sweet mirth may be,
 Ile grone and sigh, both for your selfe and me.

Phœnix. Thou shalt not gentle Turtle, I will beare
 Halfe of the burdenous yoke thou dost sustaine,
 Two bodies may with greater ease outweare
 A troublefome labour, then Ile brooke some paine,
 But tell me gentle Turtle, tell me truly
 The difference betwixt false Loue and true Sinceritie.

Turtle. That shall I briefly, if youle giue me leaue,
 False loue is full of Enuie and Deceit,
 With cunning shifts our humours to deceiue,
 Laying downe poison for a sugred baite,
 Alwayes inconstant, false and variable,
 Delighting in fond change and mutable.

True loue, is louing pure, not to be broken,
 But with an honest eye, she eyes her loue,
 Not changing variable, nor neuer shoken
 With fond Suspition, secrets to discover,
 True loue will tell no lies, nor ne're dissemble,
 But with a bashfull modest feare will tremble.

False

Falſe loue puts on a Maſke to ſhade her folly,
 True loue goes naked wiſhing to be ſcene,
 Falſe loue will counterſeite perpetually,
 True loue is Troths ſweete emperizing Queene :
 This is the difference, true Loue is a iewell,
 Falſe loue, hearts tyrant, inhumane, and cruell.

What may we wonder at? O where is learning?
 Where is all difference twixt the good and bad?
 Where is Apelles art? where is true cunning?
 Nay where is all the vertue may be had?
 Within my Turtles boſome, ſhe refines,
 More then ſome louing perfect true deuines.

Phoenix.

Thou ſhalt not be no more the Turtle-Doue,
 Thou ſhalt no more go weeping al alone,
 For thou ſhalt be my ſelfe, my perfect Loue,
 Thy griefe is mine, thy forrow is my mone,
 Come kiſſe me ſweeteſt ſweete, O I do bleſſe
 This gracious luckie Sun-ſhine happineſſe.

How may I in all gratefullneſſe requite,
 This gracious fauor offred to thy ſeruant?
 The time affordeth heauineſſe not delight,
 And to the times appoint wee be obſeruant:
 Command, O do commaund, what ere thou wilt,
 My hearts bloud for thy fake ſhall ſtraight be ſpilt.

Turtle.

Then I command thee on thy tender care,
 And chiefe obedience that thou owſt to me,
 That thou eſpecially (deare Bird) beware

Phoenix.

Of impure thoughts, or vncleane chaffity :

For we must wast together in that fire,

That will not burne but by true Loues desire.

Turtle. A spot of that foule monster neare did staine,
These drooping feathers, nor I neuer knew
In what base filthy clymate doth remaine
That spright incarnate ; and to tell you true,
I am as spotlesse as the purest whight,
Cleare without staine, of enuy, or despight.

Phoenix. Then to yon next adioyning groue we'le flye,
And gather sweete wood for to make our flame,
And in a manner sacrificingly,
Burne both our bodies to reuiue one name :
And in all humblenefse we will intreate
The hot earth parching Sunne to lend his heate.

Turtle. Why now my heart is light, this very doome
Hath banisht sorrow from my pensive breast :
And in my bosome there is left no roome,
To set blacke melancholy, or let him rest ;
He fetch sweete mirrhe to burne, and licorice,
Sweete Iuniper, and straw them ore with spice.

Phoenix. Pile vp the wood, and let vs inuocate
His great name that doth ride within his chariot,
And guides the dayes bright eye, let's nominate
Some of his blessings, that he well may wot,
Our faithfull seruice and humility,
Offer'd vnto his highest Deity.

Great

Great God Apollo, for thy tender loue,
 Thou once didst beare to wilful Phaeton,
 That did desire thy chariots rule aboue,
 Which thou didst grieue in hart to thinke vpon :
 Send thy hot kindling light into this wood,
 That shall receiue the Sacrifice of blood.

For thy sweete Daphnes sake thy best beloued,
 And for the Harpe receiud of Mercury,
 And for the Muses of thee fauored,
 Whose gift of wit excels all excellency :
 Send thy hot kindling fire into this wood,
 That shall receiue the Sacrifice of blood.

Turtle.

For thy sweet fathers sake great Iupiter,
 That with his thunder-bolts commands the earth,
 And for Latonas sake thy gentle mother,
 That first gaue Phæbus glories liuely breath :
 Send thy hot kindling light into this wood,
 That shall receiue the sacrifice of blood.

Phoenix.

Stay, stay, poore Turtle, ô we are betraid,
 Behind yon little bush there sits a spy,
 That makes me blush with anger, halfe afraid,
 That in our motions secrecly would pry :
 I will go chide with him, and driue him thence,
 And plague him for presumptions foule offence.

Be not affraid, it is the Pellican,
 Looke how her yong-ones make her brest to bleed,
 And drawes the blood forth, do the best she can,

Turtle.

S

And with the fame their hungry fancies feede,
 Let her alone to vew our Tragedy,
 And then report our Loue that ſhe did ſee.

See beauteous Phœnix it begins to burne,
 O bleſſed Phœbus, happy, happy light,
 Now will I recompence thy great good turne,
 And firſt (deare bird) Ile vaniſh in thy fight,
 And thou ſhalt ſee with what a quicke deſire,
 Ile leape into the middle of the fire.

Phœnix. Stay Turtle ſtay, for I will firſt prepare ;
 Of my bones muſt the Princely Phœnix riſe,
 And iſt be poſſible thy bloud wele ſpare,
 For none but for my ſake, doſt thou deſpiſe
 This frailty of thy life, ô liue thou ſtill,
 And teach the baſe deceitfull world Loues will.

Turtle. Haue I come hither drooping through the woods,
 And left the ſpringing groues to ſeek for thee ?
 Haue I forooke to bathe me in the floods,
 And pin'd away in carefull miſery ?
 Do not deny me Phœnix I muſt be
 A partner in this happy Tragedy.

Phœnix. O holy, ſacred, and pure perfect fire,
 More pure then that ore which faire Dido mones,
 More ſacred in my louing kind deſire,
 Then that which burnt old Eſons aged bones,
 Accept into your euer hallowed flame,
 Two bodies, from the which may ſpring one name.

O ſweet

O sweet perfumed flame, made of those trees,
 Vnder the which the Muses nine haue song
 The praise of vertuous maids in misteries,
 To whom the faire fac'd Nymphes did often throng ;
 Accept my body as a Sacrifice
 Into your flame, of whom one name may rise.

Turtle.

O wilfulnesse, see how with smiling cheare,
 My poore deare hart hath slong himselve to thrall,
 Looke what a mirthfull countenance he doth beare,
 Spreading his wings abroad, and ioyes withall :
 Learne thou corrupted world, learne, heare, and see,
 Friendships vnspotted true sincerity.

Phoenix.

I come sweet Turtle, and with my bright wings,
 I will embrace thy burnt bones as they lye,
 I hope of these another Creature springs,
 That shall possesse both our authority :
 I stay to long, ô take me to your glory,
 And thus I end the Turtle Doues true story.

Finis. R. C.

Pellican.

WHat wondrous hart-griewing spectacle,
 Haft thou beheld the worlds true miracle?
 With what a spirit did the Turtle flye
 Into the fire, and chearfully did dye?
 He look't more pleafant in his countenance
 Within the flame, then when he did aduance,
 His pleafant wings vpon the naturall ground,

S 2

True perfect loue had fo his poore heart bound,
 The Phanix Natures deare adopted child,
 With a pale heauy count'nance, wan and mild,
 Grieu'd for to see him first possesse the place,
 That was allotted her, her selfe to grace,
 And followes cheerfully her second turne,
 And both together in that fire do burne.
 O if the rarest creatures of the earth,
 Because but one at once did ere take breath
 Within the world, should with a second he,
 A perfect forme of loue and amitie
 Burne both together, what should there arise,
 And be presented to our mortall eyes,
 Out of the fire, but a more perfect creature?
 Because that two in one is put by Nature,
 The one hath giuen the child inchaunting beautie,
 The other giues it loue and chastitie:
 The one hath giuen it wits rarietie
 The other guides the wit most charily:
 The one for vertue doth excell the rest,
 The other in true constancie is blest.
 If that the Phanix had bene separated,
 And from the gentle Turtle had bene parted,
 Loue had bene murdred in the infancie,
 Without these two no loue at all can be.
 Let the loue wandring wits but learne of these,
 To die together, so their griefe to ease:
 But louers now a dayes do loue to change,
 And here and there their wanton eyes do range,
 Not pleased with one choise, but seeking many,
 And in the end scarce is content with any:

Loue

Loue now adayes is like a shadowed fight,
 That shewes it felse in Phabus golden light,
 But if in kindnesse you do striue to take it,
 Fades cleane away, and you must needs forsake it.
 Louers are like the leaues with Winter shoken,
 Brittle like glasse, that with one fall is broken.
 O fond corrupted age, when birds shall show
 The world their dutie, and to let men know
 That no sinister chaunce should hinder loue,
 Though as these two did, deaths arrest they proue.
 I can but mourne with sadnesse and with griefe,
 Not able for to yeeld the world reliefe,
 To see these two consumed in the fire,
 Whom Loue did copulate with true desire :
 But in the worlds wide eare I meane to ring
 The fame of this dayes wondrous offspring,
 That they may sing in notes of Chastitie,
 The Turtle and the Phenix amitie

Conclusion.

GEntle conceiuers of true meaning Wit,
 Let good Experience iudge what I haue writ,
 For the Satyricall fond applauded vaines,
 Whose bitter worme-wood spirite in some straines,
 Bite like the Curres of Aegypt those that loue them,
 Let me alone, I will be loth to moue them,
 For why, when mightie men their wit do proue,
 How shall I leaft of all expect their loue ?
 Yet to those men I gratulate some paine,
 Because they touch those that in art do faine.

S 3

But those that haue the spirit to do good,
 Their whips will will neuer draw one drop of blood ;
 To all and all in all that view my labour,
 Of euery iudging fight I craue some fauour
 At least to reade, and if you reading find,
 A lame leg'd staffe, tis lameness of the mind
 That had no better skill : yet let it passe,
 For burdnous lodes are fet vpon an Ass.
 From the sweet fire of perfumed wood,
 Another princely Phanix vpriht stood :
 Whose feathers purified did yeeld more light,
 Then her late burned mother out of sight,
 And in her heart restes a perpetuall loue,
 Sprong from the bosome of the Turtle-Douc.
 Long may the new vprising bird increase,
 Some humors and some motions to release,
 And thus to all I offer my deuotion,
 Hoping that gentle minds accept my motion.

Finis R. C.

Cantoes Alphabet-wise to faire Phœ-nix made by the Paphian Douc.

A. 1.

A Hill, a hill, a Phanix seekes a Hill ;
 A promontorie top, a stately Mountaine,
 A Riuer, where poore foule she dippes her bill,
 And that sweete siluer streame is Natures fountaine,
 Accomplishing all pleasures at her will :
 Ah, be my Phanix. I will be thy Douc,
 And thou and I in secrecie will loue.

B. 2.

B. 2.

Blaze not my loue, thou Herald of the day,
 Blesse not the mountaine tops with my sweet shine,
 Beloued more I am then thou canst fay,
 Blessed and blessed be that Saint of mine,
 Balme, honie sweet, and honor of this Clime :
 Blotted by things vnscene, belou'd of many,
 But Loues true motion dares not giue to any.

C. 3.

Chastnesse farewell, farewell the bed of Glorie,
 Constraint adew, thou art loues Enemy,
 Come true Report, make of my Loue a Storie,
 Cast lots for my poore heart, so thou enjoy me,
 Come come sweet Phanix, I at length do claime thee,
 Chaste bird, too chaste, to hinder what is willing,
 Come in mine armes and wele not fit a billing.

D. 4.

Deuout obedience on my knees I profer,
 Delight matcht with delight, if thou do craue it,
 Denie not gentle Phanix my sweet offer,
 Despaire not in my loue, for thou shalt haue it,
 Damne not the foule to woe if thou canst saue it :
 Doves pray deuoutly, O let me request,
 Delicious loue to build within thy nest.

E. 5.

Enuie is banisht, do not thou despaire,
 Euill motions tempt thee sooner then the good :
 Enrich thy beautie that art fam'd for faire,
 Euey thing's silent to conioyne thy blood,
 Esteeme the thing that cannot be withstood :
 Esteeme of me, and I will lend thee fire,

Euen of mine owne to fit thy sweet desire.

F. 6.

Faint harted foule, why dost thou die thy cheekes,
 Fearfull of that which will reuiue thy fence,
 Faith and obedience thy sweet mercy feekes,
 Friends plighted war with thee I will commence,
 Feare not at all, tis but sweet Loues offence,
 Fit to be done, so doing tis not fecne,
 Fetcht from the ancient records of a Queene.

G. 7.

Gold beautifying Phanix, I must praise thee,
 Granut gracious heauens a delightfome Muse,
 Giue me old Homers spirit, and Ile raise thee,
 Gracious in thought do not my Loue refuse,
 Great map of beauty make thou no excuse,
 Gainst my true louing spirit do not carpe,
 Grant me to play my Sonnet on thy Harpe.

H. 8.

Health to thy vertues, health to all thy beauty,
 Honour attend thy steps when thou art going,
 High heauens force the birds to owe thee duty;
 Hart-groning care to thee still stands a woiing,
 Haue pittty on him Phanix for so doing:
 Helpe his disease, and cure his malady,
 Hide not thy secreet glory leaft he die.

I. 9.

I Loue, ô Loue how thou abusest me,
 I fee the fire, and warme me with the flame,
 I note the errors of thy deity:
 In Vestas honor, Venus lusts to tame,
 I in my humors yeeld thee not a name,

I count

I count thee foolish, sic Adultrous boy,
I touch the sweete, but cannot tast the ioy.

K. 10.

Kiffes are true loues pledges, kisse thy deare Turtle,
Keepe not from him the secrets of thy youth :
Knowledge he'le teach thee vnder a greene spred Mirtle,
Kend shalt thou be of no man, of my truth,
Know first the motion, when the life ensueth :
 Knocke at my harts dore, I will be thy porter,
 So thou wilt let me enter in thy dorter.

L. 11.

Loue is my great Aduotrix, at thy shrine
Loue pleads for me, and from my tongue doth fay,
Lie where thou wilt, my hart shall sleepe with thine,
Lamenting of thy beauty fresh as May,
Looke Phanix to thy selfe do not decay :
 Let me but water thy dead saplesse floure,
 Loue giues me hope t'will flourish in an houre.

M. 12.

Make not a Jewell of nice Chastity,
Muste and summon all thy wits in one,
My heart to thee sweares perfect constancy :
Motions of zeale are to be thought vpon,
Marke how thy time is ouerspente, and gone,
 Mis-led by folly, and a kind of feare,
 Marke not thy beauty so my dearest deare.

N. 13.

Note but the fresh bloom'd Rose within her pride,
(No Rose to be compared vnto thee)
Nothing so soone vnto the ground will slide,
Not being gathered in her chiefeft beauty,

T

Neglecting time it dies with infamy :

Neuer be coy, left whil'ft thy leaues are fpred,
None gather thee, and then thy grace is dead.

O. 14.

O looke vpon me, and within my brow,
Officious motions of my hart appeares,
Opening the booke of Loue, wherein I vow,
Ouer thy shrine to fhed continuall teares :
O no, I fee my Phœnix hath no Eares,
Or if ſhe haue Eares, yet no Eyes to fee,
O all difgraced with continuall follie.

P. 15.

Proud Chafteity, why doſt thou ſeeke to wrong
Phœnix my Loue, with leſſons too precise ?
Pray thou for me, and I will make a ſong,
Pend in thine honor, none ſhall equalize,
Poſſeſſe not her, whoſe beauty charmes mine eyes,
Plead, ſue, and ſeeke, or I will baniſh thee,
Her body is my Caſtle and my fee.

Q. 16.

Queſtion not Phœnix why I adore thee,
Quite captiuatè and priſner at thy call,
Quit me with Loue againe, do not abhor me,
Queld downe with hope as ſubiugate to thrall,
Quail'd will I neuer be deſpight of all ;
Quaking I ſtand before thee, ſtill expecting
Thine owne conſent, our ioyes to be effecting.

R. 17.

Remember how thy beauty is abuſed,
Ract on the tenter-hookes of foule diſgrace,
Riuers are dry, and muſt be needs refuſed

Reſtore

Restore new water in that dead founts place,
 Refresh thy feathers, beautifie thy face :
 Reade on my booke, and there thou shalt behold
 Rich louing letters printed in fine gold.

S. 18.

Shame is ashamed to see thee obstinate,
 Smiling at thy womanish conceipt,
 Swearing that honor neuer thee begat,
 Sucking in poyson for a sugred baite,
 Singing thy pride of beauty in her height :
 Sit by my side, and I will sing to thee
 Sweet ditties of a new fram'd harmony.

T. 19.

Thou art a Turtle wanting of thy mate,
 Thou crök'ft about the groues to find thy Louer,
 Thou fly'ft to woods, and fertile plaines dost hate :
 Thou in obliuion dost true vertue smother,
 To thy sweete selfe thou canst not find another :
 Turn vp my bosome, and in my pure hart,
 Thou shalt behold the Turtle of thy smart.

V. 20.

Vpon a day I fought to scale a Fort,
 Vnited with a Tower of sure defence ;
 Vncomfortable trees did marre my sport,
 Vnlucky Fortune with my woes expence,
Venus with Mars would not sweet war commence,
 Vpon an Alter would I offer Loue,
 And Sacrifice my soule poore Turtle Doue.

W. 21.

Weepe not my Phenix, though I daily weepe,
 Woe is the Herald that declares my tale,

T 2

Worthy thou art in Venus lap to sleepe,
 Wantonly couered with God Cupids vale,
 With which he doth all mortall fence exhale :
 Wash not thy cheekes, vnlesse I fit by thee,
 To dry them with my sighes immediatly.

X. 22.

Xantha faire Nimph ; resemble not in Nature,
Xantippe Loue to patient Socrates,
Xantha my Loue is a more milder creature,
 And of a Nature better for to please :
Xantippe thought her true loue to diseafe,
 But my rare Phoenix is at last well pleas'd,
 To cure my passions, passions seldom eas'd.

Y. 23.

Yf thou haue pittie, pittie my complaining,
 Yt is a badge of Vertue in thy fence,
 Yf thou do kill me with thy coy disdaining,
 Yt will at length thy selfe-will anguish vexe,
 And with continuall sighes thy selfe perplexe :
 He helpe to bring thee wood to make thy fire,
 If thou wilt giue me kisses for my hire.

Z. 24.

Zenobia at thy feete I bend my knee,
 For thou art Queene and Empresse of my hart,
 All blessed hap and true felicity,
 All pleasures that the wide world may impart,
 Befall thee for thy gracious good defart :
 Accept my meaning as it fits my turne,
 For I with thee to ashes meane to burne.

Finis.

Cantoes Verbally written.

I.

Pittie me that dies for thee.

Pittie
me
that dies for thee.

Pittie my plainings thou true nurse of pittie,
 Me hath thy piercing lookes enjoynd to fighting,
 That cannot be redressed, for thy beautie
 Dies my sad heart, sad heart that's drown'd with weeping :
 For what so ere I thinke, or what I doe,
 Thee with mine eyes, my thoughts, my heart, I woe.

2.

My life you saue, if you I haue.

My life
you saue
if you
I
haue.

My eyes, my hand, my heart seeke to maintaine
 Life for thy loue, therefore be gracious,
 You with your kindnesse haue my true heart flaine,
 Saue my poore life, and be not tyrannous,
 If any grace do in thy breast remaine,
 You women haue bene counted amorous ;
 I pine in sadnesse, all proceeds from thee,
 Haue me in liking through thy clemencie.

3.

Do thou by me, as I by thee.

Do
thou by me, as
I
by

Do not exchange thy loue, lest in exchanging,
 Thou beare the burd'nous blot of foule disgrace,
 By that bad fault are many faults containing,
 Me still assuring nothing is so base,
 As in the worlds eye alwayes to be ranging :
 I sweare sweete Phenix in this holy case,
 By all the sacred reliques of true loue,

T 3

thee. Thee to adore whom I still constant proue.

4.

*Voutfate to thinke how I do pine,
In louing thee that art not mine.*

Voutfate Voutfate with splendor of thy gracious looke,
to To grace my passions, passions still increasing :
thinke Thinke with thy selfe how I thy absence brooke,
how How day by day, my plaints are neuer ceasing,
I I haue for thee all companies forfooke ;
do Do thou reioyce, and in reioycing say,
pine, Pine nere so much Ile take thy grieſe away.

In In that great gracing word shalt thou be counted
louing Louing to him, that is thy true ſworne louer, thee Thee on the ſtage of honor haue I mounted,
that That no baſe miſtie cloud ſhall euer couer :
art Art thou not faire? thy beautie do not ſmother ;
not Not in thy flouring youth, but ſtill ſuppoſe mine. Mine owne to be, my neuer dying Roſe.

5.

*My deſtinie to thee is knowne,
Cure thou my ſmart, I am thine owne.*

My My time in loues blind idleneſſe is ſpent,
deſtinie Deſtinie and Fates do will it fo,
to To Circes charming tongue mine eare I lent,
thee Thee louing that doſt wiſh my ouerthrow :
is Is not this world wrapt in inconstancie,
knowne. Knowne to moſt men as hels miſerie?

Cure Cure of my wound is paſt all Phiſickes ſkill, thou Thou maiſt be gracious, at thy very looke

My

my My wounds will close, that would my bodie kill,
smart Smart will be casde that could no plaisters brooke ;
I I of my Phanix being quite forfooke,
am Am like a man that nothing can fulfill :
thine Thine cuer-piercing eye of force will make me,
owne. Owne heart, owne loue, that neuer will forsake thee.

6.

Ore my heart your eyes do idolatrize
Ore Ore the wide world my loue-layes Ile be fending.
my My loue-layes in my Loues praife alwayes written,
heart Heart comfortable motions still attending,
your Your beautie and your vertuous zeale commending,
eyes Eyes that no frosts-cold-rage hath cuer bitten :
do Do you then thinke that I in Loues hot fire,
idola- Idolatrize and surphet in desire.
trize

7.

I had rather loue though in vaine that face,
Then haue of any other grace.
I I being forc'd to carrie Venus shield,
had Had rather beare a Phanix for my crest,
rather Rather then any bird within the field,
loue Loue tells me that her beautie is the best :
though Though some desire faire Vestas Turtle-doue,
in In my Birds bofome resteth perfect loue.

Vaine Vaine is that blind vnskillfull herauldric, that That will not caufe my bird that is so rare,
face, Face all the world for her rarietie,
then Then who with her for honor may compare ?
haue Haue we one like her for her pride of beautie,
of Of all the feathered Quier in the aire ?

any Any but unto her do owe their dutie :
other Other may blaze, but I will alwaies say,
grace. Grace whom thou list, she beares the palme away.

8.

What euer fall, I am at call.

What What thunder stormes of enuie shall arise,
euer Euer to thee my heart is durable,
fall, Fall fortunes wheele on me to tyrannize,
I I will be alwayes found inexorable :
am Am I not then to thee most stable ?
at At morne, midnight, and at mid-dayes funne,
call. Call when thou wilt, my deare, to thee Ile runne.

9.

*I had rather loue, though in vaine that face,
 Then haue of any other grace,*

I I now do wish my loue should be releued, had Had I my thoughts in compasse of my will,
rather Rather than liue and surfeit being griued, loue Loue in my breast doth wondrous things fulfill,
though Though loues vnkindnesse many men do kill,
in In her I trust, that is my true sworne louer,
vaine Vaine he doth write that doth her vertues smother.

that That she is faire, Nature her selfe alloweth,
face, Face full of beauty, eyes refembling fire,
then Then my pure hart to loue thy hart still voweth,
haue Haue me in fauour for my good desire,
of Of holy loue, Loues Temple to aspire ;
any Any but thee my thoughts will nere require,
other Other sweet motions now I will conceale grace. Grace these rude lines that my hearts thoughts reueale.

10. Dif-

10.

Disgrace not me, in louing thee.

Disgrace Disgrace be banisht from thy heavenly brow,
not Not entertained of thy piercing eie,
me Me thy sweete lippes, a sweet touch will allow,
in In thy faire bosome would I alwayes lie,
louing Louing in such a downe-bed to be placed,
thee. Thee for to please, my selfe for euer graced.

11.

*I had rather loue though in vaine that face,
 Then haue of any other grace.*

I I liue enricht with gifts of great content, had Had my desires the guerdon of good will,
rather Rather then taste of Fortunes fickle bent,
loue Loue bids me die, and scorne her witleffe skill,
though Though Loue command, Despaire doth stil attend,
in In hazard proues oft times but doubtfull end.
vaine Vaine is the loue encountred with denayes,
that That yeelds but grieffe, where grace should rather grow,
face, Face full of furie, voide of curteous praise :
then Then since all loue consists of weale and woe,
haue Haue still in mind, that loue deserues the best,
of Of hearts the touchstone, inward motions louing,
any Any that yeelds the fruite of true-loues rest,
other Other I loue vnworthie of commending,
grace. Grac'd with bare beautie, beautie most offending.

12.

My selfe and mine, are alwayes thine.

My My care to haue my blooming Rose not wither,
selfe Selfe-louing Enuie shall it not denie,
and And that base weed thy growth doth seeke to hinder,

V

mine Mine hands shall pull him vp immediatly, are Are they not enuious monsters in thine eie, alwayes Alwayes with vaine occasions to inclose thine. Thine euer growing beautie, like the Rose?

13.

The darting of your eies, may heale or wound,
Let not empiring lookes my heart confound.

The The ey-bals in your head are Cupids fire,
darting Darting fuch hot sparkles at my brest,
of Of force I am enthrald, and do desire your Your gracious loue, to make me happie blest:
eies Eyes, lippes, and tongue haue caused my vnrest,
may May I vnto the height of grace aspire,
heale Heale my sicke heart with loues great grieve opprest,
or Or if to fire thou wilt not yeeld fuch fuell,
wound. Wound me to death, and so be counted cruell.

Let Let the wide ope-mouth'd world flaunder the guiltie,
not Not my dead Phenix, that doth seorne fuch shame,
empiring Empiring honor blots fuch infamie,
lookes Lookes dart away the blemish of that name;
my My thoughts prognosticate thy Ladies pittie:
heart Hearts-cafe to thee, this counsell will I giue, confound Confound thy foes, but let true louers liue.

14.

You are my ioy, be not so coy.

You You best belou'd, you honor of delight,
are Are the bright shining Starre that I adore,
my My eyes like Watchmen gaze within the night,

Ioy

ioy, Ioy fills my heart when you do shine before,
be not Be not difgrasue to thy friend therefore :
too Too glorious are thy lookes to entertaine
coy. Coy thoughts, fell peeuisht deeds, our base difdaine.

15.

For you I die, being absent from mine eye.

For For all the holy rites that Venus vscth,
you You I coniure to true obedience :
I I offer faith, which no kind hart refuseth,
die, Die periur'd Enuie for thy late offence,
being Being enamored of rich Beauties pride,
absent Absent, I freeze in Winters pining cold,
from From thee I sit, as if thou hadst denide,
my My loue-sicke passions twentie times retold :
eye. Eye-dazling Mistris, with a looke of pittie,
 Grace my sad Song, and my hearts pining Dittie.

16.

Send me your heart, to ease my smart.

Send Send but a glaunce of amours from thine eie,
me Me will it rauish with exceeding pleasure,
your Your eye-bals do enwrap my destinie,
heart Heart sicke with sorrow, sorrow out of measure,
to To thinke vpon my loues continuall folly :
ease Ease thou my paine from pitties golden treasure ;
my My grieffe proceeds from thee, and I suppose smart. Smart of my smart will my lifes blood inclose.

17.

Seeing you haue mine, let me haue thine.

Seeing Seeing my passions are so penetrable,
you You of all other should be pittifull,
haue Haue mind of me, and you'll be fauourable,

V 2

mine Mine hart doth tell me you are mercifull,
let Let my harts loue be alwayes violable,
me Me haue you found in all things dutifull,
haue Haue me in fauour, and thy felfe shalt see,
thine. Thine and none others, will I all wayes be.

18.

Within thy brest, my hart doth rest.

Within Within the circuit of a Christall spheare,
thy Thy eyes are plaft, and vnderneath those eyes,
brest, Brest of hard flint, eares that do scorne to heare
my My dayes sad gronings, and night waking cries, hart Hart fore sicke passions, and Loues agonies, doth Doth it become thy beauty? no, a staine rest. Rests on thy bright brow wrinckled with disdaine.

19.

O let me heare, from thee my deare.

O O tongue thou hast blasphem'd thy holy Goddesse,
let Let me do penance for offending thee,
me Me do thou blame for my forgetfulnessse:
heare, Heare my submission, thou wilt succor me:
from From thy harts closet commeth gentlenessse:
thee Thee hath the world admir'd for clemency,
my My hart is forrie, and Ile bite my tongue,
deare. Deare that to thee, to thee I offred wrong.

20.

My Phœnix rare, is all my care.

My My life, my hart, my thoughts, I dedicate,
Phœnix Phœnix to thee, Phœnix of all beauty,
rare, Rare things in hart of thee I meditate,
is Is it not time, I come to shew my duty?
all All fauours vnto thee I consecrate,

My

my My goods, my lands, my selfe, and all is thine, care. Care those that list, so thou faire bird be mine.

21.

I would I might, be thy delight.

I I wish for things, would they might take effect,
would Would they might end, and we enioy our pleasure,
I I vow I would not proffred time neglect,
might, Might I but gather such vnlook't for treasure,
be Be all things enuious I would the respect,
thy Thy fauours in my hart I do enroule, delight. Delight matcht with delight, doth me controule.

22.

If I you haue, none else I craue.

If If adoration euer were created,
I I am a Maister of that holy Art,
you You my aduotrix, whom I haue admired,
haue, Haue of my true deuotion bore a part :
none None but your selfe may here be nominated,
else Else would my tongue my true obedience thwart :
I I cannot flatter, Loue will not allow it,
craue. Craue thou my hart, on thee I will bestow it.

23.

Be you to me, as I to thee.

Be Bee the poore Bee, sucke hony from the flower,
you You have a spacious odoriferous field,
to To tast all moysture, where in sweet Floras bower,
me, Me shall you find submissiuely to yeeld,
as As a poore Captiue looking for the hower ;
I I may haue gracious lookes, else am I kild,
to To dye by you were life, and yet thy shame,
thee. Thee would the wide world hate, my folly blame.

V 3

24

You are the first, in whom I trust.

*You
are the first,
in whom
I
trust.* You in your bosome hauing plac'd a light,
Are the chiefe admirall vnto my Fleet,
The Lanthorne for to guide me in the night,
First to the shore, where I may set my feet
In safegard, void of Dangers cruell spight,
Whom in disgrace Loue and fel Enuie meet,
I muster vp my spirits, and they flie ;
Trust of thy faith controules mine enemie.

25.

You are the last my loue shall taste.

*You
are
the last,
my loue shall taste.* You standing on the tower of hope and feare,
Are timorous of selfe-will foolishnesse,
The onely Viper that doth loue-laies teare,
Last can it not, tis womans pceuishnesse,
My kind affections can it not forbear,
Loue tells me that tis bred in idlenesse,
Shall such occasion hinder thee or me ?
Taste first the fruit, and then commend the tree.

26.

If you I had, I should be glad.

*If
you
I had,
I should be glad.* If the Sunne shine, the haruest man is glad,
You are my Sunne, my dayes delightfome Qucene,
I am your haruest laborer almost mad,
Had I not my glorious commet feene,
I wish that I might sit within thy shade,
Should I be welcome ere thy beautie fade :
Be not Narcissus, but be alwaies kind,
Glad to obtain the thing thou neare couldst find.

27.

Thou

Though place be far, my heart is nar.

Though Though thou my Doue from me be separated,
place Place, nor the distance shall not hinder me,
be Be constant for a while, thou maist be thwarted,
far, Far am I not, He come to succour thee.
my My heart and thine, my sweet shall nere be parted,
heart Heart made of loue, and true simplicitie :
is Is not Loue lawlesse, full of powerfull might,
nar. Nar to my heart that still with Loue doth fight.

28.

My thoughts are dead, cause thou art sped.

My My inward Muse can sing of nought but Loue, thoughts Thoughts are his Heralds, flying to my breast are Are entertained, if they thence remoue,
dead, Dead shall their master be, and in vnrest ;
cause Cause all the world thy hatred to reprove, thou Thou art that All-in-all that I loue best :
art Art thou then cruell ? no thou canst not be sped. Sped with so foule a fiend as Crueltie.

29.

I send my heart to thee, where gladly I would be.

I I of all other am faire Venus thrall,
send Send me but pleafant glances of thine eie,
my My foule will leape with ioy and dance withall,
heart Heart of my heart, and foules felicitie :
to To beauties Queene my heart is sanctified, thee. Thee about all things haue I deified.

Where Where is Affections ? fled to Enuies caue ?
gladly Gladlic my Thoughts would beare her companie,
I I from foule bondage will my Phanix saue,

would Would she in loue requite my courtesie,
be. Be louing as thou art faire, else shall I sing,
 Thy beautie a poinsous bitter thing.

30.

*If you me iust haue knowne,
 Then take me for your owne.*

If If you be faire, why should you be vnkind?
you You haue no perfect reason for the same,
me Me thinks it were your glorie for to find iust Iust measure at my hands, but you to blame
haue Haue from the deepest closet of your heart, known, Knowne my pure thoughts, and yet I pine in smart.

Then Then in the deepest measure of pure loue,
take Take pittie on the sad sicke pining soule,
me Me may you count your vnknowne Turtle-Doue,
for For in my bosomes chamber, I enroule your Your deepe loue-darting eie, and still will be owne. Owne of your owne, despight extremitie.

31.

My heart I send, to be your friend.

My My deare foules comfort, and my hopes true folace,
heart Heart of my heart, and my liues secret ioy,
I I in conceit do thy sweete selfe embrace,
send, Send cloudie exhalations cleane away
to To the blind mistie North, there for to stay:
be Be thou my arbour, and my dwelling place,
your Your armes the circling folds that shall enclose me, friend. Friend me with this, and thou shalt neuer lose me.

32.

I haue no loue, but you my done.

I

I I pine in sadnesse, and in sad songs finging
haue Haue spent my time, my ditties harsh and ill,
no No fight but thy faire fight would I be fecing :
loue Loue in my bosome keepes his castle still,
but But being disseuered I sit alwayes pining,
you You do procure me Niobes cup to fill,
my My dutie yet remembred I dare proue,
doue. Doues haue no power for to exchange their Loue.

34.

I will not change, though some be strange.

I I cannot stir one foote from Venus gate,
will Will you come sit, and beare me company ?
not Not one but you can make me fortunate :
change Change when thou wilt, it is but cruelty,
though Though vnto women it is giuen by fate,
some Some gentle minds these ranging thoughts do hate :
be Be thou of that mind, else I will conclude,
strange. Strange hast thou alter'd Loue, to be so rude.

Thoughts keepe me waking.

Thoughts Thoughts like the ayrie puffing of the wind,
keepe Keepe a sweet faining in my Loue-sicke brest,
me Me still assuring that thou art most kind,
waking. Waking in pleasure, sleeping sure in rest :
 That no sleepe dreamings, nor no waking cries,
 To our sweet louing thoughts, sweet rest denies.

Seeing that my heart made choise of thee,

Then frame thy selfe to comfort me.

Seeing Seeing Loue is pleas'd with Loues enamor'd ioyes, that That Fortune cannot crosse sweet Cupids will,

X

my My Loues content, not with fond wanton toys :
heart Hart of my hart doth Loues vnkindneffe kill,
made Made by fond tongues vpbraiding hurtfull skill :
choise Choise now is fram'd to further all annoyes :
of Of all sweete thoughts, of all sweete happie rest,
thee, Thee have I chose, to make me three times blest.

Then Then let our holy true aspiring loue, frame Frame vs the sweetest musicke of Desire :
thy Thy words shall make true concord, and remoue selfe Selfe-will it selfe, for Venus doth require to To be acquainted with thy beauties fire :
comfort Comfort my heart, for comfort tels me this,
me. Me hast thou chose of all to be thy blisse.

*My heart is bound to fauour thee,
 Then yeeld in time to pittie me.*

My My Phenix hath two starre-refembling Eyes,
heart Heart full of pittie, and her smiling looke,
is Is of the Sunnes complexion, and replies,
bound Bound for performance by faire Venus booke
to To faithfulnessse, which from her nurse she tooke :
fauour Fauour in her doth spring, in vertuous praise,
thee, Thee Eloquence it selfe shall seeke to raife.

Then Then in performance of this gracious right,
yeeld Yeeld vp that piteous heart to be my Louer,
in In recompence how I haue lou'd thy fight,
time Time shall from time to time to thee discouer :
to To thee is giuen the power of Cupids might,
pittie Pittie is writ in gold vpon thy hart,

Me

me. Me promising to cure a curelesse smart.

I ioy to find a constant mind.

I I am encompass round about with ioy,
ioy Ioy to enioy my sweete, for she protesteth
to To comfort me that languish in annoy,
find Find ease if any sorrow me molesteth,
a A happie man that such a loue possesseth:
constant Constant in words, and alwayes vowes to loue me, mind. Mind me she will, but yet she dares not proue me.

*My heart by hope doth liue,
 Desire no ioy doth giue.*

My My loue and dearest life to thee I consecrate, heart Heart of my hearts deare treasure, for I striue
by By thy deuinenesse too deuine to nominate,
hope Hope of approued faith in me must thriue :
doth Doth not the God of Loue that's most deuine, liue. Liue in thy bosomes closet and in mine ?

Desire Desire to that vnspeakable delight,
no No sharpe conceited wit can nere set downe,
ioy Ioy in the world to worldly mens ey-sight,
doth Doth but ignoble thy imperiall crowne :
giue. Giue thou the onfet and the foe will flie,
 Amazed at thy great commanding beautie,

*Death shall take my life away,
 Before my friendship shall decay.*

Death Death that heart-wounding Lord, sweet louers foe, shall Shall lay his Ebone darts at thy faire feete,

X 2

take Take them into thy hand and worke my woe,
my My woe that thy minds anguish will regret :
life Life, hart, ioy, greeting and all my pleasure,
away. Away are gone and fled from my deare treasure.

Before Before one staine shal blot thy scarlet die,
my My bloud shal like a fountaine wash the place,
friendship Friendship it felse knit with mortality,
shall Shall thy immortal blemish quite disgrace :
decay. Decay shall all the world, my Loue in thee
 Shall liue vnfain'd vntoucht perpetually

*Let truth report what hart I beare,
 To her that is my dearest deare.*

Let Let not foule pale-fac'd Enuy be my foe,
truth Truth must declare my spotlesse loyalty,
report Report vnto the world shall plainly show
what What hart deare Loue I alwayes bore to thee, heart Hart fram'd of perfect Loues sincerity :
I I cannot flatter, this I plainely say,
beare, Beare with false words, ile beare the blame away.

To To change in loue is a base simple thing,
her Her name will be orestrain'd with perjury,
that That doth delight in nothing but dissembling ?
is Is it not shame so for to wrong faire beauty,
my My true approued toung must answer I dearest Dearest beware of this, and learne of me, deare. Deare is that Loue combin'd with Chastity.

Scene hath the eye, chosen hath the hart :

Firme

Firme is the faith, and loth to depart.

Scene Scene in all learned arts is my beloued,
hath Hath anie one to faire a Loue as I?
the The stony-hearted sauage hath she moued,
ie, Eye for her eye tempts blushing chastitie,
chosen Chosen to make their nine a perfect ten,
hath Hath the sweet Muses honored her agen.

The The bright-ey'd wandring world doth alwaies seeke, heart, Heart-curing comfort doth proceed from thee,
firme Firme trust, pure thoughts, a mind that's alwayes meeke,
is Is the true Badge of my loues Soueraigntie :
the The honor of our age, the onely faire,
faith, Faiths mistris, and Truths deare adopted heire.

And And those that do behold thy heauenly beautie, loth Loth to forsake thee, spoile themselues with gazing,
to To thee all humane knees proffer their dutie,
depart. Depart they will not but with sad amazing :
 To dimme their ey-sight looking gainst the funne,
 Whose hot reflecting beames will neare be donne.

No woe so great in loue, not being heard,
No plague so great in loue, being long deferd.

No No tongue can tell the world my hearts deepe anguish, woe Woe, and the minds great perturbation
so So trouble me, that day and night I languish, great Great cares in loue seeke my destruction :
in In all things gracious, sauing onely this,
loue. Loue is my foe, that I account my blisse.

X 3

Not Not all the world could profer me disgrace, being Being maintained fairest faire by thee,
hard, Hard-fortune shall thy seruant nere outface,
no No stormes of Discord should discomfort me :
plague Plague all the world with frownes my Turtle-Doue,
so So that thou smile on me and be my loue.

great Great Miftris, matchlesse in thy foueraigntie,
in In lue and recompence of my affection,
loue Loue me againe, this do I beg of thee,
being Being bound by Cupids kind direction :
long Long haue I fu'd for grace, yet stil I find,
deferd. Deferd I am by her that's most vnkind.

*And if my loue shall be releu'd by thee,
 My heart is thine, and so account of me.*

And And yet a stedfast hope maintaines my hart,
if If anie fauour fauourably procede
my My deare from thee, the curer of my smart,
loue Loue that easeth minds opprest with neede,
shal be Shall be the true Phisition of my grieffe,
releu'd Releu'd alone by thee that yeeld'st reliefe.

by By all the holy rites that Loue adoreth, thee, Thee haue I lou'd about the loue of any,
My My heart in truth thee alwayes fauoureth,
heart Heart freed from any one, then freed from many :
is Is it not base to change? yea so they say,
thine Thine owne confession loue denies delay.

and And by the high imperiall seate of Ioue,
so So am I forc'd by Cupid for to sweare, account Account I must of thee my Turtle-doue,

Of

of Of thee that Times long memorie shall outweare :
me. Me by thy stedfast truth and faith denying,
 To promise any hope on thee relying.

*My passions are a hell and death to me,
 Vnlesse you feele remorse and pitie me.*

My My sweetest thoughts sweet loue to thee I fend, passions Passions deeply ingrafted, vnremouable are Are my affections, and I must commend a A stedfast trust in thee most admirable :
hell Hell round enwraps my bodie by disdaine,
and And then a heauen if thou loue againe.

death Death haunts me at the heeles, yet is afraid,
to To touch my bosome, knowing thou lou'st me,
me, Me sometimes terrifying by him betraid,
vnlesse Vnlesse sweete helpfull succour come from thee :
you You well I know, the honor of mine eie,
feele Feele some remorsefull helpe in miserie.

remorse Remorce fits on thy brow triumphantly,
and And smiles vpon my face with gentle cheere ;
pittie Pittie, loues gracious mother dwels in thee,
me. Me faouering, abandoning base icare,
 Death is amazed, viewing of thy beautie,
 Thinking thy selfe perfect eternitie.

*My purest loue doth none but thee adore,
 My heartie thoughts are thine, I loue no more.*

My My comfortable sweete approued Mistris, purest Purest of all the pure that nature framed,
loue Loue in the height of all our happinesse,

doth Doth tell me that thy vertues are not named :
none None can giue forth thy constancie approued,
but But I that tride thy faith, my best beloued.

Thee Thee in the temple of faire Venus shrine
adore, Adore I must, and kneele vpon my knee,
my My fortunes tell me plaine that thou art mine,
heartie Heartie in kindnesse, yeelding vnto me :
thoughts Thoughts the much-great disturbers of our rest are Are fled, and lodge in some vnquiet brest.

Thine Thine euer vnremou'd and still kept word,
I I pondred oftentimes within my mind :
loue Loue told me that thou neuer wouldst afford,
none None other grace but that which I did find,
more. More comfortable did this found in mine care,
 Then sweet releasement to a man in feare.

I do resolue to loue no loue but thee,
Therefore be kind, and fauour none but me.

I I fometime sitting by my selfe alone,
do Do meditate of things that are ensuing,
resolue Resolue I do that thou must end my mone,
to To strengthen Loue if loue should be declining.
loue Loue in thy bosome dwels, and tells me still,
no No enuious stormes shall thwart affections will.

Loue Loue hath amaz'd the world, plac'd in thy brow,
but But yet flauish disdaine seekes for to crosse thee Thee and my selfe, that haue combin'd our vow, therefore Therefore that monster cannot worke our losse :

Be

be Be all the winds of Anger bent to rage, kind. Kind shalt thou find me, thus my hart I gage.

and And from my faith that's vnremoueable,
fauour Fauour be seated in thy maiden cie,
none None can receiue it loue more acceptable
but But I my selfe, waiting thy pittying mercie :
me. Me hast thou made the substance of delight,
By thy faire funne-resembling heauenly sight.

Ah quoth she, but where is true Loue?
Where quoth he? where you and I loue.
I quoth she, were thine like my loue.
Why quoth he, as you loue I loue.

Ah Ah thou imperious high commaunding Lord,
quoth (Quoth he) to Cupid gentle god of Loue,
[s]he, He that I honor most will not accord,
but But striues against thy Iustice from aboue,
where Where I haue promist faith, my plighted word is Is quite refused with a base reprove :
true True louing honour this I onely will thee,
loue? Loue thy true loue, or else false loue will kill me.

Where Where shall I find a heart that's free from guile?
quoth Quoth Faithfulnesse, within my louers brest.
he, He at these pleasing words began to smile,
where Where Anguish wrapt his thoughts in much vnrest :
you You did with pretie tales the time beguile,
and And made him in conceited pleasure blest,
I I grac'd the words spoke with so sweet a tong,
loue, Loue being the holy burden of your song.

Y

I I grac'd your fong of Loue, but by the way,
quoth (Quoth true Experience,) fit and you shall see,
she She will enchaunt you with her heauenly lay :
were Were you fram'd all of heauenly Pollicie,
thine Thine eares should drinke the poison of Delay,
like Like as I faid, so did it proue to be,
my My Mistris beautie grac'd my Mistris fong, loue. Loue pleas'd more with her Eyes than with her Tong.

Why Why then in deepeness of sweete Loues delight,
quoth Quoth she, the perfect Mistris of Desire,
he He that I honor most bard from my sight,
as As a bright Lampe kindles Affections fire :
you You Magicke operations worke your spight,
loue Loue to the mountaine top of will aspires :
I I chalenge all in all, and this I sing,
loue. Loue is a holy Saint, a Lord, a King.

Ah Loue, where is thy faith in sweete loue ?
Why loue where hearts conioyne in true loue :
Why then my heart hopes of thy Loues loue,
Else let my heart be plagu'd with false loue.

Why art thou strange to me my Deare ?
Not strange when as I loue my deare :
But thou esteem'st not of thy deare.
Yes when I know my dearest deare.

Why is my Loue so false to me ?
My loue is thine if thou lou'st me :
Thee I loue, else none contents me.

2f

If thou lou' st me, it not repents me.

Ah quoth he, wher's faith in sweete loue?

Why quoth she, conioynd in true loue.

Ah quoth he, I hope of thy loue:

Else quoth she, Ile die a false loue.

Ah my Deare, why dost thou kill me?

No my deare, Loue doth not will me.

Then in thine armes thou shalt enfold me.

I, my deare, there thou shalt hold me:

And holding me betwene thine armes,

I shall embrace sweete Louers Charmes.

Though death from life my bodie part,

Yet neare the lesse keepe thou my hart.

Though Though some men are inconstant, fond, and fickle, death Deaths ashie count'nance shall not alter me:
from From glasse they take their substance being brittle, life Life, Heart, and Hand shall awaies fauour thee,
my My Pen shall write thy vertues registrie,
bodie Bodie conioyn'd with bodie, free from strife,
part, Part not in sunder till we part our life.

Yet Yet my foules life to my deare lifes concluding,
neere Nere let Absurditie that villaine, theefe,
the The monster of our time, mens praise deriding,
lesse Lesse in perfeurance, of small knowledge chiefe,
keepe Keep the base Gate to things that are excelleng,
thou Thou by faire vertues praise maist yeeld reliefe,

Y 2

my My lines are thine, then tell Absurditie, heart. Hart of my deare, shall blot his villainie.

Where hearts agree, no strife can be.

Where Where faithfullnesse vnites it selfe with loue, hearts Hearts pin'd with sorrow cannot difagree :
agree, Agree they must of force, for from aboue
no No wind oppressing mischiefe may we see :
strife Strife is quite banisht from our companie.
can Can I be sad ? no, Pleasure bids me sing,
be. Be blessed, for sweete Loue's a happie thing.

*Thy vowes my loue and heart hath wonne,
Till thy vnruth hath it vndonne.*

Thy Thy true unspeakable fidelitie,
vowes Vowes made to Cupid and his faire-fac'd mother,
my My thoughts haue wonne to vertuous chastitie :
loue Loue thee alone I will, and loue none other,
and And if thou find not my loues secrecie,
heart Heart fauouring thee, then do thou Fancie smother.
hath Hath all the world such a true Bird as I,
wonne, Wonne to this fauour by my constancie ?

Till Till that leane fleshles cripple, pale-fac'd Death,
thy Thy louely Doue shall pierce with his fell dart,
vnruth Vnruth in my faire bosome nere takes breath :
hath Hath any loue such a firme constant heart ?
it It is thine owne, vnlesse thou keepe it still vndonne. Vndone shall I be, cleane against my will.

Time

Time shall tell thee, how well I loue thee,

Time Time the true proportioner of things,
shall Shall in the end shew my affection,
tell Tell thee from whence all these my passions spring,
thee, Thee honoring that of loue haue made election :
how How often I haue made my offerings,
well Well knowne to Venus and her louely sonne,
I I to the wide world shall my passions runne :
loue Loue is a Lord of hearts, a great Commander, thee. Thee challenging to be my chiefe defender.

*Most deuine and sacred,
 Haue I found your loue vnspotted.*

Most Most reuerend Mistris honor of mine eie,
deuine Deuine, most holy in religious loue,
and And Lord itfelse of my hearts emperie,
sacred Sacred in thoughts admitted from aboue,
haue Haue in remembrance what affection willeth :
I I it reuiues the mind, and the mind killeth.
found Found haue I written in your skie-like brow,
your Your neuer ceasing kind humilitie,
loue Loue for your sake to me hath made a vow,
vnspotted Vnspotted shall I find your constancie,
 And without staine, to thy pure stainelesse beautie,
 Shall my hearts bosome offer vp his dutie.

The want of thee is death to me.

The The day shall be all night, and night all day want Want of the Sunne and Moone to giue vs light, of Of a blacke darkneffe, before thy loue will stay

Y 3

thce Thee from thy pleafure of thy hearts delight.
is Is not Affection nurse to long Delay?
death Deaths Meffenger, that barres me from thy fight?
to To be in abfence, is to burne in fire,
me. Me round enwrapping with hot Loues desire.

I loue to be beloued.

I I do acknowledge of all constant pure,
loue Loue is my true thoughts herrald, and Ile fing
to To be of thy thoughts clofet, firme and fure, be Be the world ftill thy vertues deifying:
beloued. Beloued of the moft, yet moft of many,
 Affirme my deare, thou art beloued of any.

I fcorne if I be fcornd.

I I being not belou'd by my affection,
fcorne Scorne within my thoughts fuch bad difgrace,
if If thou of me do make thy firme election,
I I to none other loue will giue my place:
be Be thou my Saint, my bofomes Lord to proue,
fcornd. Scorned of all, Ile be thy trueft loue.

The heart's in paine, that loues in vaine.

The The grieve poore louers feele being not beloued,
heart's Hearts anguifh, and fad lookes may teftifie:
in In night they fleepe not, and in day perplexed,
paine, Paine of this forrow makes them melancholy,

That

that That in disdain their silly minds are vexed,
loues Loues terror is so sharpe, so strong, so mightie,
in In all things vnresistable, being alieue,
vaine. Vaine he resists that gainst loues force doth striue.

*What greater ioy can be then this,
 Where loue enioys each louers wisht?*

What What may we count the world if loue were dead?
greater Greater in woe, then woe it selfe can be,
ioy Ioy from mans secret bosome being fled,
can Cannot but kill the heart immediatly,
be Because by ioy the heart is nourished:
then Then entertaine sweete loue within thy brest,
this, This motien in the end will make thee blest.

Where Where two harts are vnited all in one,
loue Loue like a King, a Lord, a Soueraigne,
enioyes Enioyes the throne of blisse to sit vpon,
each Each sad heart crauing aid, by Cupid flaine:
louers Louers be merrie, Loue being dignified,
wisht. Wish what you will, it shall not be denied.

Finis. quoth R. Chester.

HEREAFTER FOLLOVV DIVERSE

Poeticall Effaies on the former Subiect; viz: the Turtle and Phoenix.

*Done by the best and chiefest of our moderne writers, with their names subscribed to their particular workes :
neuer before extant.*

And (now first) consecrated by them all generally,
to the loue and merite of the true-noble Knight,
Sir Iohn Salisburie.

Dignum laude virum Musa vetat mori.

Anchora Sp̄i.

MDCL.

INVOCATIO,

Ad Apollinem & Pierides.

Good Fate, faire Theſpian Deities,
 And thou bright God, whoſe golden Eies,
 Serue as a Mirroure to the ſiluer Morne,
 When (in the height of Grace) ſhe doth adorne
 Her Chryſtall preſence, and inuites
 The euer-youthfull Bromius to delights,
 Sprinckling his fute of Vert with Pearle,
 And (like a looſe enamour'd Girle)
 Ingles his cheek; which (waxing red with ſhame)
 Inſtincts the ſenfleſſe Grapes to do the fame,
 Till by his ſweete reflection ſed,
 They gather ſpirit, and grow diſcoloured.

To your high influence we commend
 Our following Labours, and ſuſtend
 Our mutuall palmes, prepar'd to gratulate
 An honorable friend: then propagate
 With your illuſtrate faculties
 Our mentall powers: Inſtruct vs how to riſe
 In weighty Numbers, well purſu'd,
 And varied from the Multitude:
 Be lauifh once, and plenteouſly profuſe
 Your holy waters, to our thirſtic Muſe,
 That we may giue a Round to him
 In a Caſtalian boule, crown'd to the brim.

Vatum Chorus.

Z 2 .

To the worthily honor'd Knight
Sir Iohn Salisburie.

Noblest of minds, here do the Muses bring
Vnto your safer iudgements tast,
Pure iuice that flow'd from the Pierian springs,
Not filch'd, nor borrow'd, but exhaust
By the flame-hair'd Apollos hand:
And at his well-observ'd command,
For you infuse in our retentive braine,
Is now distild thence, through our quilles againe.

Value our verse, as you approue the worth;
And thinke of what they are create,
No Mercenarie hope did bring them forth,
They tread not in that seruile Gate;
But a true Zeale, borne in our spirites,
Responsible to your high Merites,
And an Inuention, freer then the Times,
These were the Parents to our seuerall Rimes,
Wherein Kind, Learned, Enuious, al may view,
That we haue writ worthy our selues and you.

Vatum Chorus.

The first.

THE silver Vault of heauen, hath but one Eie,
 And that's the Sunne: the foule-maskt Ladie, Night
 (Which blots the Cloudes, the white Booke of the Skie,)
 But one sicke Phæbe, feuer-shaking Light:
 The heart, one string: so, thus in single turnes,
 The world one Phœnix, till another burnes.

The burning.

Suppose here burnes this wonder of a breath,
 In righteous flames, and holy-heated fires:
 (Like Musicke which doth rapt it selfe to death, Sweet'ning the inward roome of mans Defires;)

 So she wast's both her wings in piteous strife;
 "The flame that eates her, feedes the others life:
 Her rare-dead ashes, fill a rare-liue vne:
 "One Phœnix borne, another Phœnix burne.

Ignoto.

Z 3

L Et the bird of lowdeft lay,
 On the fole Arabian tree,
 Herauld fad and trumpet be :
 To whofe found chafte wings obay.

But thou fhriking harbinger,
 Foule precurrer of the fiend,
 Augour of the feuers end,
 To this troupe come thou not neere.

From this Seffion interdift
 Euery foule of tyrant wing,
 Saue the Eagle feath' red King,
 Keepe the obfequie fo ftrict.

Let the Priest in Surples white,
 That defunctiue Muficke can,
 Be the death-deuining Swan,
 Left the Requiem lacke his right.

And thou treble dated Crow,
 That thy fable gender mak'ft.
 With the breath thou giu'ft and tak'ft,
 Mongft our mourners fhalt thou go.

Here the Antheme doth commence,
 Loue and Conftancie is dead,
Phoenix and the Turtle fled,
 In a mutuall flame from hence.

So they loued as loue in twaine,
 Had the effence but in one,

Two

Two distincts, Diuision none,
Number there in loue was flaine.

Hearts remote, yet not afunder ;
Distance and no space was seene,
Twixt this Turtle and his Queene ;
But in them it were a wonder.

So betweene them Loue did shine,
That the Turtle saw his right,
Flaming in the Phanix fight ;
Either was the others mine.

Propertie was thus appalled,
That the selfe was not the same :
Single Natures double name,
Neither two nor one was called.

Reason in itselſe confounded,
Saw Diuision grōw together,
To themſelues yet either neither,
Simple were ſo well compounded.

That it cried, how true a twaine,
Seemeth this concordant one,
Loue hath Reason, Reason none,
If what parts, can ſo remaine.

Whereupon it made this Threne,
To the Phanix and the Done,
Co-ſupremes and ſtarres of Loue,
As Chorus to their Tragique Scene.

Threnos.

Beautie, Truth, and Raritie,
 Grace in all simplicitie,
 Here enclosde, in cinders lie.

Death is now the Phoenix nest,
 And the Turtles loyall brest,
 To eternitie doth rest.

Leauing no posteritie,
 Twas not their infirmitie,
 It was married Chastitie.

Truth may seeme, but cannot be,
 Beautie bragge, but tis not she,
 Truth and Beautie buried be.

To this vrne let those repaire,
 That are either true or faire,
 For these dead Birds, sigh a prayer.

William Shake-speare.

A narration and description of a most exact wondrous creature, arising out of the Phoenix and Turtle Doves ashes.

O Twas a mouing Epicidium!
Can Fire? can Time? can blackest Fate confume
So rare creation? No; tis thwart to fence,
Corruption quakes to touch such excellence,
Nature exclames for Iustice, Iustice Fate,
Ought into nought can neuer remigrate.
Then looke; for see what glorious issue (brighter
Then clearest fire, and beyond faith farre whiter
Then Dians tier) now springs from yonder flame?

Let me stand numb'd with wonder, neuer came
So strong amazement on astonish'd eie
As this, this measurelesse pure Raritie.

Lo now; th' xtracture of deuineff Effence,
The Soule of heauens labour'd Quintessence,
(Poans to Phæbus) from deare Louers death,
Takes sweete creation and all blessing breath.

What strangeness is't that from the Turtles ashes
Assumes such forme? (whose splendor clearer flashes,
Then mounted Delius) tell me genuine Muse.

Now yeeld your aides, you spirites that infuse
A sacred rapture, light my weaker eie:
Raife my inuention on swift Phantasie,
That whilst of this same Metaphisicall
God, Man, nor Woman, but elix'd of all
My labouring thoughts, with strained ardor sing,
My Muse may mount with an vncommon wing.

A a

The description of this Perfection.

DAres then thy too audacious sense
 Perfume, define that boundlesse Ens,
 That amplest thought transcendeth?
 O yet vouchsafe my Muse, to greet
 That wondrous rarenesse, in whose sweete
 All praise begins and endeth,
 Diuineſt Beautie? that was slightest,
 That adorn'd this wondrous Brightest,
 Which had nought to be corrupted.
 In this, Perfection had no meane
 To this, Earths pureſt was vncleane
 Which vertue euen instructed.
 By it all Beings deck'd and ſtained,
Ideas that are idly fained
 Onely here ſubſiſt inueſted.
 Dread not to giue ſtrain'd praife at all,
 No ſpeech is Hyperbolicall,
 To this perfection bleſſed.
 Thus cloſe my Rimes, this all that can be ſayd,
 This wonder neuer can be flattered.

To Perfection.A Sonnet.

OFt haue I gazed with aſtoniſh'd eye,
 At monſtrous iſſues of ill ſhaped birth,
 When I haue ſeene the Midwife to old earth,
Nature produce moſt ſtrange deformitie.

So

So haue I marueld to obserue of late,
 Hard fauor'd Feminines so scant of faire,
 That Maskes so choicely, sheltred of the aire,
 As if their beauties were not theirs by fate.

But who so weake of obseruation,
 Hath not discern'd long since how vertues wanted,
 How parcimonioufly the heauens haue scanted,
 Our chiefeft part of adoration.

But now I ceafe to wonder, now I find
 The caufe of all our monftrous penny-showes :
 Now I conceit from whence wits scarc'tie growes,
 Hard fauour'd features, and defects of mind.
 Nature long time hath stor'd vp vertue, faireneffe,
 Shaping the rest as foiles vnto this Rareneffe.

Perfectioni Hymnus.

WHat should I call this creature,
 Which now is growne vnto maturitie ?
 How should I blafe this feature
 As firme and constant as Eternitie ?
 Call it Perfection ? Fie !
 Tis perfecter thẽ brightest names can light it :
 Call it Heauens mirror ? I.
 Alas, best attributes can neuer right it.
 Beauties resistlesse thunder ?
 All nomination is too straight of fence :
 Deepe Contemplations wonder ?
 That appellation giue this excellence.
 Within all best confin'd,
 (Now feeble Genius end thy flighter riming)

A a 2

* Differentia
Deorum & hominum (apud Senecam) sic ha-bet nostri melior pars animus in illis
nulla pars extra animum.

No Suberbes* all is Mind,

As farre from spot, as possible defining.

John Marston.

Peristeros: or the male Turtle.

Not like that loofe and partie-liuer'd Sect
 Of idle Louers, that (as different Lights,
 On colour'd subiects, different hewes reflect;)

Change their Affections with their Mistris Sights,
 That with her Praise, or Dispraise, drowne, or flote,
 And must be fed with fresh Conceits, and Fashions;
 Neuer waxe cold, but die: loue not, but dote:

“Loues fires, staid Iudgemēts blow, not humorous Paf-Whose Loues vpon their Louers pomp depend, (fions,

And quench as fast as her Eyes sparkle twinkles,

“(Nought lasts that doth to outward worth contend,

“Al Loue in smooth browes born is tomb'd in wrinkles.)

* The Turtle. But like the consecrated *Bird of loue,

* The Phoenix. Whose whole lifes hap to his *sole-mate alluded,
 Whome no proud flockes of other Foules could moue,
 But in her selfe all companie concluded.

She was to him th' Analifde World of pleasure,

Her firmeneffe cloth'd him in varietie;

Excesse of all things, he ioyd in her measure,

Mourn'd when she mourn'd, and dieth when she dies.

Like him I bound th' instinct of all my powres,

In her that bounds the Empire of desert,

And Time nor Change (that all things else deuoures,

But truth eterniz'd in a constant heart)

Can change me more from her, then her from merit,

That is my forme, and giues my being, spirit.

George Chapman.

Præ-

Præludium.

W*E must sing too? what Subject shal we chuse?
Or whose great Name in Poets Heauen use,
For the more Countenance to our Aëtiue Muse?*

*Hercules? alas! his bones are yet sore,
With his old earthly Labors; & exact more
Of his dull Godhead, were Sinne: Lets inflore*

*Phœbus? No: Tend thy Cart still. Enuious Day
Shall not giue out, that we haue made thee stay,
And foundred thy hote Teame, to tune our Lay.*

*Nor will we beg of thee, Lord of the Vine,
To raise our spirites with thy coniuering Wine,
In the green circle of thy Iuy twine.*

*Pallas, nor thee we call on, Mankind Maide,
That (at thy birth) mad'st the poore Smith afraide,
Who with his Axe thy Fathers Mid-wife plaide.*

*Go, crampe dull Mars, light Venus, when he snorts,
Or with thy Tribade Trine, inuent new sports,
Thou, nor their loosnesse with our Making sorts.*

*Let the old Boy your soune ply his old Taske
Turne the stale Prologue to some painted Maske,
His Absence in our Verse is all we aske.*

A a 3

Hermes the cheater, cannot mixe with vs,
 Though he would steale his sisters Pegafus,
 And rifle him ; or pawne his Petafus.

Nor all the Ladies of the Thefpian Lake,
 (Though they were crusht into one forme) could make
 A Beauty of that Merit, that should take

Our Muse vp by Commission : No, we bring
 Our owne true Fire ; Now our Thought takes wing
 And now an Epode to deep cares we sing.

Epos.

“ N Ot to know Vice at all, and keepe true state,
 “ Is Vertue ; and not Fate :
 “ Next to that Vertue, is, to know Vice well,
 “ And her blacke spight expell.
 Which to effect (since no brest is so sure,
 Or safe, but shee'l procure
 Some way of entrance) we must plant a guard
 Of Thoughts, to watch and ward
 At th' Eye and Eare, (the Ports vnto the Mind;))
 That no strange or vnkind
 Obiect arriue there, but the Heart (our spie)
 Giue knowledge instantly.
 To wakefull Reason, our Affections King :
 Who (in th' examining)
 Will quickly taste the Treason, and commit

Clofe

Close, the close cause of it.
 'Tis the securest Pollicie we haue,
 "To make our Sense our Slaue.
 But this fair course is not embrac'd by many ;
 By many ? scarce by any :
 For either our Affections do rebell,
 Or else the Sentinell,
 (That shal ring larum to the Heart) doth sleepe,
 Or some great Thought doth keepe
 Backe the Intelligence, and falsely sweares
 They'r base, and idle Feares,
 Whereof the loyall Conscience so complains.
 Thus by these subtill traines,
 Do feuerall Passions still inuade the Mind,
 And strike our Reason blind :
 Of which vsurping ranke, some haue thought Loue,
 The first ; as prone to moue
 Most frequent Tumults, Horrors, and Vnrests,
 In our enflamed brests.
 But this doth from their cloud of Error grow,
 Which thus we ouerblow.
 The thing they here call Loue, is blind Desire,
 Arm'd with Bow, Shafts, and Fire ;
 Inconstant like the Sea, of whence 'tis borne,
 Rough, swelling, like a Storme :
 With whome who failes, rides on the surge of Fear,
 And boiles as if he were
 In a continuall Tempest. Now true Loue
 No such effects doth proue :
 That is an Effence most gentile, and fine.
 Pure, perfect ; nay diuine :
 It is a golden Chaine let down from Heauen,

Whose linkes are bright, and euen
 That fals like Sleepe on Louers ; and combines
 The soft and sweetest Minds
 In equal knots : This beares no Brands nor Darts
 To murder different harts,
 But in a calme and God-like vnitie,
 Preferues Communitie.
 O who is he that (in this peace) enjoyes
 Th' Elixir of all ioyes ?
 (A Forme more fresh then are the Eden bowers,
 And lasting as her flowers :
 Richer then Time, and as Times Vertue rare,
 Sober, as saddest Care,
 A fixed Thought, an Eye vntaught to glance ;) 71
 Who (blest with such high chance)
 Would at suggestion of a steepe Desire
 Cast himselfe from the spire
 Of all his Happinesse ? But soft : I heare
 Some vicious Foole draw neare,
 That cries we dreame ; and sweares, there's no such thing
 As this chaste Loue we sing.
 Peace Luxurie, thou art like one of those
 Who (being at sea) suppose
 Because they moue, the Continent doth so :
 No (Vice) we let thee know,
 Though thy wild Thoughts with Sparrowes wings do flie,
 " Turtles can chastly die ;
 And yet (in this t'expresse our selfe more cleare)
 We do not number here
 Such Spirites as are onely continent,
 Because Lusts meanes are spent :
 Or those, who doubt the common mouth of Fame,
Because

And for their Place, or Name,
 Cannot so faſely ſinne ; Their Chaſtitie
 Is meere Necceſſitie,
 Nor meane we thoſe, whom Vorwes and Conſcience
 Haue filld with Abſtinence :
 (Though we acknowledge who can ſo abſtaine,
 Makes a moſt bleſſed gaine :
 “ He that for loue of goodneſſe hateth ill,
 “ Is more Crowne-worthy ſtill,
 “ Then he which for finnes Penaltie forbears,
 “ His Heart finnes, though he feares.)
 But we propoſe a perſon like our Doue,
 Grac'd with a Phoenix loue :
 A beauty of that cleare and ſparkling Light,
 Would make a Day of Night,
 And turne the blackeſt ſorrowes to bright ioyes :
 Whoſe Od'rous breath deſtroyes
 All taſte of Bitterneſſe, and makes the Ayre
 As ſweete as ſhe is faire :
 A Bodie ſo harmoniouſly compoſde,
 As if Nature diſcloſde
 All her beſt Symmetrie in that one Feature :
 O, ſo diuine a Creature
 Who could be falſe too ? chiefly when he knowes
 How onely ſhe beſtowes
 The wealthy treaſure of her Loue in him ;
 Making his Fortunes ſwim
 In the full flood of her admir'd perfection ?
 What ſauage, brute Affection,
 Would not be fearefull to offend a Dame
 Of this excellling frame ?
 Much more a noble and right generous Mind,
 B b

(To vertuous moodes enclin'd)
 That knowes the weight of Guilt: He will refraine
 From thoughts of fuch a straine:
 And to his Sence obiect this Sentence euer,
 " Man may securely sinne, but safely neuer.

Ben Iohnson.

The Phoenix Analyfde.

NOW, after all, let no man
 Receiue it for a Fable,
 If a Bird fo amiable,
 Do turne into a Woman.

Or (by our Turtles Augure)
 That Natures faireft Creature,
 Proue of his Miftris Feature,
 But a bare Type and Figure.

Ode ἑνθουσιαστικῆ.

S*plendor!* O more then mortall,
 For other formes come short all
 Of her illustrate brightneffe,
 As farre as Sinne's from lightneffe.

Her wit as quicke, and fprightfull
 As fire; and more delightfull
 Then the stolne fports of Louers,
 When night their meeting couers.

Iudgement

Judgement (adornd with Learning)
 Doth shine in her discerning,
 Cleare as a naked vestall
 Clofde in an orbe of Christall.

Her breath for sweete exceeding
 The Phenix place of breeding,
 But mixt with sound, transcending
 All Nature of commending.

Alas : then whither wade I,
 In thought to praife this Ladie,
 When seeking her renowning,
 My selfe am fo neare drowning?

Retire, and fay ; Her Graces
 Are deeper then their Faces :
 Yet shee's nor nice to shew them,
 Nor takes she pride to know them.

Ben : Iohnson.

FINIS.

[In consequence of Dr. Grosart having top-paged his NOTES from the foot-pagings of his TEXT, the top-numbers 189—196 are wanting. The NOTES begin with 197.]

NOTES AND ILLUSTRATIONS.

* * * The References are to the Pagination at the bottom, not at the top.

Title-page (1601), p. 1. On this see our Introduction. Therein the significance of these words, "Loves Martyr"—"Rosalins Complaint"—"truth of Loue"—"the constant Fate of the Phoenix and Turtle"—"enterlaced with much varietie and raritie"—"now first translated out of the venerable Italian Torquato Caeliano"—"some new compositions, of seuerall moderne Writers"—"whose names are subscribed to their seuerall workes, vpon the first subject: viz. the Phoenix and Turtle," &c., are elucidated. The Latin motto is from Martial, Epigr. i, lxvi, 9.

„ (1611), p. 7. On this, similarly see as above. "Annuals" is a misprint of the original for "Annals."

Epistle-dedicatory, pp. 3, 4. SIR JOHN SALISBURIE. See Introduction for full notices of this specially "honored Knight." Page 3, l. 8, "Pofse & nolle, nobile"—see our Introduction on this motto; l. 14, "ripe iudging" = ripe-judging; ll. 16-17, "his owne child to be fairest although an Ethiopian"—a proverbial saying found in all languages; cf. Love's L. L., iv, 3, "Ethiops . . . their sweet complexion"; l. 18, "infant wit" = first literary production—answering to the title-page "the first Essay of a new British Poet." Page 4, ll. 6-7, "To the World," &c. = this shews that "Imprinted for E. B." does not mean a privately-printed book, but one 'published' for 'learned' and 'vulgar,' if so they were minded to buy.

The Authors request to the Phanix, p. 5. For abundant proofs that by the 'Phenix' was meant Queen Elizabeth, and by the 'Turtle-douc' the Earl of Essex—see our Introduction; also the same for the further confirmation herein of Shakespere's having favoured Essex. Note—this is the 'Author's request,' not a translation. Line 1, "beauteous Bird of any" = the most "beauteous" of "any" one, and of all birds; l. 9, "passing" = surpassing; l. 12, "Enduoured haue to please in praising thee"—noticeable and noticed in our Introduction.

To the kind Reader, p. 6, l. 1, "the sacke of Troy" = Homer; l. 2, "Pryams murdrad Sonnes" = Homer; ib., "nor Didoes fall" = Virgil; ll. 4-5, "Of Cæsars Victories," &c., &c. = Shakespere—"Julius Cæsar" is now generally attributed to 1599-1601; l. 8, "untun'd stringed" = untuned-stringed. The motto 'Mea mecum Porto,' are found in Emblem books under a tortoise.

- Page 9, Heading, l. 2, "Metaphorically applied to Dame Nature"—See page 232 on this; l. 4, "high Star-chamber" = in the starry sphere—a sphere above the mundane; l. 6, "heavie burdend" = heavy-burdened; st. 2, l. 5, "Lordlike cowardice"—on this allusion, see Introduction; l. 6, "fond" = foolish; ib., "nice" = precise, scrupulous, as in Shakespeare, frequenter; st. 4, l. 1, "Imperator" = supreme ruler, emperor (so Love's L. L., iii, l. 187)—one of Jupiter's titles was "Imperator," and "firie chair" is used because he was the prince of light and thunder: cf. p. 16, st. 1, and p. 15, st. 3; l. 4 (p. 10), "firie chair" = throne.
- „ 10, st. 1, l. 2, "none-like," cf. l. 5, "none such." Hence not = nun-like, albeit there may possibly have been intended, after the manner of the times and Shakespeare, a quibbling pun and the secondary meaning of 'nun-like' hinted at; l. 4, "milke-white Doue"—not = the "turtle-dove," but = the Phoenix; st. 2, l. 1, "heavenly map" = a representation in miniature of the heavens; l. 5, "locks of purest gold." The 'lock' of Elizabeth's hair preserved at Wilton (within lines by Sir Philip Sidney), remains to attest that her's was of sunbeam-gold, and 'red' only as 'gold' was called "red monie" in ancient ballad and story; st. 4, l. 2, "confuse" = judge; l. 5, "find" = find [wherewithal] to cure the wound? "Tablet" = table-book—which were often made of ivory.
- „ 11, st. 1, l. 2, "Two Carbuncles"—from the brilliance, not certainly from the 'red' colour of this gem. "Shineth as Fire . . . whose shining is not overcome by night . . . and it seemeth as it were a flame" (Batman upon B. B., xvi, c. 26; cf. p. 16, st. 4, l. 5). l. 3, "soveraignize" = rule as a sovereign; l. 5, "Sonne" = sun. Spenser, without metri gratia, thus spells the word. See Shepherd's Calendar, frequenter, and throughout. St. 2, l. 6, "heavenly Front"—hyperbolic and explained by l. 5 as the "front of Heaven," the sky. So Shakespeare, "the front of heaven was full of fiery shapes," Henry IV, act i, sc. 1, l. 14, et alibi; st. 3, l. 5, "Ennie"—it would seem that 'crystal' was supposed to prevent or "over-come"—envy; st. 4, ll. 1-2. Cf. Venus and Adonis, ll. 451-2.
- "Once more the ruby-colour'd portal open'd,
Which to his speech did honey passage yield."
- ll. 5-6—universally said of Elizabeth; and st. 1, p. 12, and indeed throughout the portraiture. See Introduction. ll. 5-6 (p. 12), ought to have been put back as in the other stanzas. This has been inadvertently neglected in two or three instances; but is here noted once for all.
- „ 12, st. 2, l. 2, "powers" = disyllabic form of "pours"; l. 4, "ratictic," sic; but doubtless a misprint for 'rarietie'=rarity, metri causa; st. 3, l. 5, "loue-babies"=reflections of himself in her eyes; ibid., "wanton eyes." See st. 2, l. 2, "perfect chafitite" and l. 6 of the present stanza, "doth chafesize"=make chaste, with a play perhaps on 'chastize' in its ordinary sense. Hence 'wanton' is used here much as Shakespeare speaks of "wanton boys," i.e., pleasure-loving or gamesome or fondling. See SCHMIDT, s.v. So in Spenser, &c., &c. St. 4, ll. 1-2—mingling of ancient and (apparently) modern fable; l. 4, "glories" = glories'.

- Page 13, st. 1, ll. 1-2, "men may reade His"—men = each man of all men; l. 2, evidently the comma after 'woe' is a misprint for a period(.) Note—all these celebrations from "Head" to "Bellie" and onward (p. 6 to "Feete"), shew that a person and a female was intended by the "Phoenix." The "Arabian Phoenix," or bird so-called, is distinguished from the other (st. 3, ll. 3-4); st. 2, l. 1, see our Introduction for an incident in Elizabeth's life illustrative of this; st. 4, "ye"—this is misprinted in the original "yea," and perhaps ought to have been so left and noted here. See Postscript to our Introduction for other similar errors, and also certain 'slips' of our own (of no great moment). St. 5, l. 2, "Gehon"=Gihon, Genesis ii, 13; l. 3, "prize"=prized with such honour.
- 10 14, st. 2, ll. 5-6. Punctuate (meo iudicio) "why, . . . she . . . Angell"; st. 3, l. 4, "sweet writ"=sweet-writ; l. 6, "corpovate Soule"=soul existing in her conjoint body; st. 4=the "Marigold" that has at night, i.e., after the setting and so absence of the sun, closed the glory of her eye, now at her approach unfolds again as she would at the sun's approach; l. 5, "Phanix"=Phoenix'; l. 6, "yeeld"=yield obeisance, as acknowledging their inferiority.
- 11 15, st. 1, l. 2, "Arras cloth"=a rich kind of tapestry, and so named because the best was made at Arras the capital of Artois; l. 3, "Satires"=Satyrs; st. 2, l. 1, "This Phanix I do feare me will decay," &c. Elizabeth in 1601, when Love's Martyr was published, was well nigh the close of her long life and reign; and making as long an interval as one can well suppose between the composition and publication of the poem, she must have been long past possible maternity before these words could have been written. In the Epistle-dedicatory the Author speaks of his "long expected labour"; but the "long" could scarcely cover more than comparatively a few years. Every one knows, however, that strong-brained as was the great Queen, she sniffed to the last gratefully and graciously whatever incense of flattery of her person courtiers and poets chose to offer her.

See our Introduction for more on this; st. 4, "wight"=white—to agree with its rhyme "outright" (l. 4); l. 5, "strucke"=[was] strucke; l. 6, "Doue"—again as in page 10, st. 1, l. 4, not the "turtle doue" but = the Phoenix still; l. 5 (p. 16), "vastie"=vast, limitless. So in Shakespeare, frequent.

Page 16, st. 1, l. 1, "temeritie"—used as from timor = timority, fear; st. 2, l. 3, "extallation"=extollation; l. 4, either "deuine-maiesticall" or comma after "deuine"; l. 5, "painted picture there"=portrait of Elizabeth as was her wont in all the splendor of "rich wrought . . . gold" and jewels; st. 4, l. 5, "Eyes wanting fire"=wanting the fire of living eyes. Or does he mean that they flamed or gleamed, but wanted the anger or rage of fire like the carbuncle, as before?

„ 17, st. 1, ll. 5-6. In plain prose, get Elizabeth to marry—see next stanza, ll. 5-6; st. 2, l. 2, "plaine"=made smooth. So Dr. Henry More (Chertsey Worthies' Library edition of his complete Poems, p. 15):

“Such as this Phyllis would, whenas she plains
Their Sunday-cloths, and the washt white with azure stains.”
(Psychozoia, st. 21.)

l. 3, "painted shape"=portrait, as before; st. 3, l. 3, "ill working"=ill-working; l. 4, "white Brytania"—so that the 'Phoenix,' beside which that of Arabia was but "fruitlesse ayre," was within the "white cliffs" of Britain. Be it noted specially — for the punctuation is bad — that while it is "leauē" (l. 2) and "leauē" (l. 3) as = let alone, seek not there, in l. 4, it is "leauē me"=leave to me, in my keeping, or qu., Do you leave? So that neither in Arabia (named as the seat of the mythical 'phoenix') nor in "white Brytania"=England, was there a fitting 'mate' (husband) for the Phoenix. Cf. st. 3, ll. 5-6; st. 4, ll. 1-2, "There is a country, &c. . . Paphos Ile." See our Introduction on this very noticeable bit; meanwhile, I here record, that by "Paphos Ile," I understand Ireland, whither Essex—as we all know—proceeded. The description that follows is idealized in correspondence with the love-imaginative name given to it of "Paphos Ile," a name than which none could have been more happily chosen, being that of the supreme seat of the worship of Venus (i.e., in such a love-story as this of Love's Martyr). l. 5, "Ciparissus groue"=Cyparissus—the 'grove' of Phocis, not far from Delphi; l. 6, "a second Phanix loue"=Phoenix' love; st. 5, l. 1, "champion"=champaign.

„ 18, st. 1, l. 1, "bigge-arm'd"=big-arm'd; st. 2, l. 5, "lie"=lay; l. 6, "round"=dance; st. 3, l. 3, "delight fome"—clearly mis-

- print for 'delightful'; st. 4, l. 4, "shelues" = banks; ll. 5-6 = but the country Gallants with Ulysses ears.
- Page 19, st. 1, ll. 1-2 and 4, "hissing Adders fling, May not come neere this holy plot of ground" and, "Nor poison-spitting Serpent may be found." How could Ireland have been more deftly indicated than by the two-fold characteristics of (1) The banishing of all serpents (by St. Patrick), (2) Its proud title of "the Isle of Saints"? st. 2, l. 4, "Lycorice" = a plant of the genus Glycyrrhiza; ib., "sweet Arabian spice" = cinnamon; sts. 3-4, with equal deftness are the Irish residence, and the personal characteristics, and personal appearance, and the services of Essex herein set forth. Who, of all her subjects, could have taken this name of "Liberall honor" save Essex? See our Introduction for quotations from Churchyard, Peele, and others, wherein he is exactly thus spoken of. St. 5, l. 3, "president" = precedent, exemplar; l. 4 (p. 20), "his gentle humour spited" → very noticeable in relation to Essex; ll. 5-6 — a word-photograph of Essex.
- „ 20 st. 1, l. 4, "high hill" = royal crag-enthroned Windsor; st. 2, l. 2, "Censure" = judgment; st. 2, l. 6, "Ioue ioyne these fires," &c. = marry Elizabeth and Essex.
- „ 20, An Introduction to the Prayer, st. 1, l. 2, "Thou elementall fauourer of the Night" — Is the reference to God's manifestation of Himself, e.g., on Sinai, and within the temple in "clouds and darkness"? Cf. Deuteronomy, iv, 11; 2 Samuel, xxii, 12; Psalms, xcvi, 2; and 1 Kings, viii, 10-12; Leviticus, xvi, 2; and cognate passages. St. 2 (p. 21), l. 6, "Turtle-doue" = Essex — as hereafter will appear.
- „ 21, A Prayer made, &c. See Introduction on this "siluer coloured Doue" (not the "Turtle-doue"), and the force of "applied"; st. 1, l. 4, "fad" = serious or solemn: or qu. intentive?
- „ 22, st. 2, l. 1, "her" — shewing it is not the 'Turtle-doue' (described as "he" onward); l. 4, the comma after "baite" certainly ought to have been a period (.); st. 4, l. 1, "leadst" = ledst, i.e., past tense; ib., "red coloured waues" = red-coloured. The 'Red Sea' is meant — see Exodus, xiv, and parallel passages. I remember seeing the 'Red Sea,' off the Desert of Sinai, red as blood, not merely under the purple splendor of the marvellous sunset — a hue common to all sunsets — but from myriad infusoria so far as I could make out. So that "red-coloured waues" is not a mere fancy, much less a blunder — such as Wordsworth's when he speaks of Baalbec rising from bare sands, whereas its site is a glorious fertile plain. l. 5 (p. 23) "what" — qu. misprint for 'that' or 'which'?
- „ 23, st. 1, ll. 6-7 = do not let her [Elizabeth] remain a "Virgin Queen"

—let her marry—she the “siluer coloured doue” to him the “turtle-doue.”

- Page 23, To those of light beleefe, st. 1, l. 6, “abandoning deceit”=fiction has hitherto been mingled with fact, e.g., in the hyperbolic and so ‘deceptive’ description of Ireland as “Paphos Ile”; st. 3, l. 1, “gentle Reader”—another note of publication.
- „ 24, A meeting Dialogue-wife betweene Nature, &c., st. 1, l. 6, “thy breasts beautous Eie”=spots eye-like, as of the peacock, pheasant, and (of course) the mythical ‘phoenix’; st. 2, l. 4, “neuer with”=never [be] with; st. 3, l. 4, “releuting”=sorrowful or sorrowing. Here is touched the popular and indestructible belief that the only genuine love-passion Elizabeth ever had was for Essex. More anon. L. 6 (p. 25), “for vertue”=on account of thy, or in admission of thy virtue, &c., sing; l. 7, “reuerend”=reuerenced.
- „ 25, st. 1, l. 7, “I do bayte my hooke”—a throeb of penitent confession of her laying ‘baits’ for Essex, drawing him on and ‘hooking’ him, winning his burning love and devotion, yet playing him false; st. 2, l. 5, “sullen Mirth”—the very type of Elizabeth’s moody mirth and sadness, bursts of scorn and passion and aching melancholy; st. 3, l. 1, “vading.” I may refer here to a note in my edition of Southwell, s. v., for the distinction between ‘vading’ and ‘fading.’ l. 5, “Sunne-bred”—speaking as the ‘Phoenix’; ibid., “exhall”=exhale; ll. 6-7 —“Enuie” is the uttermost word that the Poet dared use. He makes the Queen hint at the contest between the Queen and the woman, the passionate love and the self-restraint thought to be due to herself. She fain “would loue” and follow it up with marriage; but what, marry a subject? “There was the rub.” Other considerations were also blended, e.g., I fear what my subjects may say to my marrying a subject and what their ‘envy’ may attempt on him. We must remember that the nobles were far more powerful and jealous of one another than in our day, and even Elizabeth might well fear displeasing them by such a step. See st. 4, l. 5, beginning at p. 26, and p. 26, st. 1, ll. 3-6; also p. 27, st. 1, and p. 28, st. 2 and 3. See too “Enuie” is changed to “Malice” (p. 26) ll. 6-7; st. 4, l. 1, “Tablitorie”=the old tablet (metri gratia, as “glorie” is the rhyming word) given by Minshew as a necklet, necklace or brooch: “Monile quod gestantem virtutis admoerat, nam primum ob aliquod egregium factum clari solebat.” One can’t vouch for the accuracy of this Latin explanation; but it shews the prevalent idea, and it agrees with the use of “tablitorie” in the text—a tablerium, is called mappula, mantle.

- Page 26, st. 1, l. 4, "fond suspicious cage"—here and elsewhere there is a glance back on the early perilous years of Elizabeth under her sister Mary; l. 7, "thy"—sic, but somewhat obscure; st. 2, l. 7, "And waste"=while I waste; st. 3, l. 6, "young, fresh, green"—no doubt with application to the 'Phoenix,' but underlying this a reference, as already noted, to Elizabeth's beautiful youthhood, when beyond all question she was a magnificent creature; ibid., "passè"=pass away, die; l. 7, "steeld glasse"=mirror of steel. Note—There is intentional anachronism in order to give scope for just 'praise' of Elizabeth; nor are these touches on her 'young' maiden days the least precious bits for us to-day; st. 4, l. 1, "Continent"=container is that which contains anything. So frequenter in Shakespeare and contemporaries, and later.
- „ 27, st. 1, l. 5, "lotter'd"=tattered—as in Shakespeare and contemporaries; ibid., "rag'd"=ragged; st. 2, l. 7, "the performance bears the greater feuty"=deed better than words, action than threats.
- „ 28, st. 1, l. 3, "Toades themselves did wound"—i.e., did wound one another—so letting out by their 'wounds' their unfragrant poison (mythical); l. 4, "poysenal," i.e., infected with poison, being a poison-natured thing = poisonous; l. 5, "scnt"=scent; st. 2, l. 3, "As he hath had in his dayes secret frying"—hints at 'secret' influences against Elizabeth in the days of Mary; l. 4, "calmie"=calming or qu.—tranquil? l. 7, "Amarous"—sic=amorous; st. 3, l. 1, "Villanie"=Envie—as previously described; l. 4, "trus harted"=true-hearted; ll. 6-7—another genuine cry out of the woman's heart—let the title of the poem be remembered of Love's Martyr, &c. Let it also be remembered, that so early as Peele's "Eglogge Gratulatorie." Entitled: To the right honourable, and renowned Shepheard of Albions Arcadia: Robert Earle of Essex and Ewe, for his welcome into England from Portugall" (1589), the burden is "Envy doth aye true honours deeds despise." See our Introduction.
- „ 29, st. 1, l. 4, "coyle"=tumult. Cf. Timfest, act. i, sc. 2. St. 2, l. 2, "his Throns," i.e., of Essex, who really hold the 'Throne' of Elizabeth's heart—the 'his' here is subtle and fine; l. 5, "ore charge"=o'er charge; st. 3, l. 1, "penisht"=petulant, fretful; l. 7, "I"=Aye; st. 4,—query, should the punctuation be 'Light.' 'deplore;'
- „ 30, st. 1, l. 7, "Balsanum"=balsam. Comedy of Errors, act iv, sc. 1. st. 2, l. 2, "Anker-hold" and l. 6, "plot of Ground"=the soil that holds your anchor, or fastners of the flukes on the ground; st. 3, l. 3, "the Rocke my ship did seeke to spüer"=seeke to shiver my Ship; l. 7, "diffmbling Loue"—another sting of conscience — she dissembled the love that was really in her heart; st. 4, l. 5, "peruse" = survey or run over with an observant eye; l. 6, "where" = which?

Page 31, st. 1, l. 3, "Mace" = sceptre, as before; l. 7, "Paphos Ile" = the island of Venus (Love) as before; st. 2-3 — a passionate description of Elizabeth's 'suspect' and dangerous early years; st. 3, l. 2, "shadows" = over-shadow, eclipse; st. 4, l. 2, "In youth," &c. — peculiarly true of Elizabeth — 'tyred' seems a misprint for 'tryed'; l. 7, "feathered head" = adorned with feathers as young high-stationed maidens were, but of course here as being to the 'Phoenix'; ib., "a crowne" — explicit enough surely as to the "Phoenix" being Elizabeth, albeit this 'crown' (in 1601) is a heavenly crown, or perchance of marriage. See l. 3, et seq. of the stanza.

„ 32, st. 1. The real heart-thoughts of the Queen are here expressed. Be it thoughtfully marked, that this "Ile of Paphos" (l. 3) "this rich Ile" had held the 'Turtle' and that the 'Turtle' is a male — "his nest" (l. 7) and so Nature conducts them thither, i.e., to Ireland — as before; st. 2, l. 5, "understand" = learn of his whereabouts; st. 3, l. 3, "fool" = foolish; l. 4, "vast Cell," i.e., however "vaste," a palace itself becomes a prison-cell where Suspicion and Envy are the keepers — as in Elizabeth's case.

„ 33, st. 1, l. 5, "unfret" = musical term with reference to frets or cross bars; l. 7, "Honor that Isle that is my sure defence" — here the Queen speaks rather than the 'Phoenix,' and thus throughout the mask (not unintentionally) slips aside and shews not 'bird' (however lustrous and wonderful), but the august face of Elizabeth herself; st. 2, l. 3, "high states" = people of state; l. 6, "Pyramides" — a quadrisyllable as frequenter contemporaneously, being long of naturalizing; l. 7, "Strond" = strand, shore; st. 3, l. 2, "Greene Springing" = Green-springing; l. 4, "Faire running" = Faire-running; l. 5, "Sweet flowers Dew" [= dew] distils — example of verb singular after nom. plural (perhaps through the interposition of 'that') and so the previous line; ib., "balmy Dew" — on Hermon I found the abundant dew thus fragrant. The southern-wood and thyme and other richly-scented under-growths, being literally steeped in the dew, so filled the air with perfume as to 'nip' (so-to-say) one's eyes. I have found the same in Greece, and indeed in many places. l. 6, "Great peopled" = Great-peopled; st. 4, l. 3, "intrate" = treat, elongated, i.e., speak of; l. 4, "Their Founder" = [And of] their Founder; l. 6, "Warres wald" — this must be intended for 'walled,' albeit the meaning is not exactly clear. Query—each of the ‘cities’ being ‘walled’ was a ‘Defender’ in time of ‘Warres.’ The singular ‘Defender’ answers to the singular ‘Founder’ where we might have expected the plural. It cannot well have been a misprint for ‘wild,’ i.e., wild warres Defender, “wa” coming in through the “wa” of “warres”; l. 7, “Not battred yet with Times contolling Mace,” i.e., the ‘walls’ of the cities celebrated, which, though no longer in their original strength, were still to be seen in part, as is still the case.

Page 34, Margin—“Northumbers” = Northumberland; l. 3, “this large Ile of sweete Britania”—be it noted once more that the ‘Phoenix’ as = Elizabeth is naturally observant of the ‘cities’ of her own “Large Ile.” There is no meaning in the full enumeration and description of these cities except as they were under the sovereignty of Elizabeth. It is not deemed expedient to annotate here the numerous persons and places celebrated. The historical and county authorities are readily accessible, and thither the student-reader is referred; st. 2, l. 3, “well planted” = well-planted; l. 4, “Called in this age the newly-build d Minster, Still kept in notable reparation”—Stowe, in his Chronicles, tells us of the ‘reparation’ of Winchester Cathedral in Elizabeth’s reign, s.v.; l. 6, “famous build d” = famous-built; st. 3, l. 5, “Neotus diælon” = Neotus; st. 4, “new got” = new-got.

„ 35, st. 1, ll. 3-4, “the whole Romish Legion to sing. And to record,” &c. —“sing” points apparently to ballads of his exploits, albeit there is the objection that it was his defeated enemies whom he made to sing. But our poet is not skilful and o’ times oblivious. Line 4 can scarcely be otherwise explained. Does this use of ‘sing’ reveal the age of our present expression or of an equivalent to it, of ‘singing small,’ as evidence of defeat. There is also “singing in a lower key,” and the like. St. 4, l. 5, “His” = its; ib., “Leyls” = Leil of st. 3, l. 2. But all this semi-fabulous or wholly fabulous chronicle calleth for no ‘pains’ of elucidation; l. 7, “large Brytania” = “large Ile,” p. 34, st. 1, l. 3. So also p. 36, st. 3, l. 3, “large Britanias” —doubtless an early phrase for “Great Britain”—for he evidently supposed that Scotland was, at that time, a tributary of England, and the last name he avoids. See p. 36, st. 3, l. 3. His use of the word (Scottish) “sect” agrees; for a “sect” is a part cut off. But “sect” in text is applied to the people, not to the country.

„ 35, st. 4, ll. 6-7 = the city doth only remain under the newer name of Edingburgh, i.e., Edinburgh.

„ 37, st. 1, l. 4, “stay’d” = out stay’d; st. 2, On this significant stanza, see our Introduction; st. 3, l. 2, "the Princes"=James VI; l. 3, "graces"—singular verb, instead of the previous plural one, "beautifie," metri causa; l. 4, "Emperizing." This type of verb is frequent contemporaneously. The meaning is—imperial towers so magnificent as to be worthy of an emperor, or such as will, of themselves, imperialize either the statues adorning it, or the persons inhabiting. l. 5, "Times controlling houres," cf. p. 33; st. 4, l. 7, "Times controlling Mace"—"Controlling" seems a favorite word. See again here, st. 4, l. 4, "controlling neighbours."

- Page 38, st. 1, l. 1, "Pagon"—metri causa, i.e., "yron" in l. 3; st. 2, l. 5, "after time"=after-time; l. 6, "deare begotten"=deare-begotten. What an odd jumble of mythology and history we have here! St. 3, l. 2, "this worlds great wonder"=the great wonder of this world; l. 6, "Regiment"=government; st. 4, l. 5, "lightnd"=gave light to; l. 7, "That to her weake Sexe yielded Hector's name"—qu.=that the stronger sex had to yield or vail Hectors name to hers?
- „ 39, st. 2, l. 2, "bountie"—deriving it from bonitas, one sense of which is goodness or honesty; l. 3, "uncomprehensible"=[The character of her deed] not to be duly estimated. The word is used as justification of her act in killing a 'guest.' l. 7, "Sifar"=Sisera; st. 3, l. 1, a comma after Hebrew would have shewn 'worthie' to be an adjective here.
- „ 40, st. 1, l. 4, "indubitate"—we should say 'indubitable,' i.e., not to be questioned; l. 7, "vsurped"=usurping—the common interchange of such words is explained by considering that the ed form is not passive, and that as a past or perfect it gives the idea of continuance in, or being in the state of usurpation; l. 8, "condefend"=submit; l. 9, "re obtain'd"=re-obtained; st. 2, l. 2, "Queene," &c.—one wonders how this was scanned by the author; l. 5, "forfaken"=God-forsaken; st. 3, l. 1—punctuate "Naples, true-borne"; st. 4, l. 2, "Progenie"=birth (by descent) or pedigree—similarly used in 1 Henry VI, iii, 3, l. 61; Coriol, i, 8, l. 12—not offspring as now; l. 5, "Which Truth can never burne," &c.—Truth is not here the burner or person who would burn their fames, but a truth which can never burn, &c.; l. 7 (p. 41) "memorie"=memorial.
- „ 41, st. 2, l. 7, "States"=people of state; "brooke"=bear but rithmi gratia.
Here followeth the Birth, Life, &c.
- „ 43, l. 3, "no such mā euer to be liuing"=to have lived; l. 6, "more beholding to the French, the Romane, the Scot, the Italian," &c. See our Introduction on this and other books, &c., referred to. l. 8, "who"—refers not to countrymen, but to the previous

- substantives; l. 13, "Gallie" = Gallie; l. 19, "renowned" = renowned. Nearer its French source renommé than our spelling.
- l. 25, "turned from French prose into English meter"—see our Introduction, as before; st., l. 4, "Memorie" = memorials, as before.
- Page 44, The strange Birth, &c., st. 1, l. 5, "high minded" = high-minded; st. 2, l. 2, "awittie" = wise; l. 4, "allies"—not as now used, but = the verb "ally," i.e., the feudatory princes of next stanza; st. 3, l. 2, "hot bred" = hot-bred; st. 4, l. 1, "passing" = surpassing; l. 3, "supprize" = suppress, causa metri; l. 5 (p. 45), "unequall" = unequalled—probably a printer's error.
- „ 45, st. 2, l. 2, "foed" = foolish; l. 3, "not penetrable" = not [being] able to penetrate; l. 4, "could not inffl"—licentiously for could not keep [it] in, &c., i.e., how it sped with her; st. 3, l. 2, "darke dyfkie mantle"—so the analagous phrase in Shakespeare "Night's black mantle," not only in Romeo and Juliet, but also in 3 Henry VI, act iv, sc. 2; l. 4, "inuade" = cause to invade or make invade any one; ll. 5-6—the inverted commas may or may not indicate a quotation; for the practice was loose. They seem to have been used to direct attention to what the writer would hold as a noticeable saying or golden sentence, much as we use italics.
- „ 46, st. 1, l. 1, punctuate comma after "Musicke," certainly; l. 2, "found" = sounding, i.e., striking or touching; l. 5, "immelioudious"—better than our unmelodious; st. 2, l. 4, "blacke gloom'd" = black-gloom'd; st. 5, l. 2, "secret folly" = done in secret; but it was the king's folly, not her's; besides, she had told her husband. See p. 45, st. 2, l. 5, "Bet straight," &c.
- „ 47, st. 1, l. 3, "vitailes" = victuals; st. 2, l. 2, "out" = giving egress; st. 4, l. 4, "his warres loud Alarums overcame," &c. Cf. Venus and Adonis, l. 700; Taming of a Shrew, i, 1. No doubt a phrase of the day, an 'alarum' being, from its nature, peculiarly loud.
- „ 48, st. 1, l. 2, "difefce" = uneasiness, trouble; st. 2, l. 4, "Moderator" = mediator? In Presbyterian Church-order, the president or chairman, ruler or guider of the Session of a Congregation, of a Presbytery, of a Synod, of a General Assembly, is still called the 'Moderator'; see "Synod" at p. 9, st. 1, l. 3. It was also used in same way in English Universities later. Cf. Cleveland's Indicia, 1677, p. 214. l. 5, "exfene" = experience, such as never in other has been 'seen'; st. 3, l. 3, "thwarted" = crossed—an odd adaptive use of the word; l. 5, "hafineffe" = lowliness, humility; l. 5, "Alas" = interjection merely, not meaning as now, something to be lamented; st. 5, l. 1, "h:fl" = behest.

- Page 49, st. 1, l. 2, "amaine"= suddenly or forcefully; st. 2, l. 2, "uncomprehended"= uncomprehended; l. 3, "embracements met"= [he] met.
- 50, st. 1, l. 4, punctuate rather "intent." (period); l. 5, "done." (period); for "That . . . done" is the king's reply; st. 2, l. 6, "posseſſe her Huſbands ſweetneſſe," i.e., the 'sweetneſſe' she gives to her husband—as frequently in Shakespeare; st. 3, l. 5, "diſeaſed"= uneasy, troubled, as before; st. 4, l. 4, period, not comma, after 'ieſt'; but in our author the comma ſerves for every other punctuation-mark; l. 6, "ſweet'ſt got"= sweet'st-got.
- 51, st. 1, l. 1—rather ſubtilly luſt-directed; l. 2, "new found"= new-found; l. 6, "Caſter" [= Caſter] Swaanes. Cf. p. 43, l. 7 [Greekes]; l. 6, verb ſingular to plural nominative again; st. 2, l. 5, "unrecalled time"= time paſt, time already ſpent, i.e., as other—ed forms—time that is in a ſtate not to be recalled; st. 3, l. 4, "croakt"= croaked—it may have been accidental, but "croakt" is the more imitative word; st. 4, l. 1, "lawne-like Hand"= white as 'lawne'—taken with next line, it ſeems like a poor remembrance of Venus and Adonis, l. 590, and Lucrece, ll. 258-9; l. 2, "diſſembling Huſband"= paſſing himſelf off as her husband; cf. p. 30, st. 3, l. 7, for the word.= [She] Being, &c.
- 52, st. 1, l. 1, "late betrayed"= late-betrayed; l. 4, "amaine"—from Saxon a and mægn = to do a thing forcibly or with one main object, and therefore alſo quickly, ſuddenly. Here it means much or plentifully. St. 2, l. 2 = the injuries done to her life 'unſpotted' hitherto in intent. Cf. p. 53, st. 1, l. 4. St. 3, l. 3, "where"= whereas, ſince; st. 4, l. 2, "luſtie ſtomacke youthfull"= luſtie-ſtomacke youthfull.
- 53, st. 1, l. 3 = to anſwer [as to] . . . st. 2, l. 6, "late did bleſſe"= late in the day; st. 3, l. 4, "well-diſpoſed"= well-diſpoſed; st. 4, l. 2, "paſſing true"= ſurpaſſing true; or it may be "paſſing-true" in the ſenſe of Goldſmith's humble Vicar, "paſſing rich on forty pounds a year."
- 54, st. 2, l. 1—punctuate comma after "child," and alſo after "Poſterne" (l. 5); st. 3, l. 2, "rich bearing Burthen"= rich, bearing-Burthen.
- 55, st. 4, l. 2—punctuate comma after "Saxons."
- 56, st. 4, l. 1, "Regiment"= government, rule, as before. Every one remembers John Knox's "Monſtrous Regiment of Women": st. 4, ſomewhat jumbled.
- 57, The Coronation of King Arthur, &c., st. 1, l. 3, "high ſtates"= people of high ſtate, as before: st. 3, l. 4, "him"= himſelf, as frequently at that time; l. 6 (p. 58) "dignified"= crowned.
- 58, st. 1, l. 5, "Being the Metropolitanall in nobilitie"—hexameter?; st. 2,

- l. 3—a syllable wanting and apparently before “Kings”—qu. [‘stoutē’] “Kings”: st. 3, ll. 4, 5—such that Envy is unable to tear the nobility or truceness of their hearts from their breasts; st. 4, l. 5 (p. 59), “neare”=ne’er.
- Page 59, The Epistle, &c. Be it noted that we have here and onward blank verse: l. 11, “or’ proud”=over-proud.
- „ 60, l. 7, “Emperie”=empire, and so p. 61, l. 5, and p. 64, l. 13; l. 8—punctuate comma after “that”; l. 21, “re demaund”=re-demaund; l. 29, “arbitrement”=arbitrament.
- „ 61, Cador the Duke, &c. l. 1, “Renowned”=renownd, as before. See p. 43, l. 19: ibid. “Britaine”=Briton, i.e. Arthur; or qu. = Britons, i.e. Britaine[s] to rhyme with ‘veines’; l. 6—bad comma after ‘continuall’—p.rhaps I ought to have in this instance deleted it and noted the fact here: qu.—“long-continuall”=long-continued?; l. 13, “But buried in obliuous loathsome caue”—cf. “Envy in her loathsome cave,” 2 Henry VI., iii, 2; l. 15, “pale-fac’d cowardize”—cf. “pale-faced coward,” Venus and Adonis, l. 569.
- „ 62, l. 1, “our armour from our backs”—cf. “armour on our back,” 2 Henry VI., v, 2; l. 8, “dull edg’d”=dull-edged.
- „ 63, l. 6, “braves”=bravadoes; l. 13, “garboiles”=Garbouille, Fr., tumults: l. 15—“this”—put comma after “this”; or qu.—misprint for ‘his’?; l. 2 (from bottom), “sometimes”=aforetimes (not ‘aforetime’) it being notorious that there were several subjections of Britain after Julius Cæsar.
- „ 64, l. 8, “Market place”=Market-place; l. 12, “inthroniz’d”=enthroned. See Nares, s.v., for interesting examples; l. 15, “their”=the Roman; and so l. 17.
- „ 65, The Answer, &c., l. 1, “experiment”=experience; l. 4, “post expedition”=post-expedition; l. 5, “voyage”=journey (not necessarily as now by sea); l. 8, “Victoria”=victory; l. 13, “Which” [read] . . . with; l. 12, parenthetical; l. 17, “for to” and see p. 66, ll. 14, 15, 17; p. 73, st. 3, l. 4; p. 74, st. 2, l. 2, and st. 3, l. 3; p. 76, l. 2; p. 80, st. 3, l. 2; in Spenser, but rarely in Shakespeare; l. 20, “Not violating,” &c.—this line is obscure. Its intention is to express, probably, that the so doing violates no laws of arms, or is not a course without justification according to the established laws which regulate the employment of arms in defence of one’s rights; but it fails in giving expression to such a thought. The laws of the duello, i.e., the causes which would justify such an appeal, were in that age rigidly laid down. Query—should we read “Not violating lawe and hostile Armes”? This comes a little nearer to the above-given meaning; l. 30, “true hearted”=true-hearted.
- „ 66, l. 9, “gaue the Armes”—The ‘armes’ that Constantine was supposed to bear was a representation of the miraculously-appearing cross—a white cross (I think) in an azure field. It is the “Roman empire” Chester refers to; but there may have been a sub-reference, and a Protestant argument that the ‘armies’ of Rome did not come from St. Peter; the first Pope according to the Roman Catholic myth. Angusell King, &c., l. 2, “ful fraught” = full-fraught, i.e., freighted well or fully.

- Page 67, l. 6, “hautie” = haughty, and cf. p. 68, st. 2, l. 1. “hawtie”; see also p. 74, st. 1, l. 4, “hautie courage”; p. 75, st. 4, l. 2, “hautie mind”; p. 81, st. 4, l. 3, “hautie hearts”; l. 12, “but meet”—a not uncommon form of phrase at the time, and equivalent to our now only colloquial and vulgar “let me only meet you, that’s all”; l. 13, “thrist” = thirst—so in Spenser, Fairie Queen, ii, vi, 17; ib. “sweet revenge.” Cf. “sweet as my revenge” (Coriolanus, v, 3). So too (Titus Andronicus), “O sweet Revenge, now do I come” (v, 2), and “sweet revenge grows harsh” (Othello, act v, sc. 2); l. 22, “meacocke” = tame, or cowardly or milk-sop; so Taming of Shrew (ii, 1) “a meacock wretch can make the curstest shrew.” Cf. Euphries M, l. 6; l. 23, “fond” = foolish.
- „ 68, st. 1, l. 3, “Martialist” = soldier. So William Browne—“A brave heroick, worthy martialist” (Brit. Past., i, 5); st. 2, l. 4, “new-decayed” = only lately decaying; st. 3, l. 2, “loud winded” = loud-winded; ib. “checke the aire.” Cf. st. 4, l. 5, “Cuffing the ayre”; st. 4, l. 4, “well read” = well-read; l. 6, “gaudinesse”—The reference is to the well-appointed and fine and, as it were, holiday-appearance of King Arthur’s joyfulness. Cf. p. 79, st. 1, ll. 3-4—there is a sub-reference to ‘joyfulness’ as an attendant meaning; st. 5, l. 4 (p. 69), “de Or” = of gold or golden.
- „ 69, st. 1, l. 1, “assumpted” = assumed, taken up; l. 5, “Tert” = green (in heraldry); st. 3, l. 2, “bad deseruing” = bad-deserving; l. 4, “full refind” = full-refined; st. 4, l. 3, “unpure” = impure; l. 6, “by this Signe” = in baptism, i.e., the sign of the cross as used by Roman Catholics and Church of England in baptism.
- „ 70, st. 1, l. 4, “Apostatas” = apostate in its transition-form. It occurs thus in the well-known Optick Glasse of Humours (1639), applied to Julian and elsewhere; st. 3, l. 1, punctuate with a comma (,) after ‘Charles’; l. 3, “early rising” = early-rising.
- „ 71, st. 3, l. 3, “three Toades”—The nickname for a Frenchman to this day or for a Jerseyite is Johnny Crapaud = Johnny (the) toad. The line is parenthetical; for the only “pourtraiture of commendation by honor” belonging to the English Kings were the 3 fleurs de lis or lilia, st. 2, l. 6; st. 4, l. 1, “barbed”—as in Shakespere (Richard II, act iii, sc. 3) “barbed steeds to stables,” and

- (Richard III, act i, sc. 1) "mounted barbed steeds" = barbed by corruption from barde or barred = armed; st. 4, ll. 5-6, wrong grammar 'their' and 'conqueror.'
- Page 72, st. 1, l. 3, "Who" . . . no antecedent to this "Who"—Who (= Time) with their gilded shews in opposition to those whose armour is strongly made (l. 1)—the combined nominative to "are"; st. 2, l. 1, "Calis" = Calais; l. 3, "regiment" = rule, government; l. 4, "conuince" = conquer—so too p. 85, l. 9; l. 5, "Roane" = Rouen; st. 3, l. 5, "Ifland" = Iceland—a very mythical conquest of Arthur, if he be meant. Query—is "Ifland" a misprint for "Ireland"? Singularly enough the same question has to be put on the use of the word by Raleigh, c.g., "If my fleet go for Ilande, and that your Lordshipp," &c. The Editor annotates, "So in MS." (Edwards' Raleigh, vol. ii, p. 121.)
- „ 73, st. 1, l. 6, "lofl"—perhaps the Author intended "lose"; st. 2, l. 2—a third example of a parenthetical line; l. 3, "fo inestimable" = [was] so inestimable—understood from l. 1; st. 4, ll. 2 and 4—Lucius and Tiberius of course the same man; st. 5, l. 1, "retraite" = retreat; l. 5, "Who" (p. 74)—another example of "Who" with an odd antecedent "Who foraged about" meaning they [the British], but the only expressed antecedent is the "British name" and only becomes "Britains" in next stanza.
- „ 74, st. 2, l. 1, "Mirmedons," i.e., myrmidons=Primarily a people on the borders of Thessaly who went with Achilles to the Trojan war. Hence it came to designate unscrupulous followers.
- „ 75, st. 4, l. 2, "Cousin," i.e., for relationship generally. He was uncle. Such is royal style still.
- „ 76, st. 1, l. 1, "Haggard" = a wild hawk, i.e., a hawk un-mannered or un-reclaimed, agrus, unmansuetus; st. 2, l. 4, "fond" = foolish; Mordreds smart, i.e., the smart caused by Mordred. The "who" (l. 5) is "Arthur," as shown by next line, though the ill-chosen word "unnatural" (like the "intemperate" of l. 3) seems to make against this; st. 4, l. 6, "landing" = a landing (ib.)
- „ 77, st. 1, l. 5, "withstand" = stand against him with or withstand him with; st. 4, l. 2, "mappe of Honor." Cf. Richard II, act v, sc. 1, "Thou map of honor," and so 2 Henry VI, act iii, sc. 1, l. 4, "life Liege" = life-Liege; st. 5, l. 3, "jean"—punctuate with; and , after 'memorie' in next line—'fean' is used, as so often, rythmi causa.
- „ 78, st. 1, l. 4, "aunce/brie"—odd use of the word; l. 6, "loofe" = lose; st. 2, l. 2, "Angusfel" . . . He was king of Scotland and brought 10,000 horse-mer. to assist Arthur; l. 5, "was" = verb singular after nominative plural ('bones' = body); st. 3, l. 6, "quaild" = quelled—so spelled to rhyme with 'sail'd.'

- Page 79, st. 2, l. 3, "proud-gather'd": st. 3, l. 2, "fame-achieving" = fame-achieving or achieving; l. 4, "Pridwin" = Arthur's shield. Drayton has celebrated it (along with his sword) — "With Pridwin his great shield, and what the proof could bear." (Polyolb. song iv.) Chester calls it his 'sword' (erroneously.) st. 3, l. 5, "vnscene immortalite" — mere "words, words, words," rythmi causa; st. 4, l. 3, "lofed" = loosed; l. 4, "amaz'd" — frequently used contemporaneously for 'amated' or disheartened or disturbed — also in the sense of our own 'maze,' signifying to be in a maze, or as one in a maze — the latter in the text.
- „ So, st. 1, l. 3, "deferu's" — perhaps 'deferu'd' was intended by the Author; st. 2, l. 5, "gaue" — again, and like the use of 'funerall' in line before, rythmi causa; st. 3, l. 3, "Bardth" — sic; ibid., "diuifion" = Welsh (divided into) verse, or music. Cf. Romeo and Juliet, act iii, sc. 5, "The lark makes sweet division"; l. 5, "forefaid" = fore-said; st. 4, l. 6, "inscriptal" = inscribed, as 'assumpt' before (p. 69, st. 1, l. 1.)
- „ 81, st. 1, l. 2, "vitall" = actes when vitall; st. 2, l. 6, "enter" = inter; st. 3, l. 4, "out cries" = out-cries; l. 6, "controule" = haue power over, metri causa; st. 4, l. 3 = high-proud or high-proud-hautie.
- „ 82, st. 1, l. 4, "Memorie" = memorial, as before; l. 6, put hyphen (-) thus certainly — "well-fet . . . bigge-lim'd"; st. 3, ll. 5-6 — a typical instance of Chester's extremely unskilful use of language sometimes. Line 4 and ll. 3-4 must be accounted parenthetical, and then we obtain this — But that [one] was greater than the rest; had it been 'lesser' [,] Britain would have been blessed, i.e., Arthur had not died.
- „ 83. Iohannis Leylandij, &c. l. 12, the "que" has got somehow disjoined from "Ætherij." The comma after 'petit' is an error of the original.
- „ 84, l. 5, "Virtues sole intent" — curious translation of or rather substitute for "virtutis alumnus."
- „ 85, The true Paligree, &c. The 'curious reader' of ll. 3-4 must refer to the Chronicles. The matter does not seem worth an Editor's labour. l. 1, "borne" = boren in pronunciation, i.e., dissyllabic — also [fair] is needed before "Igrene"; l. 4, "end" = close or conclude, r.g.; l. 7, "sometimes" = sometime, as before: l. 9, cf. with l. 10, where "Mellianus" is trisyllabic; "conuince" = conquer, as before (p. 72, st. 2, l. 4); l. 16 — qu. — did he intend this to be scanned as an hexameter or pentameter line? Probably as the latter; l. 17, "foucragniaz" — frequent verb form with Chester, and later.
- THE POEM-PROPER RESUMED.
- „ 86, st. 1, l. 1, "Troynouant" = new Troy — the mythic name of 'Lcn-don'; l. 5, "raifd"—qu. 'raife'? st. 2, l. 1—punctuate comma after 'when'; ibid., "more newre"—reduplicated comparative; l. 3, "famous buildd"—famous-builded; l. 7, "newre"=ne'er; ibid., "tam'd"—a quaint etymology for 'Thames' certes; st. 3, l. 2, "raif'd"—praised; l. 3, "Councel chamber"=Councel-chamber; l. 4, "Experiment"=experience. Here Nature, &c.

Page 87, l. 2—What's Cupid but a boy? (of Poem continued)—ought doubtless to have had 'Phoenix' in the margin.

,, 88, st. 2, l. 2, "farre remotd"=farre-remoted, i.e., removed; Poem continued—st. 2, l. 3, "sweete smoothd"=sweete-smoothd; l. 4, "Loue"=Lone's, the 's' being in "selfe"; st. 3, l. 3, "shallow witted"=shallow-witted; l. 4, "force materiall"=a forced phrase for the gew-gaws and wanton toys of which Nature had said Loue [in shallow-minds] was fond; st. 4, l. 2, "parted"=departed; ibid. l. 3 (p. 89), "this Wagon"—printer's error for 'his Waggon' the 'th' being caught from previous 'with'. Chester has here lapsed; they are in Phœbus' chariot—see p. 17, st. 3. But now Nature says that Phœbus has 'parted' from their sight and mounted in[to] the sky with his Waggon, thus giving passage to the 'gloomie night'; l. 7, "bottom plaines"=bottom-plaines.

,, 89, st. 1, l. 3, "taste"=feel. So Chapman (Odysseus xxi), "He now began to taste the bow." St. 2, "Looke," &c. Here again, 'Nature' should be in the margin; l. 2, "meadow plots"=meadow-plats; l. 3, "amaine"=forcefully; l. 4, "found"=in a quasi-nautical sense, r.c.; st. 3, l. 4, "extenuate"=extend—a curious use of the word, rythmi causa; ll. 6 7, "Of plants," &c.=the glories of, &c. (l. 3)—ll. 4-5, as so frequent in Chester are of a parenthetical character.

,, 90, st. 1, l. 1, "Mandrake"—I found it still believed in, as here, on and in the villages at the foot of, Carmel in Palestine. It abounds near Nazareth; st. 2, l. 1, "Yellow Crowbells"—said to be peculiar to Wilts (Aubrey)=Crowbells—Tent lily, asphodil, daffodil,—Narcissus Pseudonacissus. So Prior; but in text we have Daphedil immediately following; l. 2, "Good Harry"—in full, Good-King-Harry, i.e., Allgood, English Mercury, goose-foot, Chenopodium Bonus Henricus L.; ibid., "herbe Robert"=stork-bill, i.e., Geranium Robertianum L.—its derivation is differently accounted for; ibid., "white Cotula"=Mayweed, foetid, and otherwise, Matricaria Chamomilla, L. and Pyrethium Parthenium, L.; l. 3, "Adders grasse"—according to Gerarde cynosorchis; probably = adder's tongue—for this is called in old MSS. nedderis gres (grass) as well as nedderis tonge, Serpentina, Ophioglossum vulgatum, L.; ibid.,

"Aphodill"=asphodil, i.e., a species of daffodil; l. 4, "Agnus Castus" = the chaste tree; ibid., "Acatia" = acacia, an American Robinia—Rob. Pseudocacia; l. 5, "Blacke Arke-Angell"=the dead, deaf or blind nettle—colours white, red and yellow, not 'black' Lamium alb, purpur. L. and Galeobdolon Cr.—the name was also applied to the umbelliferous plant Angelica, archangelica L.; ibid., "Coloquintida"—still well known = colecynth; l. 6, "Sinkefoile" = Cinquefoil = five-leaved grass, Potentilla, L.; ibid., "Boies Mercurie" qu. — Child's or Childing Mercury, of which Parkinson gives a drawing and calls it Phyllum manicum and feminificum; l. 7, "Goosefoot" — Chenopodium L. See l. 2, under "Good Harry"; ibid., "Goldsnapp"—qu. golden cudweed? or a form of 'gold-knappe' = gold or butter-cup = King or Gilt cup, ranunculus, L.; ibid., "Gratia Dei"=Gratiola, Hedge Hyssop, Scutellaria minor, L.; st. 3, l. 1, "Moffe of the Sea" = sea-moss, coraline; ibid., "Succorie"—still so called = wild endive, Cichorium Intybus; l. 2, "Westwind" = Withwind, convolvulus arvensis, L.; l. 3, "Muskmealons" — or 'musk-million,' a species of sweet melon in opposition to the water-melon; ibid., "Moufaiile" = little stone-crop = a species of the house-leek — said by Prior to be Myosurus minimus; ibid., "Mercurie"=as before, st. 2, l. 7, but the French M. seems to be called the 'Mercury' Mercur. annua, L.; l. 4, "Arkangell"—as before, st. 2, l. 5; l. 5, "Souldiers ferrow"—qu. soldiers' yarrow, millefoil, achillea millefolium, L.? ibid., "Southernewood" = Southern wormwood, Artemisia Abrotanum, L. — I found this covering acres on the gentler slopes of Sinai; l. 6, "Stone hearts tongue"—Abrotanum, L.; ibid., "Blessed thistle" = sacred — the emblem of Scotland, i.e., Cardus benedictus; ibid., "Sea Trifoly" — can find none with epithet 'Sea'; l. 7, "Ladies cushion" = Thrift? Sea Gilliflower; Cushion Pink, Armeria Vulgaris, W.; ibid., "Spaines Pellitorie"—called in Latin Pyrethrum, L., "by reason of his hot and fiery taste," Gerarde, Anacyelus Pyrethrum, De Candole; st. 4, l. 1, "where as" = whereat; l. 3, "aches"—disyllabic as in Shakespeare; l. 7, "Agnus Castus"—as before, st. 2, l. 4 — a fitting request by the 'Virgin-queen.'

Page 91, st. 1, l. 4, "that bends" = the hot inflamed spirite 'that bends' to Luxury is 'allaid' by Agnus Castus; st. 2, l. 1, "Burn me" — this way of speaking, not uncommon in Shakespeare, was also not uncommon in the colloquial speech of the time and later, and even now is not; ibid., "straw" = strow; l. 2, "Whereas" = whereat, as before; l. 5, "auant" = begone — note again that as descriptive of Paphos IIe =

Ireland—all this is peculiarly appropriate; st. 3, l. 1, "Clary or Cleare-erie" = Oc. Christi, God's eye, Seebright, from M. Lat. sclarea, Salvia sclarea, L.; l. 2, "Calues snout" = Lion's Snap, Snap-dragon, Antiirrhinum Majus, L., but in old works given to ragged robin, Lychnis flos cuculi, L.; ibid., "Cuckoe flowers" = wilde water cresses, cardamine (Gerarde); ibid., "Cuckoes meate" = C. Bread or Gowks Meat—blossoms at the season that the cuckoo is heard—Oxalis acetosella, L. Wood sorrell; l. 3, "Calathian Violets" = Autumn bells, Sing flower, Gentiana Pneumonanthe, L.; ibid., "Deverberie" = Rubus chamaemorus; l. 4, "Leopards foote"—can't find; l. 5, "Indian Sunne"—ibid.; l. 6, "Valerian" = capon's tail and ('improperly,' Parkinson) Setwal, Valeriana Officinalis, L.; ibid., "Withie wind" = A.S. Wid, about, same as bindweed, Convolvulus arvensis, L., also 'Weedwind,' p. 90, st. 2; l. 7, "Woodbind"—given by Parkinson as the honeysuckle: but it must have been also used for a different plant. Cf. Mids. N. D., iv, l. 1. Prior says it may be the bitter sweet, Solanum Dulcamara; also he gives it to the Lonicera Periclymenum, L. The 'honey-suckle' was not ague-curing. It is simply impossible that Shakespeare meant that the honeysuckle enwreathed the honeysuckle and called it by two different names. There is, however, no reason why the 'withwind' or 'bind-weed' (i.e., convolvulus) should not have been called in Warwickshire or elsewhere the woodbine, the derivation being not a 'bine' found in woods, but a 'bine' that clings to a tree or other shrub; st. 4, l. 1, "Coliander" = Coriander C. Sativum, L.; l. 2, "Galingal" = aromatic root of the rush cyperus longus, L.; ibid., "Goldcups" = meadow ranunculus = butter cups; ibid., "Buprestis"—Buprestis Theophrasti referred by Parkinson to the hares-eares, genus Bupleurum, L.; l. 3, "small honiflies" = Pinckes (pinks) in Parkinson; ibid., "Eye-bright" = Ocul. Christi, q.v.; ibid., "Coculus Panter"—can find nothing but Coculus Indus or Indi; l. 4, "Double tongue" = the plant horse-tongue; ibid., "Moly" = Homer's plant—called by Parkinson Hungarian or Saracen's Garlic; ibid., "Anthyllis" = sea chickweed and sea ground pine according to Parkinson; but it seems to be a name of Dioscorides, on which no definite conclusion could be come to: p. 281 and at p. 569, he speaks of the ground pine as called by some Anthyllis; l. 5, "Clauer" = clover, also called Mellilot; ibid., "Ethiopsis" = an Ethiopian plant which Parkinson first classed among the Mulleins (the Verbascas, L.) but afterwards put with the Clarys (the Salvias, L.); l. 6, "Flora-more" = fleur d' amour, Fr., from a mistaken etymology of Amaranthus, Am. tricolor, L.; ibid., “Euphorbium” = see on st. 3, l. 1; ibid., “Efula” = some of the Tithimailes or Spurges (Euphorbia) (Parkinson, s.v.); l. 7, “Caffia fjlula” = an Indian plant producing a pulp still used medicinally. It has preserved its name to this day.

- Page 92, st. 1, “By the way” — note this now familiar phrase; l. 2, “Moly” — as before; l. 5, “laden” = ladened; st. 3, l. 1, “Mugwort” — said by Prior to be a form of Mothwort, also called Mothenwort Artemisia Vulgaris, L.; ibid., “Sena” = senna, the well known drug; ibid., “Tithimailes” = “Herbe à lait, Spurge, Tithimal, Milkweed (Milkwort, Parkinson), Wolves Milk.” Cotgrave; l. 2, “Oke of Ierufalem” = (leaf supposed to resemble oak leaf) — Oak of Cappadocia Chenopodium Ambrosioides, L.; ibid., “Lyryconfaucie or Liriconfancy” = corruption of lilium convallium, or lily of the valley, Convallaria majalis, L.; l. 3, “Larkes fpurre” — so known at present, L. heel—toe or claw, Knights spurs Delphinium, L.; ibid., “Larkes claw” — I find no such word, but Prior gives it as a synonym for Lark’s spur, and Chester is no authority; l. 4, “Garden Nigella” = a Fennel flower, Nigella damascena, L.; ibid., “Mill” — I can’t find; ibid., “Pionie” = peony; l. 5, “Sentorie” — centaury; l. 6, “Sorobread” — its tuber eaten by swine, Cyclamen europeum, L.; ibid., “Goates oregan,” or goat’s organ, or goat’s marjoram; l. 7, “Pelemeum” — I can’t find; ibid., “Ofmond the Waterman” = Osmund Fern, Os. royal, St. Christopher’s Herb = Osmunda regalis, L.; st. 4, l. 1 — punctuate, after “Mugwort” — see before, p. 92, st. 3, l. 1.
- „ 93, st. 2, l. 3, “Melampus,” l. 4, “Proetus” — see Myth. Dict., s.v., the first mortal endued with prophetic powers and medical skill undertook to cure Proetus’ daughters, king of Argos, and got two-thirds of kingdom and married one daughter (one account); st. 3, l. 1, “Centrie” — see p. 92, st. 1, l. 5; l. 6, “aches” — disyllabic, as before noted.
- „ 94, st. 1, l. 7, “hath” — another of the author’s curious change of tenses; st. 2, l. 1, “Ofmond balepate” — I know not unless is = Osm. the Waterman, that being “singular for wounds, bruises and the like” — see p. 92, st. 3, l. 7; ibid., “Plebane” — I can’t find — might be error for Fleabane = Inula Pulicaria, L.; ibid., “Oculus Christi” = Wild clary, God’s eye, See-bright, Salvia Sclarea, L.; l. 2, “Salomons feale” = Solomon’s, i.e., Ladder to heaven, Convallaria Polygonatum, L., root stock cut across, being marked like two triangles reversed; ibid., “Sampire” = samphire — every one knows Shakespeare’s reference to it — “one that gathers samphire” (Lear, act iv, sc. 6); Fr. St.

Pierre, and so Sampire from its growing on sea cliffs; l. 3, "Sage of Ierusalem" = cowslips of Jerusalem, Lingwort, Bugloss cowslip, spotted Comfrey, Pulmonaria officinalis, L.; l. 4, "Great Pileofila" = Mouseear, Hieracium Pilosella, L.; ibid., "Sengreene" — see note under 'Water Sengreene,' p. 96, st. 4, l. 2; ibid., "Alexander" = horse-parsley, Smyrnium Olus atrum, L.; l. 5, "Knights Milfoile" — qu., the hooded Milfoil, Bladder-wort, Utricularia vulgaris, L.; ibid., "Maf-ticke" = Masticke, gum from Pistacia Lentiscus, from Scio; ibid., "Stocke gilfofer" = Our present 'stock,' Matthiola incana, L.; l. 6, "herbe twopence" = moneywort from its pairs of round leaves, Lysimachia Nummularia, L.; ibid., "Hermoadactill" = roots sold as medicine in Parkinson's time, but the plant unknown — 'Redflower Pimpernell' Anagallis arvensis, L.; st. 4, l. 1, "imperious" — punctuate with , after; l. 2, "crie disdaining" = crie-disdaining; l. 6, "lower" = lowered; l. 7, "neare" = ne'er.

Page 95, st. 1, l. 6, "Hard hearted" = hard-hearted; st. 2, l. 2, "morne excellling" = morne-excelling; st. 1-2 — profoundly suggestive of the radiant, impulsive, passionate Essex. See our Introduction; st. 3, l. 5, "refine" — odd yet noticeable use of 'refine'; st. 4, l. 1, "Carrets" — see p. 96, st. 1; ibid., "Cherulle" = Chaerophyllum sylvestre, L. χαίρεφυλλον, χαίρω, I rejoice, φυλλον, leaf; ibid., l. 2, "Red Patiens" = Patience or Monks rhubarb, dock, Rumex Patientia, L.; "Powflane" — see p. 96, st. 3; ibid., "Gingidium" — Parkinson calls it strange chevрил, and says that all the varieties come from Syria, except one from Spain; l. 3, "Oxe eie" = the great daisy, from Lat. buplthalmus, Chrysanthemum Leucanthemum, L.; "Pennygraffes" — The sheep-killing p-g. is = penny-rot, the white-rot — marsh pennywort, Hydrocotyle vulgaris, L. Cotgrave gives, "Herbe qui tue les brebis, Moneywort, herb two-penny, two-penny grass," and Parkinson the same; but these names seem to have been given rather confusedly to Hydrocotyle vulg., Pinguicula vulg., and Lysimachia Nummularia, L.; l. 4, "Cuckoe pintell" = arum maculatum, L. See wake-robin, p. 96; ibid., "Ladies feale" = Sigill. S. Marie = Bryonia nigra. Prior, following some of our old herbalists, says that it and Solomon's seal are the same, i.e., Convallaria Polygonatum, L.; but Parkinson differs and makes the S. S. Marie, black bryony, Tamus communis, L.; ibid., "Saga pinum" = Sagapenum, a gum like Galbanum from Media; l. 5, "Theophryllus violet" = (old names) white violet or wallflower; ibid., "Vinctozicium" — Parkinson calls it Gentianella minor verna; l. 6, "Saint Peters wort" = cowslip, from resembling a bunch of keys, Primula veris, L.; ibid., “Venus hair” = Maiden hair fern, Adiantum, L.; l. 6, “Squilla” = squills. I saw huge shrub-like plants of it in Palestine. Page 96, st. 1, l. 6, “Sad dreaming” = Sad-dreaming; l. 7, “honie working” = honie-working; l. 5, “But” — They would sell, &c., rather than not view or experience thy sweete, &c.: st. 2, l. 2, “rauisht” = ravished infernal Pluto; st. 3, l. 1, “Purflane” — Portulaca oleracea, L., as before, p. 95, st. 3, l. 2; st. 4, l. 1, “Rocket” — corruption of diminutive of eruca, Eruca sativa Lam.; ibid., “Iack by the hedge” = more properly ‘Jakes,’ from its offensive garlicky smell, Sauce alone, Alliaria officinalis, L.; ibid., “Loue in idleneffe” = [small] pansy: Viola Tricolor, L.; l. 2, “Knights water Sengreene” — Sengreene is the houseleek, sin (Sax.) ever, also aigreen, Jupiter’s eye, Bullock’s eye, Jupiter’s beard, Sempervivum Tectorum, L. Parkinson speaks of an Egyptian water plant looking like a houseleek which was called Stratiotes, and this or the Stratiotes Aizoides he calls in his Index Water Sengreen; l. 3, “Paris Nauveus” — query, Herb Paris or Truelove, its four leaves resembling a truelove knot — but ‘Navews’ are rapes, turnips, and sometimes it would seem radishes; ibid., “Tornefol” = (sun-flower?) Wartwort, Euphorbia helioscopia, L.; l. 4, “Starre thistle” — so called from its spiny involucre, Centaurea Solstitialis, L.; l. 5, “Scia” — I can’t find this; l. 6, “Wake-robbins” = Cuckoo-Pint, Wake-Pintle, Artm maculatum, L., one among several repetitions, shewing that Chester repeated without knowledge: cf. ‘Cuckoe Pintle,’ p. 95, st. 1, l. 4, et alibi; ibid., “Hartichocke” = artichoke. , 97, st. 1, l. 1, “Hyacinthus.” See Apollo, i, 3, § 3, for the ancient myth. l. 5, “sprinkled” — a trisyllable here; l. 7, “red white mingled” = red-white mingled, or red-white-mingled; ib., “Gilli-flower” = carnation. But Shakespeare distinguished between the carnation and gilliflower, e.g.

“The fairest flowers of the season,
Are our Carnations and streaked Gillyflowers”

Winter’s Tale, iv, 3.

which is kindred with Spenser’s distinction between ‘Carnations’ (‘Coronations’ as he rightly spells — from coronæ = garlands) and Sops-in-wine, which, nevertheless, are only two of the numerous names of this one beautiful plant. I met with it wild on the plain of Esdraelon, at the foot of the mountains of Gilboa in Palestine — white, streaked with pale red. Cf. Midsummer Night’s Dream, act. ii, sc. 2, for an exquisite descriptive bit. Dr. Brinsley Nicholson — to whom, as throughout, I am extremely indebted for most painstaking researches on Chester's flowers, &c.—thus writes me hereon: "The carnation and gilliflower seem to have been different species (or at least varieties) of the same genus. Parkinson (Paradisus Ter., p. 314) says, 'Most of our later writers call them by one general name, Caryophyllum sativum and flos Caryophylleus, adding thereunto maximus, when wee mean carnations, and maior when we would express gilliflowers, which name is taken from cloves, in that the sent of the ordinary red gilliflower (quasi July flower) especially doth resemble them.' I give this to clear up the difficulty that has always existed as to Shakespeare's and Spenser's lines. Even now I find a distinction made between carnations and pinks and gilliflowers, and I am much inclined from this to believe in the derivation from carnis and not from corona—the 'popular carnation' being, as I understand it, of a red colour with the barest mingling of a reddish white." St. 2—this and other contextual stanzas are to be read between the lines. 'Nature' is pleading with the 'Phoenix' (Elizabeth) for the 'Turtle dove' (Essex). St. 3, l. 2, "silver coloured Lillie" = silver-coloured. Cf. p. 21, heading of 'A Prayer'—'a silver coloured Dove'; l. 6, "Az az" = the exclamation of woe by Apollo for the mortally wounded Hyacinthus or the letter Υ of $\Upsilon\acute{\alpha}\kappa\upsilon\theta\omicron\varsigma$; st. 4, l. 1, "jujt" = trick; l. 4, "Trauants" = truants; l. 5, "deepe reade" = deepe-reade.

Page 98, st. 1, l. 1, "Rocket"—see on p. 96, st. 4, l. 1; l. 2, "in your Maisters brow" = frowns indicative of displeasure? l. 7, "That what is seene without comes not within," i.e., I suppose, the 'wheals' are there but no 'blood' drawn or pain caused; st. 2, l. 4, "Artichocks"—see p. 96, st. 4, l. 6; ib., 'who'—note this for which; l. 5, "Sod" = sodden or steeped; st. 3, ll. 1 & 3, put hyphen in 'Sommer-time and Winter-time'; st. 4, l. 1, "Sow-bread"—see p. 99, sts. 1-3, and note p. 92, st. 3, l. 6—Cyclamen Europæum, L.; ib., "Stawwort"—qu. stoncrop? or as we have had stoncrop, qu. error for Stab-wort, Oxalis acet., L., or Star-wort, Aster Tripolium, L.? ib. "Starre of Hierusalem"—qu. Star of Bethlehem? Prior makes the Star of Bethlehem to be Ornithogalum umbellatum, L., and the Star of Jerusalem or girasole, Tragopogon porrifolium; but Parkinson in his Index makes them the same, and gives as synonyms Goats-beard, Go-to-bed-at-noon, Joseph's flower, also a Tragopogon (pratense), L.; l. 2, "Vervaine" = vervain or ver-vine—anciently used in sacred rites and ceremonies—also called holy herb, pigeon's grass, Juno's tears, &c., Verbena officinalis, L.; ib., "Tanise"—a yellow ill-savoured wild plant, still so-named—Tanacetum vulgare; Fr., tanaise—

'tansy' from Athanasia Gr. from a misinterpretation of Lucian (Dial. of Gods, iv); l. 3, "Go to bed at noone"—see 'Starre Hierusalem,' l. 1; ib., "Tilimaleon"—see note on p. 92, st. 2, l. 1; l. 4, "Hundred headed thistle"—I imagine the reference is to the abundant 'thistle-down' that bears the seed in a 'hundred' directions; ib., "Luie"—see p. 98, st. 4. Shakespeare says—

"The female Ivy so Earrings the barky fingers of the elm."

Midsummer Night's Dream, act. iv, sc. 1.

One rarely or never sees it round the (traditional) 'vine.' Pliny tells us (s.v.) that the yellow berries of ivy drunk secure one from drunkenness, and Cato and Varro that there is such antipathy between the ivy and wine that if wine and water be put into an ivy cup, the water remains but the wine soaks through. Hence the appropriation of both to Bacchus might have arisen from the ivy being thought a preservative from all but the good effects of the grape. Milton sings of "the ivy never sear." l. 5, "Storks bill"—an herb still so named; ib., "Stone-crop"=the Salum acre of Linnæus; ib., "Canary"=canary-seed—so known still; l. 6, "Dwarfe gentian"—see p. 100, st. 3; ib., "Snake-weed"=adder's wort or bistort, Polygonum Bistorta; ib., "Sawory." This plant gets its name from the Latin Satureia through the Italian Savoreggia. Winter's Tale, act. iv, sc. 3 (Ellacombe). l. 8, "Bell rags"=a kind of water-cress? ib., "prickly Boxe"=either our buck-thorn rhamnus catharticus, L., "the buck being a misrendering of Germ. buxdorn = box-thorn πυξικανθα" Prior; or another plant called by Parkinson box-thorn (p. 1009) Lycium sive Pyxacantha, he having spoken of buck-thorn in the previous chapter; ib., "Raspis of COUNTRY"—the 'raspberry.' Gerarde describes it by the name of 'Rubus idæus, the raspis bush, or hind-berry. He has this notice of it:—"The raspis is planted in gardens: it groweth not wilde that I know of, except in a field by a village in Lancashire, called Harwood, not far from Blackburn" (p. 1273). As resident in Blackburn I may state that the 'raspberry' abounds in the woods all around us. See Nares's s.v. for a full note.

Page 99, st. 1, l. 5, "Vulffe too much," &c., i.e., unless they wish abortion or miscarriage; st. 2, l. 5, "When Mother Lullabie with ioy should sing"=Mother sing Lullabie with ioy; l. 6, "Yet wanton scaping Maides," &c. Cf. st. 1, l. 5, and relative note; also the next stanza here. St. 4, l. 4, "the maiden Ciffus"=κισσος ivy. There seems at p. 100, st. 1, ll. 1-5, a reminiscence of the story of Ariadne and Dionysus.

Page 100, st. 1, l. 3, "infused" = drawn thither; but by stress of rhyme, and so too in l. 5. St. 3, l. 2, "hot shining" = hot-shining; l. 5, "not flunne" = not [otherwise]; st. 4, l. 1, "Cardus benedictus Blessed thistle. So Shakespeare—

Margaret. Get you some of this distilled Cardus Benedictus, and lay it to your heart; it is the only thing for a qualm.

Hero. There thou prickest her with a Thistle.

Beatrice. Benedictus! Why Benedictus? You have some moral in this Benedictus.

Margaret. Moral! No by my troth, I have no moral meaning; I meant plain Holy Thistle."

(Much Ado About Nothing, ac. iii, sc. 4.)

The 'Holy Thistle' or 'Blessed Thistle' was long held to be a heal-all. See Steevens' Shakespeare in loco; l. 2, "Neswort," see p. 101, st. 1 — Parkinson calls it White Hellebore. Prior, under sneeze-wort, says = Achillea Parmica; ibid., "Peniroyall" — (so called still) Latin pulegium regium and L. Mentha pulegium — supposed to destroy fleas — also called pudding grass, because used in 'stuffings'; ibid., "Afrolochin" — cannot find anywhere; l. 3, "Yellow Wolfs-bane" = aconite — usually blue, but one kind has pale yellow flowers; ibid., "Bramble." See a most interesting note on this familiar plant (or shrub) in Ellacombe's Plant-Lore and Garden Craft of Shakespeare (1878), s.v. l. 4, "Our Ladies Redbrow" = the plant Galium; ib., "Brooklime" = water-pimpernell, Vormica Beccabringa, L.; ibid., "Lunaria" — see p. 101, st. 4; l. 5, "Cinque foile" = five-leaved grass, but Prior makes them different — Typha latifolia and Phleum pratense L.; ib., "Cats tail" = the plant horse-tail? Potentilla, L.; ib., "Cresse Scialica" — so-called (I suppose) as good for alleviating sciatic and rheumatic pains — a kind of candytuft, Ihoris amara, L.; l. 6, "Hollihocks" = holly-hock — still well-known and admired; ib., "Moufcar" = Latin, myosotis, Hieracium Pilosella, L. — appearance of chickweed, but the flower larger and the fruit ox-horn shape, open at the top and full of small round seeds. There is a mouse ear chickweed and a mouse ear scorpion grass, but they are both different. Holland's Pliny, however, gives as a synonym for mouse ear (Myosotis) chickweed. Prior gives mouse ear chickweed, stellaria media; ib., "Pety Merrell" = garden night-shade, i.e., solanum nigra; l. 7, "Sage" — see p. 101, sts. 2-3; ib., "Scorpiadis" = scorpion-grass or caterpillars, though the word ought to be Scorpioides. It is the mouse ear scorpion grass, now called forget-me-not — Myosotis palustus, L., from its spike, says Prior, resembling a scorpion's tail, it was supposed by the doctrine of signatures to be good against a scorpion's bite; ib., "garden sorrell"—the wild 'wood' sorrell cultivated—a sallet.

- Page 101, st. 1, l. 3, "fod"—sodden or steeped. Cf. p. 98, st. 2, l. 5; st. 2, l. 3, "Ætius"—probably Aetius of Amida, a physician and writer on medicine? He refers to Egyptian medicine in his Β 'Ἰατρικὰ ἑκκαίδεκα; st. 4, l. 4, "horflocke"—a horse's fetter to prevent anything but a gentle pace and straying—qu.—get twisted among the leaves and stems and so un-locked?
- „ 102, st. 1, l. 1, "Standergras"—having double tubers, it was thought on the doctrine of signatures to have aphrodisiac powers, Prior, Orchis mascula, L. This and 'Hares ballockes' and 'great Orchis' are different names for one plant, as shown by description and name, and by the text 'provoketh' and 'procureth,' l. 2, and 'It,' ll. 3 and 5, et seq.; ll. 6-7=only to be used fresh or newly pulled; st. 3, l. 1, "Rofemarie"—See Ella-combe, as before, for a full note on this once wonderfully popular plant; ib., "iustifie"—uphold or state or make just; l. 6, "Conferues . . . restores"—plural nominative to verb singular; st. 4, l. 1, "Dwale or Nightshade"—the latter explains the former name. The 'Dwale-Bluth' of young Oliver Madox-Brown has revived the older name unforgetably; l. 4, "coile"—disturbance, tumult; l. 6, "Almaine"—Germany; l. 7, "nought"—naught, naughty, bad.

As this ends our Author's rapid naming and description of plants and flowers, I must semi-apologize for my attempt to give each its scientific name. I have ventured to do so (through Dr. Nicholson's ready aid) first from the tendency people then had to give the same name to different flowers, second that the then Botanists placed different species of different genera under one generic name. I would now introduce here a hitherto unprinted poem from a MS. in the Chetham Library, Manchester, wherein the most popular flowers are daintily introduced, as follows:

MUSA AMATORIA.

1. In funny fumers heatinge
Cloffe in an arbour fittinge
Under a mirtle shade;
For my kinde loue the fairest
Wth flowers of the rarest,
A Pofie thus I made.
2. The first of maidens fancie
Wth purple coloured panfy,
The goold that flutt at night;

- And then I platt a maidens bluth,
A Tulupp and Narciffus,
Wth Campions red and white.
3. The violett and the Eglantine,
Wth Cowslips sweet and fops in wine,
Sweete marjoram and ox eye ;
The flowers of muske millions,
Come blowe me downe, sweet Williams,
Wall-flowers and favorye.
4. The cheifest flowers for pofes,
Are pinks, gilliflowers and rofes ;
I pluckt them in their prime.
The Larkheele and the Lillie,
The fragrant Daffa-dillie,
Wth Lauender and tyme.
5. The cheifest flowers for tastinge,
The flower euerlastinge
I puld it from the baye ;
The blew and coloured collobine,
The Dafe and the woodbine,
And next, the flower of Maye.
6. These flowers beinge culled
And from their branches pulled
They yield a fragrant sent ;
And I obserud their places
And had them in bride-Laces,
And to my Loue I went.
7. Where I perceiud her sportinge
With other maides refortinge,
Nigh by a riuer stode;
When she had well perused
My posie not refused
Upon her arme she tyed.
8. With modest kind behaiour
She thankes me for my fauor,
And weares it for my fake;
And with ten thousand kisses
The rest remayne in wiltes
Her Loveinge leaue she takes. Finis.
(So10 Chetham Library, So55 Farmer's Catal.)

St. 2, l. 2, "Times increafe." So Shakespeare 'earth's increase' (Tempest, act. iv, sc. 1 (Song) and 2 Henry VI, act iii, sc. 2) and 'womb's increase' (Coriol, act i, sc. 1); l. 5, "their" = there, as frequenter contemporaneously; l. 6, "fwete fspread" = fweete-fspread; st. 3, l. 6, "nominate" = name, r.g.; st. 4, l. 3, "loftie bearing" = loftie-bearing; l. 5, "Christs-thorne" = Spina Christi—I found it in enormous growth near Jericho; l. 6, "Tamariske" = tamaris, Fr. and Sp.: tamarisco, It.: tamariscus, Latin—wood and fruit medicinal; st. 5, l. 1, "moft chaff tree, that Chastneffe doth betoken"—no opportunity is 'let slip' of pleasing the 'Virgin-queen,' as she rejoiced to be called, by such references; l. 2, "Hollyholme" = a holm holly; l. 3, "Corkie"—Gerarde and Parkinson describe this tree, though it was not planted in England until the latter part of the seventeenth century; ib., "Goosiberrie." It may be noted that Dr. Prior has shewn that this word is a corruption of 'Cross-berry,' and so has nothing to do with the 'goose'; l. 3 (page 104) "shooken" = shaken, r.g.; l. 4, "Philbert" = filbert; ib., "Barberie" or Berberry = the piperidge-bush—a prickly shrub, bearing a long red tart 'berry'; l. 5, "Masticke"—lentisk tree—I saw it plentiful in Cyprus and Scio = gum from it.

Page 104, st. 1, l. 1, "Iudas tree"—resembles the apricot—grows in hedges of Italy and Spain, but in England it was the elder of Shakespeare; st. 2, l. 1, "Ash-tree." See Ellacombe, as before, s.v.; ib., "Maple"—a fine naturalized English tree, with odd-shaped winged seeds that when I was a boy used to be called 'cocks and hens'; ib., "Sycamore"—Acer pseudoplatanus, L., of the maple genus; l. 2, "Pomegranate" = the kernelled apple (pomum granatum)—delicious in Palestine as I proved at Shunem, &c.; ib., "Apricookes." See Ellacombe, as before, for a full note (s.v.) hereon; ib., "Junipere"—Latin, juniperus—the well known tree or shrub. It grows very large in the Sinaitic peninsula; l. 3, "Turpentine"—resinous clear gum from the pine, juniper, &c.; ib., "deftore" = weep or pour out; ib., "Pearc-tree"—poire, French: pyrum, Latin—innumerable varieties; ib., "Medlar"—mespilum, Latin—like the laurel; l. 5, "Orange." See Ellacombe for a matterful note, s.v.; ib., "Lemmon"; Ibid., l. 6, "Nutmeg"—see Gerarde, s.v., but it was not introduced into England for two centuries later; ib., "Plum-tree." See Ellacombe, as before, s.v.; st. 3, l. 1, "Mirtle"—"Holy Writ," and the classical myths have immortalized it. See Ellacombe, as before, s.v.; l. 2, "gods"—misprint for 'goddess'; l. 3, "Mersin." Is this mythological story of Mersin a classical one? Or is it coined by Chester? I do not remember it, nor can I find it. Moreover, the 'myrtle' was sacred to Aphrodite or Venus (Murcia or Murtea), and not to Athéné or Pallas. I incline also to think it Chester's because he has made rather a mess of the name, μυρρανη being a myrtle branch, and μυρτος the myrtle tree" (Dr. Brinsley Nicholson, to me). l. 4, the colon (:): certainly ought to have been deleted here; st. 4, l. 3, "gouvernement" = of set rule.

- Page 105, st. 1, l. 1, "fore passed" = fore-passed; l. 5, "vanquisher," i.e., the vanquished — a probable misprint; st. 3, l. 1, "greene remaining" = greene-remaining; ib., "Bay." See Ellacombe, as before, for a full note, s.v.; ll. 5-6. See note on p. 97, st. 2; st. 5 (p. 106), l. 3, "to his hearts delight" = for the delight of his own heart.
- „ 106, st. 1, l. 1, "opinion" = good repute in knowledge; ll. 5-6 = Apollo as god of the sun. Cf. the preceding context; st. 2, l. 1, "Mofe-tree" — see on ll. 5-6; l. 4, "Herborists" = "one skilled in herbs" (Ash., s.v.) It occurs in its more correct form of Herbarist in Philemon Holland's P'ivy, either in this sense, or as one who gathers herbs for medical purposes. ll. 5-6, unintelligible to the editor. It can't possibly mean that near or in Niniveh or the 'Aleph' (= first or foremost — as being the first letter of the Hebrew alphabet) cite some merchant-ship trading from 'Venetia' found this 'Mofe-tree' there. The next stanza only deepens the obscurity; st. 4, l. 4, "Tellus glorie" — Tellus' glorie; l. 5 (p. 107), put hyphen in "white silver'd" and "rich resembling."
- „ 107, st. 3, l. 1, "Præne" — a small crustaceous fish, like a shrimp, but larger; ib., "Pickrell" = young pike; l. 3, "Puffin" = a kind of sea water-fowl then called 'feathered fish' (Rider, s.v., 1640); ib., "Sole" — the well-known flat marine fish, of the genus Pleuronectes, P. solea of Linnæus — so called probably from its keeping on or near the bottom ('sole') of the sea; ib., "Sommer louing" = Sommer-louing; st. 4, l. 3, "brimne" = edge.
- „ 108, st. 1, l. 1, "Ray" — a genus of cartilaginous plagiostomous fishes, e. g., sting ray, spotted torpedo, thornback, skate, &c.; ib., "Sea-calf" — the common seal, a species of phoca — phoca vitulina of Linnæus; ib., "Porpoise" — from porco, a hog and pesce — a fish (Italian), hence called hog-fish and sea-hog — in zoology cetaceous mammals of the genus Delphinus of Linnæus; l. 3, "Sea-horse" — the morse, a species of Trichechus or walrus, the T. rosmarus; ib., "Sea-hound." Cotgrave gives, 'Hound fish' = Fr., sorrot, Ash, 'name of a fish.' Rider gives, 'Hound fish' = Galerus; and under 'Galerus,' a Dogge-fish, also a Sea-Calf. Ib., "Plaice" = flat fish of the 'sole' species; l. 4, "Spitchcoke" — was not as now, an eel broiled, &c., but 'a great eel,' Anguilla decumana (Rider, and so Kersey)—possibly the conger. So 'stocke-fish' was not a salted fish as now, but was used as the name of the live fish (Rider). Ib., "Pilcher"=pilchard; l. 6, "Aches"—disyllabic as usual; st. 2, l. 1, "Spitffish"=sea-pike. Cf. for further description Cotgrave, s.v., Spet. Ib., "Spurling"=sparling or sperling? l. 2, "Thornebacke"—a kind of 'ray,' as before; l. 3, "Twine"—Rider has "A fish called a twin before it be a year old. Pelamys—and pelamys is a thunny or tunny. Ib., "Scallop"—a fish in hollow and pectinated shell; l. 4, "pretie Wrinkle"=a welke; st. 3, l. 1, "Cuttle"=cuttle-fish; ib., "Stocke-fish"—already named supra (st. 1, l. 4); l. 4, "Ruffe"—a small fish, a species of Perca, Perch, cernua, native of England; ib., "Piper"=pipe-fish—or Horn-back, or Horn or Gorn-fish—of the genus Syngnathus, so called from the length and slenderness of its body, which in its thickest part is only equal to a swan's quill; l. 5, "Barbell"—of the genus Cyprinus, of the order of Abdominals; st. 4, l. 5, "stubborne necked"=stubborne-necked; st. 5, l. 3—remove comma (,) certainly after "vu-feene."

Page 109, st. 1, l. 1, "Amatiff"=amethyst—see p. 110, st. 2; ib., "Abeffone"=asbestos? but see infra; l. 2, "Turches"=turquoise; l. 3, "Adamant"—see p. 109, st. 4; l. 3, "Dionife"=Dionisias—Batman (xvi, 35) calls it Dioniso, a stone, black or brown, having red spots. See Batman, as supra, and Isidore for more on it. Ib., "Calcedon"=calcedony; l. 4, "Elutropia"—qu. heliotrope? l. 5, "Asterites"—a gem shining within like a star, mentioned by Isidore; l. 6, "Argirites"—a silver-like gem mentioned also by Isidore; l. 4, "Berill"—see p. 110, st. 5; l. 5, "Saphire"—see p. 114, st. 2-3; l. 6, "Iacinth"—see p. 113, st. 2; st. 2, l. 1, "Smaragd"—see p. 114, st. 4; ib., "Alablaster"—so spelled contemporaneously, and onward. So too the Poet—Spenser's friend—had his name spelled; ib., "Crusopaffe"=chrysoptase; l. 3, "sparkling Diamond"—see p. 111, st. 2-3. The most exquisite thing I ever have met with on the diamond was in a most unlikely place, viz., in James Arbuckle's poem of "Snuff." He describes the tapered, pink-nailed finger of Beauty, whereon "The diamond spills its drop of light." l. 4, "Margarite"=pearl; ib., "bright-cy'd Chryshall." This recalls Sir John Davies' splendid description of the sea, looking up with his 'great crystal eye' to the moon; l. 5, "Ligurius"=a species of carbuncle or the lynx stone, or jacinth, or amber; ib., "Onix"=onyx; ib., "Gagates"—see p. 112, st. 4—Minsheu and Cotgrave give it=agate, but Rider and Lovell as 'jeat' or agath stone, and so Pliny, xxxvi, 19; l. 6, "Abfjos"—Batman gives Abeston for Asbestos, but Absciso from Isidore as a precious stone, "black heavie and streaked with redde veines," &c.; ib., "Amatites"—see p. 110, st. 4; ib., "Achates"—see p. 110, st. 3; st. 3, l. 5, "Lipparia"=Liparium or rock alum; l. 6, "Enidros"—see p. 112, st. 3. This gem, anhydros = ἐνυδρος, is now unknown. Pliny 37, 11, 73; Solin. 37, 67; st. 4, l. 1, "Adamant"=lode-stone.

- Page 110, st. 1, l. 1, "lively"=living. Cf. "lively oracles" (Acts vii, 38), "lively hope" (1 Peter i, 3), "lively stones" (1 Peter ii, 5); st. 2, l. 1, "purple colour'd"=purple-coloured; ib., "Amatijß"=amethyst—see p. 109, st. 1, l. 1; st. 4, l. 5, "fiery light"=in the fire, r.g.
- „ 111, st. 1, l. 5, "the houfe"=life; st. 2-3. Cf. note p. 109, st. 2, l. 3, and note the feminine there as here; st. 4, l. 6, "whereas"=whereat.
- „ 112, st. 1, l. 1, "Achites"—qu.=cf. description p. 112, st. 1, l. 1, and p. 110, st. 3, l. 1. Minsheu gives as=Gagates; but Lovell, making Gagates or Agath one of the sulphurs = a black stony earth full of bitumen, gives Achates among the stones or jewels most precious, as like the jasper. Doubtless Chester meant the 'agate.' l. 6, "refl"=ease from pain; st. 2, l. 4, "her humours is releasfng"—sic, and so another example of verb singular following a nominative plural; l. 6, "forfake his meate"=lose his appetite; st. 3, l. 1, "Enidros"—see p. 109, st. 3, l. 6; after st. 3, "Perpetui," &c., from Marbodæi Carmen de Gen. §47: Franzias, Lips. 1791—Chester slightly different; st. 4, l. 1, "Gagates"—see p. 109, st. 2, l. 5; l. 2, "whereas"=whereat, as before; st. 5 (p. 113), l. 3, "some men neuer thinke"=will not believe.
- „ 113, st. 1, l. 1, "Iacinth." Cf. Batman upon Barthol. B xvi, c. 57. Our Poet has drawn on one or other; l. 3, "cle"—the original's misprint for 'clere' or 'cleare' through length of the line; l. 6, "the m"—not misprint for 'them' but for 'to the m[inde]'—as revealed by the rhyme and scansion; st. 4, l. 1, "Meade stone"—see Batman upon Barthol. B xvi, c. 67 Medo—whence this is fetched; l. 4, "Mingled," &c., i.e., mingled with the milk of a woman having a male infant (not a female one).
- „ 114, st. 1, l. 1, "Orites"—see Batman, as before, B. xvi, c. 74; st. 2, l. 1, "Skie colour'd"=Skie-colour'd; ib., "Saphire"—see Batman, as before, B. xvi, c. 87; l. 2, "iudging"=judicial, well-judging; st. 3, ll. 5-6. Whence this 'consecration' of the sapphire to Apollo? Batman, l. xvi, c. 87, gives the story of the spider and says he has oft seen it proved. St. 4, l. 1, read—'fresh-greene-colour'd' or 'fresh greene-colour'd'; ib., "Smaragd"—see Batman, as before, B. xvi, c. 88.

- Page 115, st. 1, l. 1, "valiant Caesar," viz., Nero; l. 2, Συαρους, sic, but = Συαραγδος, doubtless written contractedly by Chester Συαραγος, v.g. See Batman, xvi. 88, from Isidore; l. 4, "wards" = acts of guard or guarding, fences; st. 2, l. 5, "kwepes" = disyllabic; st. 3, l. 1, "Turches" = turquois. Mentioned in Batman, but no virtues given it nor in Pliny. I gathered a handful myself in the ancient turquois mines of the Sinaitic peninsula.
- „ 116, st. 1, l. 3, "Bugle" = Bugill or Buffell, Latin, Bubalus, i.e., the buffalo; l. 4, "Onocentaure" — a mythical animal compounded of ass (ovos) and man, as the hippocentaur was of horse and man. Even Batman has his doubts of its existence; l. 5, "Dromidary," i.e., standing for itself and the 'camel'; but see st. 3; l. 6, "Bore" = boar, see p. 115, st. 1; ib. "Dragon" = mythical serpent; st. 2, l. 1, "strong neck'd" = strong-neck'd; l. 4, "Goatbucke" = he-goat? Batman speaks of the he-goat as 'goat-bucke' (B xvij, c. 89); but in his index gives 'of the goat bucke' c. 101, where he treats of the hircocervus or tragelephus, but never calls it goat-bucke, contraiwise in explaining tragelephus calls tragos a goat-bucke. From p. 119 (st. 1, l. 1) it is quite clear that Chester intended the he-goat; l. 5, "Camelopard" — a fabulous Ethiopian beast, not the animal now so named; l. 6, "Deare" = deer; st. 3, ll. 3-4 — a common and classical belief (e.g., Juvenal, xii, 3, 4) — he knowing himself to be hunted for them as being greatly esteemed in various diseases. It was similarly said of the 'hunted' elephant that he clashed and broke his tusks, knowing that was why he was hunted (Batman, xvij, 44); Richard Barnfield (Poems, p. 28, st. xliii — my edition for the Roxburgh Club), and Hump. Gifford (Posie (1580) — my edition) have the same myth; ll. 5-6, "Stellio, Camelion, Unicornie." Either Chester has borrowed from Batman (or Bartholomew Glantville from whom he translated) or both have taken from a common source. Batman mentions under 'camelion' the 'stellio, a lizard' said by some to be one with the 'camelion.' Philemon Holland's Pliny, calls it the star-lizard stellion, and Holyoke's Rider, gives 'stellio' a beast like a lizard having spots on his neck, like stars. "Unicornie," &c. Sir Thomas Browne, s.v., will interest and amuse with his quaint lore and as quaint credulity and incredulity (Works by Wilkin, 4 vols., 8vo., 1835.) The old Preachers abound in illustrations fetched from the 'unicorn' whereby to exalt our Lord; st. 4, "Beare." See Batman, B. xviii, c. 112, where he quotes Avicenna for this. The virtue of bear's grease dates from Batman's days (1582) at least.

- Page 117, Latin line — from Isidore; lib. xii, cap, ii, but 'Sic' for 'Hic,' and 'cum' for 'quem'; st. 1, "Bore" = boar; l. 2, "Tythes" = tusks — still in use for the tusks of boar and elephant, and in the nursery for infant's teeth — see also p. 118, st. 3, l. 1; l. 5, "Marioram and Organie" = marjoram and penny-royal — see Ellacombe, as before; st. 2, "Bugle" — see p. 116, st. 1, l. 3, and relative note; l. 6, "thy" — sic = they; st. 3, "Camell," st. 3-4. No one who has travelled on camel-back across a desert will refuse praise to the camel's long patience and liquid ever-onward-looking eye. Times over I have seen the camel go without water for more than the 'four days' here named. He has faults of temper and otherwise, and it is a kind of martyrdom to use him at all for one's self; yet with every deduction he is an admirable and extraordinary creature; st. 5, l. 1, "Dragon," &c. The mythical 'dragon' was supposed to love the elephant's blood (Batman); (p. 118); ll. 5-6 — the slayer is timely slain, says Batman.
- „ 118, st. 1, l. 1, "hunch-backt" — hunch-backed, or with protuberance; st. 2, "Dogge" — Baroness Coutts has raised a monument (combining a 'fountain') to a little Scotch terrier that broke its heart over its dead master, scraping its way down to the coffin-lid and there dying. It is one of the sights of Edinburgh; st. 3, l. 6, "fau'd his life" = his life sav'd; st. 4, l. 1, "Jcene" = skilled, knowing.
- 119, st. 1, l. 1, "Gote-bucke" = he-goat, as before; st. 2, l. 1, "quicke" = lively; l. 3, "incontinent" = instantly; l. 6, "by kind" = of his nature; l. 4, "Ligarius" — rather Ligurius. See Batman, as before, B xvi, 60 and B xviii, c. 69, and Pliny Lyncurium viii, 38. Cf. p. 111.
- „ 123, st. 4, l. 1, "Onocentaur." See relative note, p. 116, st. 1, l. 4 st. 5, l. 1, "Stellio." See ib., p. 116, st. 3, ll. 5-6.
- „ 121, st. 1, ll. 5-6 — the 'Ile' being Ireland, as before; read l. 6, with hyphen, 'fweete-smelling'; st. 2, l. 2, "moorish plot" = one of the bogs for which Ireland was and is celebrated, and in which still, spite of St. Patrick, frogs if not serpents are found. Be it noted this held only of "a little corner" (l. 1); l. 6, "poifonous ayre" = two disyllables; st. 3, l. 2, "Rinatrix." See page 123, st. 3; l. 3, ib., "Aphis." See page 122, st. 1.
- „ 122, st. 1, l. 3, "neare" = ne'er; st. 2, "This is," &c. Chester would later read his friend Shakespeare's great celebration of it; st. 3, "Lizard" = anything prettier or more amusing than the swift-darting lizards of the desert (of Sinai) can scarcely be imagined. Their agility is very remarkable. Closely examined their jewel-like colouring is exquisite. In the loneliness of some of the Wadys it was a kind of living companionship to have these interesting little creatures beside one. Some were very very large and hideous — as large as a good-sized kitten ; st. 4, l. 1, "Ant or Emote is a labouring thing." Sir John Ixubbock imagines that he has disproved the 'wisdom' of the 'ant' by his sets of experiments and by observations. A greater delusion I can scarcely conceive. Why, the very dis-regard of the 'ants' for the near roads provided and the humanly-con- trived plans for ingress and egress, and removal of difficulties, goes to confirm the little creature's quick 'wisdom.' If it could speak, it might retort on the great-eyed human monster stooping over and 'planning' for it, and say, 'I will take my own way— I will manage for myself— I don't know what of evil may be under all these nice arrangements.' Personally I have made scores of observations on the 'ant' both at home and in foreign countries, especially in the East ; and all confirm its 'wisdom' — as in the text ; l. 2, "publike weale," i.e., commonweath ; st. 5, l. 5 (p. 123) "ciuill"=living a common ordered and subordinate life, like ants and men.

Page 123, st. 4, l. 5, "cald of some the flattering worme" Batman (B xviii, c. 98) says, "This maner scorpion commeth of Scorte that is sweet, and of pogo, is, that is to feine ; for before [stinging] he feineth pleafauce."

,, 124, st. 2, l. 4, "Oliues"=ol-i-ues—a trisyllable to rhyme with 'trees'— note 'some' verb singular (ll. 2-4), and in l. 7 with verb plural ; st. 4, l. 1, "Caddes"=cadesse, i.e., jackdaw (Wright, s.v.)— from its place among birds cannot be the caddes, or caddis, or cadworme (Ash, Kersey, and Bailey) ; st. 5, l. 3, put hyphen thus, "big-neck'd" ; l. 5 (p. 125) "Griffon"= mythical bird ; l. 6, "Puttocke"=greale, i.e., kite.

125, st. 1, l. 4, "Hercin"—"Hircania is a province in Asia . . . it is sharpe of woodes . . . There breedeth birdes that are called Hircanie ; their feathers shine by night, and such birdes are founde in Germany, as Isidore sayeth" (Batman, B xv, c. 74). I presume = the Hercinian forest, Germany ; ib., put hyphen, "swift-winged" ; l. 5, "Caladrius." See next stanza— Batman (B xii, c. 22) speaks of Kaladrius in the same terms, and says it "hath no parte of blacknesse." If the man is to die he turns his face from him. His only authority is "as the Philosopher faith" ; st. 2, l. 2, "prosperitie"—qu. proprietie or propensitie? line is unscannable ; st. 3, "Crane"—curious old-fashioned lore, found everywhere.

,, 126, st. 1, l. 1, "The Winters enuious blaß she neuer tasteth." Michael Bruce in that Ode to the Cuckoo, which John Logar so treacherously sought to rob him of, has very daintily put this :—

" Sweet bird ! thy bow'r is ever green,
Thy sky is ever clear ;

Thou hast no sorrow in thy song,
No winter in thy year."

(my edition, p. 124, 1865).

- l. 4, "for to"—so also st. 5, l. 2—rare in Shakespeare.
Page 126, st. 2, l. 3, "Croffe" = ill-fate or luck; st. 4, l. 4, "runne" = ranne, r.g.
,, 127, st. 1, l. 1, "Griffon"—fabulous bird, as before; st. 2, l. 2, "Hircinie"—see on p. 125, st. 1, l. 4.
,, 128, st. 1, l. 1, "Memnodides"—the original's misprint for 'Memnonides'; st. 2, l. 3, "Hunts-up." Mr. J. Payne Collier has printed a curious song, from which it appears that 'hunts vp' was known as early as 28 Henry VIII. Cf. Barnfield in his "Affectionate Shepheard":

"And euery Morne by dawning of the day,
When Phabus riseth with a blushing face,
Siluanus Chappel-Clarks shall chaunt a Lay,
And play thee hunts-up in thy resting place."

(My edition of his complete Poems for the Roxburghe Club, p. 12, st. xix.)

- l. 3, "doth delight her," i.e., his mate—for it is the male which alone sings. This Chester knew and so likens the male-bird to a 'Bridegroom' (l. 5); ll. 5-6—unskilful verse; but the meaning is that Greeks and Romans trained the 'nightingale'; st. 4, l. 2, "Stefichorus" = the Greek poet of Himera in Sicily. For the fable see Christod. Ecphr. ap. Jacobs, Anth. Græc. i, p. 42; Pliny, H. N., x, 29; ll. 5-6, the well-known legend; st. 5, l. 1, "daflard Owle"—much too strong a word for this timid but not at all 'cowardly' bird.
,, 129. Latin couplet—from Ovid, Met. v, 549, 550. l. 7, "stuggifit"—because he 'sleeps' all day, possibly; st. 2, l. 1, "ill bedooming" = ill-bedoaming, i.e., adjudging or pre-judging ill or evil; Cf. 3 Henry VI, v, 6, "cried, aboding luckless time"; st. 3, l. 5, "They haue bene knowne to giue great Emperors wine"—some now forgotten anecdote of trained parrots; st. 4, ll. 5-6. The old Puritans are never weary of pointing 'a moral' from the 'base blacke Feete' of the peacock, swan, &c., &c., in contrast with their plumage; and so too the elder Poets; st. 5 (p. 130), l. 4, "In Indie spies a Peacocks," &c., one of the many myths about this bird.
,, 130, st. 1, "The Pellican"—this myth is met with in all the Fathers, &c. The pressure of the huge bill on its crop or pouch wherein is store of food, doubtless originated it. This mention of the 'Pellican' calls for special note of the curious and remarkable turn given to the fable, in that the 'Turtle dove' dies first, and then the Phoenix. Also, be it observed, that the 'Turtle dove' — "cheerfully did die," &c., while the Phoenix "with a pale heavy countenance grieved for to see him first possesse the place." Only as of Essex and Elizabeth is this appropriate or explicable. I take the opportunity here to supplement preceding notes on the same lines as all this. 'Applied' (p. 9) appears to mean that 'The Complaint of Rosalin' is put into the mouth of Dame Nature; for Dame Nature's Complaint is a complaint in behalf of Rosalin or the Phoenix, or in other words Rosalin's own 'Complaint.' Again, at p. 21, the explanation is that like Raleigh he had spoken before of Elizabeth as 'the silver-coloured dove' as he calls her in st. 4 (and in 5, 6, 7). But as he is now speaking of her as the 'Phoenix' in his 'Love's Martyr,' he applies it (really to the same person) to her as to the 'Phoenix'. This is surely reduplicated proof that the 'silver-coloured Dove' (= sacred, holy) and the 'Phoenix' are one, and that both are Elizabeth. Note finally here, that in the 'Prayer' she is 'the' and 'thy' silver-coloured dove, but in the title 'a,' because he would avoid the very obvious absurdity that she was both the silver-coloured dove and the phoenix. She could be the 'Phoenix' and 'a' silver-coloured dove, i.e., the 'Phoenix' with the properties of such a dove, though not the bird the dove itself; st. 2, "vnfatiate Sparrow." Dean Donne has quaintly celebrated the 'vnfatiate' amorosness of this bird in his Metempsychosis; l. 4, "animaduertion" = perception. In this sense Glanville also uses it, and, spite of the Dictionary-makers, it is correct; ll. 5-6, "A flight of Sparrowes,"—the old myth and superstition; st. 3, l. 1, read rather, 'The artificiall-nest-composing'; l. 6, "Ilis"—caught doubtless from previous line, should be 'He'; ib., "Calcedonies"—is this a mistake of a gem for a flower ('herb')? st. 4, l. 1, "Cecinna" = Cæcina; ib., "Volateran" = Cæcina of Volaterræ—Etruscan remains still extant preserve this once great family-name. Qu.—Has Chester confounded Cæcina and L. Cinna? l. 3, "Sent letters," &c. Carrier-pigeons have been long so used and still are (e.g., in the recent Germano-Franco war), but it is doubtful if the 'swallow' ever has been similarly trained).

Page 131, st. 1, l. 1, "sweete recording" = sweete-recording, i.e., sweet-singing. Cf. Two Gent. of Ver., act v, sc. 3. One is utterly at a loss to account for the everywhere-found notion of the swan's 'singing,' especially on the approach of death. As for the 'footed verse,' l. 3, it is of course mere credulity. Latin couplet—from Isidore, Hisp. Episcop. Origines, lib. xii, cap. vii, in Gothofredi Auctores Linguae Latinae 1622, who quotes it from an old

Poet Æmilius. Chester inadvertently prints 'Hoc' for 'Hanc' and 'undis' for 'undas.' st. 2, l. 5, "mouet" = moult; l. 6, put hyphen, "hart-pining"; st. 3, l. 1, "the carefull [- full-of-care] bird the Turtle Dove," be it noted, is designated by 'Phoenix' in preceding stanza "drooping soule," and again in st. 4, l. 5; ll. 3-4, "And thus he wanders seeking of his loue." This goes right to the mark for Essex.

Page 132, st. 1, l. 1, "looks me in the face." Another touch in Elizabeth for Essex; l. 4, "gate" = gait; l. 4, "he eyes vs more and more" — as in l. 1; l. 5, "O shall I welcome him." The oft-put question of the woman against the queen and of the queen against the woman in Essex's case. The context has no sense unless you bring to it the story of Elizabeth's love-passion — the passion, if not the love in its deepest and tenderest sense — for Essex, from her first sight of him in his young bloom onward; st. 3, l. 4, "halfe pin'd" = halfe-pin'd; st. 4 — The placing of 'Turtle' in the margin seems at first a mistake; but the 'Turtle' is addressing itself (i.e., himself) in gazing on the 'eye-dazling Sunne' of the 'Phoenix's' 'excelling beauty.' This was the mode, to the last, of speaking of and to Elizabeth. See our Introduction for quotation from Coke. With all her brain-force, Elizabeth had not courage to refuse the idle flattery of her 'beauty,' or to recognise that she really was growing old and haggard. I know not that the following very striking bit in Nichols Progresses of Queen Elizabeth, from an Harleian MS. (contemporary) 6207, has been noticed — "Afterward, in the melancholy of her sickness, she desired to see a true looking glass, which in twenty years she had not seen, but of such a one as was made of purpose to deceive her sight: which glasse being brought her, she fell presently into exclayming against [those] which had so much commended her; and took it so offensively, that some which before had flattered her, dourst not come into her sight" (vol ii, pp. 25-30 — end of the volume). Surely anything more tragical than the italicized words is inconceivable; l. 5, "variety" = rarity. Cf. former note on this; l. 6, "For wilt," &c., the bird is forgotten and the queen-woman remembered.

„ 133, st. 1, l. 1, "Tur." seems wrongly placed here, being intended for the left margin in the words 'Haile map of forrow' (see p. 124, st. 1, ll. 5-6); whilst 'Phoenix' in the right margin begins 'Welcome,' &c. st. 2, l. 4, "presumptions soule offence." Essex, on his departure for Portugal and elsewhere later, was again and again brought to his knees for his 'presumption' and kindred impulsive faults, as facts and letters superabundantly prove. See Devereux' Lives, &c. Meanwhile it is all-important to note that the 'wooing' is dated by circumstances in Essex's early time — not later when he had married and when Elizabeth was old; st. 3, l. 1, "Turtle" = mate; l. 2, "her want" = her loss; l. 3, "the foule that's fled," &c. How natural all this was in the mouth of Essex on the death of his noble young brother who fell so miserably at Rouen. See Devereux, as before. st. 4, l. 3, "for to," as before, common contemporaneously, rare in Shakespeare: see p. 132, l. 4: p. 133, l. 12; st. 4, l. 4, "aduance" = lift up 'our fiery altar.' So Shakespeare, "the fringed curtains of thine eye advance" (Tempest, act i, sc. 2); l. 6, "Solamen," &c. The origin of this has long been sought for in vain. It is in most collections of Common-places; and was enquired about in Notes and Queries, iv, x, but not traced back to its source; st. 5, Elizabeth actually thus comforted Essex for his brother when he 'came over' at the queen's imperious summons. See Devereux, as before.

- Page 134, st. 2, punctuate l. 4 with semi-colon or period after 'labour,' and again, period after 'paine'; but except in misleading cases I shall not note the singular punctuation of the original. My part is to reproduce it. St. 3, punctuate period or semi-colon after 'leave' (l. 1); l. 6, "fond" = foolish, as frequenter.
- „ 135, st. 1, l. 4, "emperizing" — verb-form, as before; st. 3, l. 1, "shalt not be no more" — a double negative for emphasis; st. 3, Elizabeth's autograph letters fully warrant more than this; st. 4, l. 2, "thy seruant" — Essex's constant asseveration in his letters to Elizabeth; st. 5, Historically, it is a common-place that Elizabeth exercised a mother's watchfulness over Essex.
- „ 136, st. 1, l. 4, "spright incarnate" = Impurity (as in preceding stanza); l. 5, "whight" = white; st. 2, l. 6, put hyphen, 'earth-parching.' st. 3, l. 1, "doome" = sentence or judgment; l. 5, 'licorice' — the sugar-cane perchance meant; l. 6, "Sweete Iuniper" — not the happiest adjective applied to 'Juniper'; ib., 'shaw' = shew; st. 4, l. 3, "nominate" = name, as before; l. 4, "wot" = wit or know.
- „ 137, st. 3, l. 4, "linely" = living; st. 4, l. 4, "secretly" — should be 'secretly.'
- „ 138, st. 4, l. 2, "Dido mones" — see 'To the Reader.' This reminds me to note on l. 4 of 'To the Reader' that Lucan was probably in Chester's mind on 'Caesars victories.'
- „ 139, st. 1, l. 4, put hyphen, "faire-fac'd"; st. 3, l. 6, "true story." On all this symbolism veiling a real martyrdom, and so fulfilling the title, Love's Martyr — see our Introduction. Pellican: l. 5, "He" — note a man throughout.
- „ 140, l. 6 (from bottom), put hyphen, "loue-wandering."

- Page 141, l. 7, "fond" = foolish; ll. 15-16, &c., i.e., suggesting how Elizabeth sacrificed her 'true desire' to State-craft or expediency.
Conclusion. l. 1, put hyphen, "true-meaning"; l. 9, "paine" = painstaking.
- .. 142, Cantos Alphabet-wife, &c., l. 2, the second 'will' no doubt a printer's mistake; l. 4, put comma after 'favour'; l. 6, put hyphen, "lame-leg'd"; ll. 9-18. See Introduction on these suggestive lines. James I. is evidently intended. He was the friend of all Essex's friends.
- * * * In the 'Cantos Alphabet-wife' that follow, we must not look for ordinary construction or much sense. The self-imposed fetters hinder both.
- .. 143, st. 1, l. 7, "darcs not giue to any." There lay the secret. It recurs and recurs. In l. 6, 'Blotted by things vnfeene' = secretly spoken of by some of no fame. Most clearly Elizabeth here again. St. 2, l. 1, "Chastitiffe" = virginity; ib., "the bed of Glorie" = thoughts of the 'Queen' marrying a subject; st. 4, l. 1, "Enuie is baniflit." See Introduction on the 'Enuie' that beset Essex as recognized by other poets as well as Chester; l. 4, "things" = thing is.
- .. 144, st. 1, l. 3 — verb singular to plural nominative; l. 7, "Fetch from the ancient records of a Queene." Query — marrying a subject? St. 2, l. 5, "map of beauty" — Cf. p. 77, st. 4, l. 2, and relative note; st. 4, reflection of Elizabeth's would and would not.
- .. 145, st. 1, l. 3, read 'greene-spred'; l. 5, "whene" = whence; l. 7, "dorter" = dortour, i.e., sleeping-place — here bed-room — audacious enough certes; but Essex knew to whom he was speaking, and Chester knew both. St. 2, l. 1, "Aduotrix" = advocate (feminine); st. 3, l. 1, "nice Chastity" = virginity, as before; l. 5, "time is ouer spent" — a perilous reminder to Elizabeth; l. 6, "a kind of feare" — admirable selection of words, revealing yet concealing; st. 4, l. 1, put hyphen, "fresh-bloom'd"; l. 2, "Rose" — fitting symbol of England's Queen ('Rosalin') in this faint anticipation of Herrick's delicious 'Gather the rosebuds while ye may.'
- .. 146, st. 1, l. 7, read, 'all-disgrace'; st. 3, l. 3, "Quit" = requite or quite; st. 4, l. 2, "Ract" = racked or rakt.
- .. 147, st. 2, l. 2, "womanifft" — not a mere 'Phoenix' bird; l. 7, put hyphen, "new-fram'd"; st. 4, l. 4 (p. 148), "vale" = veil.
- .. 148, st. 1, l. 1, "Xantha" = Xanthe, one of the daughters of Oceanus; l. 3, 'more-milder' — double comparative; l. 5, "difcufe" = disturb, make ill-at-ease; st. 2, l. 4, "selfe-will" — again the mark is hit. Read with hyphens, 'selfe-will-anguish.'

Cantos Verbally written.

* * The headings of these stanzas seem to be posies out of rings. Cf. As You Like It, act iii, sc. 2. Be it kept in mind that Chester is not speaking in his own person, but is interpreting the 'truth of love' between Elizabeth and Essex.

- Page 149. 1. 1. 4, "Dies"— used as causal; 1. 6, "woe" = woo; 2. 1. 5, punctuate ' ; ' for comma; 3. 1. 3, "containing" = contained.
- „ 150. 4. st. 2, l. 2, put hyphen, "true-fworne"; 1. 6, "Not in thy flowring youth"—repeat 'do not smother' (in thought), and read [do] Not in thy flowring youth [smother]—else you turn a compliment into a jeer; 5. 1. 1 (motto) 'u,' misprint for 'u'; 1. 8, "Knowne"—to be read as 'knownen.'
- „ 151. 5. 1. 4, "fulfill" = fill full r.g.; 6. motto, "idolatrize"—verb-form, frequent in Chester; 1. 3, put hyphen, "Heart-comfortable"—qu. comfortable? 1. 7, "surphet" = surfeit; 7. st. 2, l. 3, "rarity" = rarity, as before.
- „ 152. 8. 1. 1, "What" = whatever, and put hyphen, "thunder-stormes"; 1. 4, "inexorable" = unchangeable; 1. 6, 'dayes,' disyllabic unless 'the' have been omitted, at [the] or [at] midnight; 9. 1. 6, put hyphen, "true-fworne," as before; st. 2, l. 5, "Of holy loue, Loue's Temple to asfire" = the Church and marriage therein; st. 3, l. 4, delete comma after 'desire.'
- „ 153. Motto. This third repetition of this couplet shews skilful flattery of the kind that most pleased Elizabeth; 11. 2, punctuate ' ; ' after will; 1. 7, "denayes" = denials.
- „ 154. Motto, 1. 2, "empiring" = over-queently, stately—see st. 2, l. 3; 1. 4, read 'happie-bleft'; 1. 9—metre faulty—some word left out.
- „ 155. 14. 1. 2, "disgrafue" = disgracing; 1. 4, "our"—misprint for 'or'; 15. 1. 1, "For" = through; 1. 5, punctuate ' ; ' after 'pride.'
- „ 156. 18. 1. 4, put hyphen, "night-waking"; 1. 5, read "Hart-fore"; 19. 1. 1, "O tongue," &c., viz., by talking of her 'bright brow wrinkled with disdaine'—the wrinkles, not the 'disdaine,' being the ground of offence; 1. 8—qu. 'Dear [I give] that to thee [to whom] I offered wrong.'
- „ 157. 21. 1. 6, "the" = thee; 22. 1. 3, "aduotrix"—see p. 145, st. 2, l. 1; 23. ll. 5-6—certainly at most a comma for ' ; ' in 1. 5, or, 'hower I may,' &c.
- „ 158. 25. 1. 2, "selfe-will" = self-will or foolishnesse sprung of self-will—a constant word between Elizabeth and Essex in their Letters; 26. 1. 3, put hyphen, "harueft-labores"; 1. 4, put ' : ' after 'feene,' and delete comma in next line; 1. 6, "Should I be welcome ere thy beantie fade"—another perilous reminder, but just the bold kind of speech fitting from Essex to Elizabeth—as witness their letters. See Devereux, as before.

- Page 159. 27. Motto, and l. 8, "Nar"= near; 28. l. 5, "Cause"= [Thou are] cause, and ';' for comma and comma after 'best,' l. 6; 29. st. 2, l. 1, "Affections"—qu. 'Affection'—cf. l. 2, 'her'; l. 3, "foule bondage"= slavery of 'selfe-will.'
- „ 160. 29. l. 1 — put (.) after 'courtesie'—required by change of person in next line ('Thou'); 31. l. 6, put hyphen, "dwelling-place."
- „ 161. 32. l. 6, "Niobes cup"= of tears; l. 7, "My dutie yet remembred"—Essex's ever-recurring phrase in letters to Elizabeth; 34. This should have been numbered '33' in order, it will be noticed. From this the numbering ceases without explanation. l. 3, "Not one"= No one; l. 4, punctuate ';' after cruelty; Thoughts, &c., l. 2, "faining"= fanning—but with a double sense; l. 3 (p. 162), "foud"= foolish, as before; l. 4, "further"= cast further or off.
- „ 162, st. 1, l. 4, "Selfe-will"—the thing in Elizabeth that needed overcoming; ll. 6-7 suggestive of Essex's consciousness of his royal Mistress's favour (to say the least); l. 6, "tels"—qu. 'tel'? st. 3—the very things wherein Elizabeth was pre-eminently praised, and the very strain followed by all who essayed to recount her virtues and greatness.
- „ 163, l. 1, "cureless smart"—so Shakespeare, 'cureless ruin' (Merchant of Venice, act iv, sc. 1); st. 1—a reflection again of Elizabeth's capricious favour and as capricious angers and withdrawals; st. 2, l. 3, "nominate"= name, as before, qu.—punctuate ';;' st. 3, l. 2, put hyphen, "sharp-conceited"; ib., "ner"= e'er—double negative otherwise; l. 4, "ignoble"—courage of the author: specially note "imperiall crowne"—again no sense unless to Elizabeth or of Elizabeth; st. 4, Motto. Essex's letters to Elizabeth are full of the word and thing 'friendship.' See Devereux, as before. l. 2, "Ebone"= ebony or black?
- „ 164, l. 2, "regret"= salute; st. 3, l. 5, "I"= aye; l. 6, read "true-approvd."
- „ 165, st. 1, l. 1, "Scene in all learned arts is my beloved"—true as simple matter-of-fact of Elizabeth, who was of rare and unquestionable accomplishments as well as of natural intellectual capacity after the type of her prodigious father, 'King Hal.' 'Scene' = skilled, as in Taming of the Shrew, "It's a schoolmaster well scen in music" (act i, sc. ii); l. 4, "Eye for eye"—the first 'Eye' so spelt on account of the marginal 'eie,' is really the old 'I'= yea, i.e., she not only moves the stony savage, but her eye indeed tempts chastity itself; ll. 5-6—this is a very frequent contemporary tribute to Elizabeth. I have been surprized at the universality of belief in her poetical gifts: and I have a suspicion that much of her verse has perished; st. 2, l. 1, "ſæke"—used as sometimes in that age without an objective

= try to find and does not—query semicolon (;) after 'seeke' and colon (:) after 'thee'; st. 3, l. 4, "amazing"= confused wonderment, as elsewhere; ib., punctuate comma (,) after 'not' and nothing after 'amazing,' or at most a comma (,); l. 5, "To"—infinitive form used as in that age. We should write 'Do or [continue] to'; st. 4, motto—reflection of Essex's suspense and mingled hope and despair, expectation and weariness, as expressed in his poems and letters to Elizabeth; ll. 5-6—In this rather oddly-constructed sentence, the subject to 'In all things gracious' is his unnamed Mistress, i.e., Elizabeth. For throughout these 'Cantoës,' as in Love's Martyr, Chester is interpreting his conception—based on close personal knowledge—of the 'feeling' between Elizabeth and Essex. All the known facts make it simply impossible that he could have been speaking for himself. Besides, in "The author's request to the Phoenix" he avows his purpose. There his pleading is—

"Accept MY home-writ praifes of THY LOUE
And kind acceptance of THY TURTLE-DOUE (p. 5).

- l. 5, "gracious"—he means [thou art] gracious.
- Page 166, st. 1, l. 2, "fairest faire"—not objective after 'maintained,' but = O fairest faire; l. 5, "Turtle-Doue"= mate of himself the Turtle Doue. See note on st. 1, ll. 5-6, supra; st. 2, l. 1, "Great Mistress"—clearly applicable (and in those times most especially) to Elizabeth, and to no subject; st. 3, l. 4, "Loue"—being emphatic is counted as one foot, 'Loue | that eaf | eth minds | opprest | with neede |'; l. 6 = only to be relieved by thee that [always] yeeld'st relief. Again words only at that time to be applied to Elizabeth; st. 4, l. 5, "yea so they say"—is supposed to be her answer, and therefore her "owne confession"; st. 5, l. 2, "for to"—as before. See also p. 168, st. 4, l. 2; l. 4 (p. 167)—Of whom in the Court of Elizabeth could this be said but of Elizabeth? ll. 5-6—not intelligible to me; but qu.—faith-denying?
- „ 167, st. 1, l. 4, "thee most admirable"= O most admirable [one]; st. 2, l. 3, "Me sometimes," &c. —this line is made rather mysterious by the necessity of finding a rhyme to "afraid"= yet sometimes terrifying me that I am nevertheless given up to him, 'unless,' &c.; st. 3, l. 1, "Remorce triumphantly"= (as frequently at that time) pitifulness, albeit here tacitly implying penitence for past delays and cruelty. So in Shakespeare and in Parry, quoted in our Introduction. st. 4, l. 4 (p. 168, l. 1), "not named"= not [to be] named, unnameable.
- „ 168, st. 2, l. 1, "Thine euer enrenou'd and still kept word"—most noticeable as between Elizabeth and Essex. It seems to me more than ordinarily remarkable that Chester does throughout with such triumphant audacity give expression to the popular belief of Elizabeth's real sentiment toward Essex. The way in which he works into his pleadings personal traits seems to me declarative of dramatic ability of no mean type. I have no idea that Elizabeth herself ever made revelation of her 'love' for Essex to Chester. One can only guess whether Essex exchanged confidence with him. But certainly from first to last our Poet shows perfect skill in his giving shape and colouring to what was in the air concerning the 'Phoenix' and her 'Turtle-dove.' These 'Can-toes,' with Posies for ground-work that perchance were known in society as circulating in the Court, equally with Love's Martyr, bring Chester before us as consecrating all his gifts and knowledge and sympathy to celebrating this story, 'Shadowing the truth of Love' between Elizabeth and Essex when the latter burst upon her in her still susceptible and passionate mid-age in all the brilliance and fascination of his young prime. I would also here notice what follows in the title-page (of 1601) "in the constant fate of the Phoenix and Turtle," i.e., 'fate to be constant' to each other. Chester evidently believed that the 'love' awakened in Elizabeth for Essex lived on uneradicated even by his marriage and her advancing age. Save Sidney's and Stella's 'love' so tragically re-discovered when it was 'too late,' I know nothing more truly a 'Love martyrdom' than that of Elizabeth and Essex. The great Queen's closing melancholy and bursts of weeping with the name of Essex on her lips, and slow-drawn-out dying, reveal Chester's prescience of insight.

- Page 169, st. 1, l. 1, "from"—qu.—error for 'for.' The latter yields sense, the former scarcely; l. 6, "By thy faire," &c.—again only applicable to Elizabeth in her Court. See Churchyard's Poems given in our Introduction; motto, l. 3, "I"=aye; st. 2, l. 3, "he," as in the margin and as required by the sense should be "she."
- „ 170, st. 2, l. 6, "mountaine top of will affpires"=ambition. In the Song (in italics) it is to be noted that the 2nd and 4th lines of each stanza (the alternate lines) are answers to the question or remark in 1st and 3rd. In st. 1, l. 2, the first 'love' should be 'Lone' and have comma (,) after it.
- „ 171, st. 2, l. 4, "I"=aye; st. 3, l. 4, "awais"=alwaies; st. 4, l. 1, read 'foules Life'=his Mistress; l. 2, delete comma (,) after "villaine"; st. 4, l. 8 (p. 172, l. 2), "deare" delete comma (.)—it is—'deare' shall, or 'deare' is the nominative to 'shall.'
- „ 172, st. 1, l. 4, read 'wind-oppressing.' I may as well note here that

- there are so many compounded words in Chester not marked by hyphen, that I could only call attention to the more important; the reader will fill in or not at his discretion; st. 2, l. 8, "by my"—qu.—"by thy"—true Bird as I = true Bird as I [am]—see ll. 1-3, for these interpretations; st. 3, l. 1, "Till that leane flessles cripple, pale-jae'd Death"—so in Old Fortunatus "There's a lean fellow beats all conquerors."
- Page 173, l. 3, read 'spring[s], i.e., whence springs all these my 'passions'; punctuate in l. 6; after 'soune'; "Meist deuine," &c., l. 6, "I"= aye; l. 8, put hyphen, "neuer-causing." The want, &c., l. 2, "want"—verb—its nominative 'day and night.'
- „ 174, st. 3, l. 1, "my affection" = [by the object of] my affection; st. 3, l. 2, punctuate ' ; ' after 'disgrace.'
- „ 175, st. 2, l. 1, "Where two harts," &c.—a final impassioned appeal to Elizabeth to let 'Loue' be 'Souveraigne'—quite in accord with the style she was addressed to the end, as though she never could be other than 'young,' and with possibilities or impossibilities of result at her command; l. 5, "dignified" = given dignity.
- „ 177, Title-page—The Latin motto is from Horace, Od. iv, 8, 28. In the original is a rude wood-cut of an anchor.
- „ 179, l. 6, "Bromius"—one of the varying names of Bacchus; l. 9, "Ingles his cheek" = treats his cheek as one does one's ingle or delight, or loved youth playfully pinches or strokes it; l. 12, "friend" = our present 'subtend'; l. 14, "honorable friend," viz., Sir John Salisburie, as on title-page; l. 15, "illustrate"—used as = illustrious or giving lustre, and by Ben Jonson on p. 182, last st. but one; l. 19, "profuse" = pour forth. In olden days each did not as now drink the health from his own glass, but a large bowl being filled, it was passed to each successively, thus going the 'round.' (l. 21)
- „ 180, Heading—Sir John Salisburie. See our Introduction on this 'worthily honor'd Knight'; l. 4, "exhaust" = drawn out; l. 14, "Responsible" = answering. These 'Vatum Chorus' pieces are in good sooth poor enough. They have touches like Chapman at his worst.
- „ 181, l. 5, "But one sick Phoebe"—an unmistakeable allusion to Elizabeth as 'sick'—such indeed as it was impossible to apply to any other at the time; ibid., "fever-shaking Light." "The influence of the moon on disease was so prevalent an opinion that this may have meant = 'causing fever-shaking'; but it might also refer to the shaking glimmering light of the moon likened to the shivering in a fever. Possibly both meanings were intended to be understood by the reader." So Dr. Brinsley Nicholson to me; but qu.—is not the latter half of the line an ep-exegesis of the former, i.e., 'one sicke Phabe' = 'Light fever-shaking' by its sickness the nation? Men spoke even recently of England as in a 'feverish state of excitement and suspense' during the illness of the Prince of Wales. Note likewise that Shakespeare in his 'Phoenix and Turtle' introduces the 'fever' — p. 182, st. 2, 'Angour of the fevers end.' Notice also that the 'vrne' of "The Burning" (l. 7) reappears in 'Threnos,' st. 3, l. 1, 'To this vrne'—see on ll. 15-16; l. 6, "the world one Phoenix"—once more who would have then dared to sing of any save Elizabeth as the 'one Phoenix' of 'the world'? ll. 15-16, —these are purposely enigmatical—the words, "Her rare-dead ashes, fill a rare-line vrne," evidently point at the fact that the Phoenix or Elizabeth was really living, although as 'Love's Martyr,' dead. The last line is obscure; l. 17, "Ignoto."—This was Raleigh's signature; but it is also contemporaneously found attached to pieces certainly not his. Everything forbids our regarding these Lines as by him.

Page 182, st. 1, l. 1, "bird of lovedest lay"—Because the 'Phoenix' is the bird associated with the 'Turtle' in Love's Martyr, and throughout, it has been assumed, by apparently all the commentators on Shakespeare, that it is intended here. Surely this is a gross mistake, inasmuch as (1) It is the 'Phoenix's' death ('shadowing' Elizabeth) that the poem celebrates; and it were absurd to imagine it could be called on to 'sing' its own death. See 'Threnos' and st. 6 of this poem. (2) Nowhere—even supposing the 'Phoenix' possible—is this legendary bird represented as gifted with 'song.' I think it was left intentionally indefinite. I would suggest the 'Nightingale'; others may think of another. l. 2, "On the sole Arabian tree." Malone has excellently adduced a parallel passage in The Tempest:

" Now I will believe

That there are unicorns; that in Arabia

There is one tree, the phoenix' throne: one phoenix

At this hour reigning there" (act iii, sc. 3, p. 23).

He remarks: "This singular coincidence, likewise, serves to authenticate the present poem" (Variorum Shakespeare, vol. xx, p. 421, edition 1821). By the 'sole Arabian tree' the Palm is meant. In Greek phoinix, and meaning both phoenix and palm-tree (Dr. Cobham Brewer's Dictionary, s.v.) l. 3, "trumpet." Steevens addresses King John—

" Be thou the trumpet of our wrath

And sullen presage of your own decay" (i, 1).

Variorum Shakespeare, as before; l. 4, "chaste wings obey." I have, myself, often watched the liting and tremulous motion of the 'singing' Nightingale's wings, and chaste was the exquisitely chosen word to describe the nightingale, in reminiscence of the classical story; st. 2. l. 1, "shrinking harbinger" = shriek or scritch-owl; l. 2, "precurrer" = fore-runner — scarcely 'procurer.' Cf. Midsummer Night's Dream:

" Now the wasted brands do glow,
While the scritch-owl, scritch-ing loud;
Puts the wretch that lies in woe,
In remembrance of a shroud " (act v, sc. 2).

Steevens, as before; l. 3, "Augour" = augur, fore-teller; ib., "fever's end" = death (by fever); l. 4, "To this troupe come thou not nere." Steevens, as before, recalls another bit in Midsummer Night's Dream — "Ye spotted snakes, &c. . . come not near our fairy queen." St. 3, l. 3 — punctuate "feather'd King" — "So in Gray's Ode on the Progresses of Poetry :

— "thy magick lulls the feather'd King
With ruffled plumes and flagging wing"
(Steevens, as before).

St. 4, l. 2, "defunctive Musicke can" — "That understands funereal musick. To can, in Saxon, signifies to know" (Malone^c as before). But query — Is it here used from the Latin 'cano'? (Dr. Brinsley Nicholson, to me.) St. 5, punctuate and read —

" And thou treble-dated Crow, —
That thy fable gender mak'ft
With the breath thou giu'ft and tak'ft;
Mong'ft our mourners shalt thou goe."

Steevens, as before, on l. 1, 'treble dated Crow' aptly quotes Lucretius [5, 1053]:

— "cornicum ut secla vetusta.
Ter tres ætates humanas garrula vincit Cornix."

l. 2, "that thy fable gender mak'ft," &c. It is a 'Vulgar Error' still, that the 'Crow' can change its 'gender' at will. My friend Mr. E. W. Gosse puts it — 'thou Crow that makest [change in] thy sable gender, with the mere exhalation and inhalation of thy breath' (letter to me). l. 3, "With the breath," &c. — query, Is there a sub-reference to the (mythical) belief that the crow re-clothes its aged parents with feathers and feeds them? As being 'sable' it is well fitted to be a 'mourner.' It is so introduced in our child-hood favorite of the 'Death and Burial of Cock Robin.' Cf. Batman upon Barth., B 12, C 9.

Sir Thomas Browne has a note on 'White Crows' (=the aged). St. 6, This, as supra, makes it impossible that the 'bird of lowdest lay' could be the 'phoenix'; st. 7, ll. 1-2. Query—punctuate comma (,) after 'loued,' and delete comma (,) after 'twaine'? It is to be remembered that the compositor of Love's Martyr was especially fond of a comma at the end of a verse line. We have an exactly similar instance in p. 183, st. 1, as infra.

Page 183, st. 1, l. 1, punctuate comma for (;) ; l. 2, punctuate comma after 'Distance' and delete it after 'feene,' as supra; l. 4, "But in them it were a wonder"= Except—another Elizabeth sign; for only of the 'Queene' as placing no 'distance and no space' betwixt herself and 'this Turtle,' could it have been said 'it were a wonder'; ib., punctuate comma after 'them'; st. 2, l. 2, "his right," &c.—It is merely a variant mode of expressing seeing love-babies (or one's self imaged) in the other's eyes. This gives the true sense to the 'mine' of l. 4 ; st. 3, l. 1, "Property was thus appall'd," &c.= great proprietors, or the nobility. I imagine there is an enigmatical hitting at the jealousy of Essex among the nobility of England, in the possibility of marriage between him and Elizabeth. Malone, in loco, muddles the matter (meo iudicio) ; l. 2—qu.—delete comma after 'together,' and put comma after 'themselues'—making the whole from 'saw' to 'themselues' one clause ; l. 4, "simple," &c.= were so well compounded into a simple, i.e., into one. Punctuate comma for period ; st. 5—as in Love's Martyr, I detect here, and throughout, Shakespeare's feeling, that Elizabeth's and Essex's relations meant infinitely more than 'friendship'; st. 6, l. 1, "Wherupon," &c. 'This funeral song.' So in Kendall's poems, 1577 :

" Of verses, threnes and epitaphs,
Full fraught with tears of teene."

A book entitled David's Threnes, by J. Heywood, was published in 1620. Two years afterwards, it was reprinted under the title of David's Tears; the former title probably was discarded as obsolete. For this information I am indebted to Dr. Farmer (Malone, as before).

,, 184—Threnes—st. 2, l. 3, "ryfl." Punctuate with comma ; st. 3, l. 1, punctuate ; or : for comma.

On the significance of these Poems by Shakespeare, in relation to Elizabeth and Essex, see our Introduction.

,, 185, l. 9, "Dians tyre"= Dian's tyre ; l. 3 (from bottom)—read 'all' [,] and delete comma after 'thoughts' in next line. Perhaps comma should also be deleted after 'Woman' in l. 3 (from bottom).

☞ Note, that though in the heading it is out of the 'ashes' of both, the 'wondrous creature' arises, in the poem (l. 17) he only speaks of what arises from 'the Turtle's ashes'—all this natural, for Essex really was dead, but the 'Phoenix,' or Elizabeth, only allegorically so. And so is it throughout, the real peeps through the 'allegorical,' and the 'allegorical' loses itself in the actual.

ll. 23-4, That whilft my labouring thoughts [do] sing with, &c., of this, &c. [nor] God [nor] Man, nor, &c.

- Page 186, l. 2—qu.—delete comma after 'prefume,' the sense being 'Prefume [to] define,' rithmi causa; l. 4 = vouchsafe that my Muse may greet; l. 7, "flightst," i.e., [the] slightest [of the perfections] that adorn'd, &c. Query—lightest, i.e., most light, the 's' being caught from 'was'?; l. 10, "Perfection had no meane" = was limitless; l. 12, "instructed"—which 'even instructed vertue, clothed ['inusted'] and therefore substantial; l. 17, remove comma after 'Hyperbolical'; st. 4, l. 1, "meane" = was limitless or had no equal; st. 5, l. 1, "deck'd and flouid" = decked and adorned, or were lively coloured as an adornment.
- ,, 187, st. 1, l. 3, "Masks"—verb singular, nominative plural, through intervention of 'that,' as frequent. Punctuate 'Masks [,] fo choicely sheltred'; st. 2, l. 2, "wanted"—used as neuter = were or have been wanting; l. 10, "penny-shoes," i.e., made-up shoes, as at penny shows at a fair. Perfectioni Hymnus, l. 3, "feature" = making, or thing made; used also in the following verses by Ben Jonson: Cf. p. 193, l. 22, and p. 194, l. 14; and also, some think, by Touchstone to Audrey in the sense of 'the verses he has made.' Punctuate 'excellence, . . . confin'd.' This excellence, [that is] confined within all that is best; l. 7, "I" = Aye; l. 10, "nomination" = naming; ib., "straight" = narrow; l. 12, "giue"—may be = 'giues' delete period and supply comma.
- ,, 188, l. 1, punctuate comma after "Suberbes"; l. 2, "Has" = as, with the unlucky 'H'; the signature "John Marston" includes Perfectioni Hymni and preceding poems from p. 183; "Perifloros," &c., l. 4, "Sights" = eyes, or mode of view; l. 8 = 'staid Iudgemets blow Loues fires, but humorous Passions only blow false fires whose Loues, &c., and quench,' &c.; l. 11, "contend"—in Latinate sense = aim at or stretch forward to; l. 18, "alluded"—another Latinate word = had reference to, with perhaps a sub-reference to 'favoured'; l. 19, "Exceffe," &c. It would be a little more intelligible if we read Exceffe[d]; but all is in Chapman's most forced manner; l. 23, "Exceffe of all things" = [He that was], &c.; l. 24, "But" = except; l. 25,

"change me from" = [her] that is. Specially note the change to 'me,' showing that the Phoenix is not only a living person but a present person. So that albeit Love's Martyr necessitated an 'allegorical' death, the 'Phoenix' really was alive while the 'Turtle Dove' was dead. All this has no motif, much less significance, unless Elizabeth were meant. See our Introduction. Last line, "forme" seems to be a word in vogue (probably from the philosophy of the day) and = pattern, mould, or ideal thought on which I act. Cf. p. 192, l. 10.

- Page 189, "Preludium." As noticed in our Introduction, Gifford—to put it mildly—prints this most corruptly. He deliberately changes all the we's to I's, and our's to my's; l. 6, "Let's"—in Gifford, 'I!'; st. 5, l. 1, "Mankind" = masculine; st. 6, l. 1—construction is, Light Venus go cramp, &c.; l. 2, "Tribade"—one may hope he used this word as = artful only. See Latin Dictionary and Martial; st. 7, l. 2, "old Boy," i.e., Let Cupid turn to lie, &c., alluding to the custom exemplified by Moth in Love's Labour Lost.
- , 190, st. 1, l. 1, "cannot"—'shall not' in Gifford; l. 3, "Petofus" = broad-leaved hat or cap; st. 3, l. 3—note the words 'deep eares'; last line, "tafte" = discover.
- „ 191, l. 8, "shal"—'should' in Gifford; l. 20, "their"—'the' in Gifford; l. 3 (from bottom) "gentile"—Latinate, whence 'genteel' = one of good or honourable family. In Gifford, 'far more gentle, fine.'
- „ 192, l. 22, "Luxurie" = lasciviousness or lust; l. 5 (from bottom), "our selfe"—in Gifford 'ourselves.'
- „ 193, l. 1, "or," in Gifford 'and'; l. 22, "Feature" = making. So in 'The Phoenix Analyfde,' st. 2, l. 3. In connection with this word it is to be noted that Shakespeare uses it curiously in verb form, e.g., "a glass that feated them" (Cymbeline, act i, sc. 1) = featured; 'Defeat thy favour with an usurped beard' (Othello, act i, sc. 3) = defeature or disfeature.
- „ 194, l. 5, "Man may securely sinne. but safely neuer." Note the distinction between 'securely' and 'safely'; note the spelling 'Iohnfon' always used by 'rare Ben' prior to 1604. The Phoenix Analyfde. St. 2, l. 1, "our Turtles Augure" = Robert Chester's augury; l. 3, "Feature" = making, as before. Ode 'εἰθουσιαστικῆ,' l. 3, "illustrate"—illustrious in Gifford.

A. B. G.

INDEX.

The references are to the page-numbers at the top, and not the foot of the pages.
The Text-references in Dr. Grosart's Notes are to the foot-numbers.

- Abestone, ? the asbestos, 101, 226
 Achates, virtues of the, 102
 Achites, the agate, a precious stone, its virtues, 104, 227
 Adamant, properties of the, 101; easily broken with the warm blood of a goat, 102
 Adders-grass, 82, 213
 Aduotrix, advocate, 137, 149
 Agnus Castus, the properties of, 82
 Alban, St., 27
 Albania, now Scotland, 28; Augusel, King of, his advice to Arthur, 58
 Alexander introduced the peacock from India, 121
 Alfred first divided England into shires, 26; founded Oxford University, 26; buried at Winchester, 26
 Allaid, pp. softened, 83
 Amatites, a precious stone, virtues of the, 102
 Amethyst, the properties of, 102, 227
 Amphibulus, the instructor of St. Alban, 27
 Angellica, or Dwarf gentian, its virtues, 92
 Angusel, King of Scotland, his advice to Arthur, 58
 Animals found in Paphos-ile, 108
 Anonymous stanzas on the Turtle and Phoenix, 173
 Ant, its nature, 115
 Anthillis, chickweed, 83
 Aphodill, asphodil, 82, 214
Arabian Phoenix, No. 2, male, desired for Phoenix No. 1, female, 5
 Arestment, seizure, 86
 Argirites, a precious stone, 101
 Arion and the Dolphin, the legend of, 99
 Arras cloth, tapestry, 7, 199
 Arthur completed the building of Windsor Castle, 33; his birth, life and death, 34; seal of in Westminster, 35; at his birth committed to Sir Hector to be brought up, 46; succeeds his father, 47; conquered thirty kingdoms, 47; his coronation at Caerleon, 49; speech of after receiving the letter of Lucius, 54; description of his standard, 60; takes Paris, 64; conquers Gothland, 64; defeats Lucius, 65; attacked by Mirmedons, 66; kills the king of the giants, 67; returns to England and lands at Sandwich, 69; defeats Mordred at Camblane, but is slain himself, 71; buried at Glastonbury, 72; his body found in the reign of Henry II., 72; his epitaph, 73; his great size, 74; his wife buried with him, 74; his pedigree, 76
 Artichokes, the virtues of, 90
 Asp, nature of the, 114
 Asterites, a precious stone, 101, 226
 Astonied, pp. astounded, 31
 Astrion, a precious stone, 101
 Athelney, formerly called Edlingsey, 26
 Baldud, King of Britain, 26
 Banning, pp. cursing, 44
 Bay-tree, its virtues, 98
 Bear, its manner of bearing young, 108

- Bedooming, fr. p. presaging, 121
 Bedstraw, our ladies', the plant galium, 92, 221
 Bee, its nature and habits, 115
 Beholding, adj. under obligations, 35
 Belin, King of Britain, built Billingsgate, 27; founded Caerlion, 27
 Bellrags, a plant, a kind of water-cress, 90, 220
 Beryl, properties of the, 103
 Billingsgate built by Belin, 27
 Birds of Paphos-ile, 116
 Boar, its enmity against the bear, 109
 Brookelime, the plant water pimpernell, 92, 221
 Bugle, or wild ox, how tamed, 109
 Bunch-backt, adj. hump-backed, 100
 Buprestis, the plant hares ears, 83, 215

 Caddes, the jackdaw, 116, 230
 Cador, Duke of Cornwall, his advice to Arthur, 53
 Caerbranke, the ancient name of York, 28
 Caerleir, afterwards Leicester, founded by King Leyre, 26
 Caerlion, founded by Belin, 27; three famous churches in, 27
 Caladrius, a bird, its nature, 117, 230
 Calues snout, snapdragon, 83, 215
 Camblane, Mordred defeated by Arthur at, 71; Arthur slain at, 71
 Cambridge built by Sigisbert or Cantaber, a Spaniard, 28
 Camel, nature of the, 109
 Can, v. fr. t. understands, 170, 243
 Cantaber, a Spaniard, the founder of Cambridge, 28
 Canterbury founded by King Lud, 27
 Cantoes, alphabet-wise to faire Phoenix made by the Paphian Dove, lxvii, 134; verbally written, lxvii, 141
 Carefull, adj. full of care, 123
 Carlisle founded by King Leill, 28; formerly called Caerleits, 28
 Carrots, the virtues of, 88
 Castle of Maidens, the (Edinburgh), 28
 Catstail, the herb horsetail, 92
 Censure, v. decide on, judge, 2
 Censure, decision, 12
 Censures, opinions, judgments, 35
 Centaurion (Centaury), the derivation of the name and its virtues, 85
 Ceranicum, a precious stone, properties of, 103
 Chapman, George, poem on Peristeros or the male turtle, 180
 Chastesize, v. drive away, 4
 Chastice, keep, drive away, 11
 Cheare, face, feeling, 16
 Chester, Robert, no contemporary notices of, vi; identified, vii; notice of his family, vii: "The Christian Exercise of Fasting" dedicated to him by Henry Holland, viii, lxxiv; his birth, viii; knighted, ix; his marriage and death, ix; his age at the time of the publication of "Love's Martyr," ix; his connection with Sir J. Salisburie, xiii; his possible intimacy with the Earl of Essex, xlvi; his rank as a poet, lxii; abstract of his will, lxxiv
 Chester, formerly called Caer Leon, repaired by King Leill, 28
 Chiron healed by centaury, 85
 Chorus Vatum, verses signed, probably written by Ben Jonson, lxi
 Christi oculus, a plant, its virtues, 87
 Christs-thorne, a plant, 95
 Churches, three famous in Caerleon, 27
 Churchyard, Thomas, extracts from, xxvi, xxxix; his Epistle-dedictory in "The Fortunate Farewell" to the Earl of Essex, xl
 Ciparissus, the grove of, 9, 200
 Cissus, 91, 92, 220
 Clary, Cleare-cie, seebright, 83, 215
 Cleane, adv. quite, completely, 152
 Cleopatra, her death from the bite of an asp, 114
 Clovis converted to Christianity, 59
 Coculus Panter, a plant, 83, 215

- Contentiue, adj. a source of contentment, pleasing, 38
 Conuenient, adj. fitting, proper, 54
 Cornwall, Cadour, Duke of, his oration to Arthur, 53
 Cotula, May-weed, 82, 213
 Coyle, tumult, disturbance, 21, 203
 Crane, instinct and habits of the, 117
 Crocodile, nature of the, 116
 Crowbels, 82, 213
 Cuckoes-meate, a plant, the cuckoo's bread, 83, 215
 Cuckoo, its song, 117
 Cukoe flowers, wild watercress, 83, 215
 Daphadill, the daffodil, 82
 Daphne transformed into the bay-tree, 97
 Daunst, v. pt. pl. danced, 10
 Dazeled, pt. s. dazzled, 91
 Death and burial of Arthur, 72
 Deaw, dew, 3
 Debora, image of, placed by Ebranke at Edinburgh, 31
 Deliucrie, custody, charge, 46
 Description of the Phœnix, 2
 Dewberrie, dwarf mulberry, 83, 215
 Dialogue between Nature, the Phœnix and the Turtle Dove, 16
 Diamond, its virtues, 103
 Dionise, a precious stone, 101, 226
 Diseased, adj. troubled in mind, 42
 Disgrasiue, adj. disgracing, a cause of disgrace, 147
 Distempred, pt. s. disturbed, disquieted, 62
 Ditty on Love, 78
 Diverse Poetical Essaies on the Turtle and Phœnix, 169
 Dog, affectionate nature of the, 110, 229
 Dorter, bedroom, sleeping-place, 137
 Double-tongue, the plant horse-tongue, 83
 Dove, silver-colour = Turtle-Dove, No. 2 = Phœnix, No. 1; prayer for, 13
 Dracodos, a precious stone, its properties, 103
 Dracontites, a precious stone, 101
 Dragon, its enmity with the elephant, 110
 Dromedary, its derivation and nature, 110
 Dubright, Archbishop, Arthur crowned by, 49
 Dwale, or nightshade, its properties, 94, 222
 Eagle, habits of the, 118
 Ebranke, the founder of York, 28
 Edinburgh, the Castle of Maidens, founded by Ebranke, 28; images of stone placed there, 29
 Edition of "Love's Martyr" of 1611, its identity with that of 1601, lxi
 Edlingsey, the Towre of, afterwards Athelney, 26
 Elephant, the, 110
 Elheda, daughter of Alfred, 26
 Elix'd, drawn as the essence, 177
 Elizabeth identified by Dr. Grosart with the "Phœnix," xxii
 Elizabeth, Melvin's Account of, lxxix
 Elizabeth of Arragon, image of, at Edinburgh, 32
 Elutropia, a precious stone, 101
 Emerson's "Parnassus," quoted, xliv
 Emote, the emmet or ant, 114
 England first divided into shires by Alfred, 26
 Enidros, a precious stone, 104, 227
 Enlarge, v. spread, increase, 64
 Enterlined, pp. streaked, 102
 Envy, description of, 20
 Epistle-dedicatory to the Earl of Essex of "The Christian Exercise of Fasting, &c.," lxxiv
 Epitaph on Arthur, 73, 75
 Errata in the original copy of "Love's Martyr," lxxxii; in the reprint, lxxxiii
 Essex, the earl of, identified by Dr. Grosart with the "Turtle-Dove," xxxv; Churchyard's Epistle-dedicatory to, in "The Fortunate Farewell," xl; letters of, to Elizabeth, liii; and Shakspeare, lvi

- Feature, thing made, 179, 185, 186
 Fishes of Paphos, 99
 Floramore, the Amaranth, 83, 215
 Fond, adj. foolish, 133
 Forepassed, pp. past, gone by, 97
 Funerall, coffin, 72
- Gagates, jet, its virtues, 104, 227
 Galactites, a precious stone, 101
 Galingal, the cyperus longus, 83, 215
 Garboiles, tumults, disturbances, 55
 Gawin, Sir, his skull preserved at Dover, 35; death of, 69; buried at Ross, 70
 Gelatia, a precious stone, 101
 Gentian, the virtues of, 92
 Glastonbury, Arthur buried at, 72;
 founded by Joseph of Arimathea, 76
 Goat, nature of the, 111
 Goates oregan, goat's organy or marjoram, 84
 Gods, Parliament of, 1
 Goldcups, buttercups, 83
 Goldsnap, gold-cup, buttercup, 82
 Goosefoot, 82
 Gothland conquered by Arthur,
 64
 Go to bed at noone, a plant, 90, 220
 Gratia Dei, hedge hyssop, 82, 214
 Gratulate, v. welcome, 171
 Griffon, description of the, 119
 Gronc, groan, 126
 Guegawes, gewgaws, toys, 79
 Guinivere, Arthur's wife, buried with him at Glastonbury, 74
- Haggard, a wild hawk, 68, 211
 Hares ballockes, a plant, 94, 222
 Hedgehog, power of, to foretell the weather, 111
 Hell-bread, adj. hell-bred, 13
 Hellebore (Melampodium), its virtues, 85
 Herbe Twopence, moneywort, 86,
 217
 Hercinie, a bird, nature of, 119, 230
 Hermodactill, a plant, 86, 217
 Heyre, heir, 67
 "Historical Memoirs on the reigns of Queen Elizabeth and King
 James," 1658, xlviij
 Hoast, host, army, 14
- Holland, Henry, his dedication of
 "The Christian Exercise of Fasting" to R. Chester, viii, lxxiv
 Honesties, pinks, 83, 215
 Horslocke, a fetter, 93
 Howell, King of Little Britain, his answer to the Romans, 56
 Humane, adj. human, 18
 Hyacinthus, the Legend of, 89
- Ibis, habits of the, 119
 Idea, representation, image, 47
 Identification of the "Phoenix"
 and the "Turtle-Dove," xxi;
 Dr. B. Nicholson on, xxiv
 Igrene, wife of Garloye, mother of
 Arthur, 37
 Illustrate, adj. light-giving, 171
 Images, nine placed by Ebranke in Edinburgh, 29
 Incontinent, adv. at once, immediately, 111
 Indubiate, adj. undoubted, 32
 Infamer, defamer, slanderer, 70
 Inferre, v. introduce, bring forward,
 56
 Inscripted, pp. inscribed, 72
 Insects and Reptiles found in Paphos-ile, 113
 Inthroniz'd, pp. enthroned, 56
 Intreate, v. treat, discourse, 25
 Introduction to the Prayer for the prosperity of the Turtle Dove, 12
 Invocatio ad Apollinem et Pierides,
 171
 Ireland identified by Dr. Grosart with Paphos-ile, xxxix, li
 Iris, a precious stone, 101
 Ivy, the virtues of, 92
- Jacinth, its properties, 105
 Jacke by the hedge, the plant Sauce alone, 88, 218
 Jabel, image of, placed by Ebranke
 at Edinburgh, 31
 Joan of Naples, image of, at Edinburgh, 32
 Jonson, Ben, his Præcludium, 181;
 his Epos, 182; "The Phoenix Analysde," 187; his Ode 'ερθουσιασταιν, 186
 Joseph of Arimathea the founder of Glastonbury, 76

- Judas-tree, the elder, 96, 224
 Judith, image of, placed by Ebranke at Edinburgh, 31
 Julian the Apostate, 58
- Kind, nature, 111
- Lapwing, formerly consulted by soothsayers, 119
 Leicester built by King Leyre, 26
 Leill, King of Britain, founded Carlisle, 28
 Leopards foote, a plant, 83
 Letter to a Scotch nobleman, at the close of the reign of Queen Elizabeth quoted, lxxx
 Letter of Lucius, the Emperor of Rome, to Arthur, 51
 Leyland's Epitaph on Arthur, 75
 Leyre, King of Britain, built Caerleir (Leicester), 26
 "Liberal Honour," a title thought by Dr. Grosart to apply to the Earl of Essex, xxxv, 5.
 Ligarius, Ligurius, a precious stone, the carbuncle, formed from the urine of the lynx, 101, 111
 Lion, nature of the, 112
 Liparia, rock alum, 101
 Liuely, adj. living, 102
 Lizard protects man against wild beasts, 115
 Lodestone, its properties, 105
 London formerly called Troynouant, founded by Trojans, 78
 Loose, v. lose, 70
 Loue in idleness, the pansy, 88
 Love, Nature's ditty on, 78; Song of the Phoenix on, 79
 Love's Martyr, the edition of 1611, lxi; Poetic value of, lxii; Errata in the original copy, lxxxii
 Lucius, Emperor of Rome, his letter to Arthur, 51; defeated by Arthur, 65
 Lud, King of Britain, founded Canterbury, Winchester and Shaftesbury, 27
 Lunaria, the herb moonwort, virtues of, 92, 93, 221
 Lynx, urine of, turns into a precious stone, 111
- Lyriconfancie, lily of the valley, 84, 216
- Maidens, the Castle of (Edinburgh), 28
 Mandrake, virtues of the, 82
 Margarite, the pearl, 101
 Marston, Verses by, 177; his Sonnet to Perfection, 178; "Perfectioni Hymnus," a poem by, 179
 Maud of Anjou, image of, at Edinburgh, 32
 Mauger, prep. in spite of, 55
 Meacocke, adj. cowardly, effeminate, 59
 Mead-stone, a precious stone, its virtues, 105, 227
 Melampodiium, black hellebore, its virtues, 85
 Melvill's Account of Elizabeth, lxxix
 Merlin contrives the birth of Arthur, 41; his stratagem to get into the Castle of Tintagel, 42
 Mersin, an Athenian lady, transformed into the Myrtle, 96
 Mill, a plant, 84
 Minerva lived in the time of Abraham, 30
 Mirmedons attack Arthur, 66; their king slain by Arthur, 67
 Moderator, a mediator, 40, 207
 Moly, Hungarian garlick, 83; its properties, 84, 215
 Mordred, the treachery of, 67; defeated by Arthur at Camblane, 71
 Mose-tree, the size of its leaves, 98; the fruit of, supposed to have been the apple eaten by Adam, 98
 Motive of Chester's "Love's Martyr," Dr. Grosart on the, xlv
 Mousecare, myosotis, forget-me-not, 92, 221
 Mugwort, its properties, 84, 216
 Myrtle, the properties of, 97
- Nar, adj. near, 151
 Narcissus, the legend of, 86
 "Narration and description of a most exact wondrous creature, arising out of the Phoenix and Turtle-Doue's ashes," 177

- Nature's description of the Phœnix, 2; exhibits to the gods a picture of the Phœnix, 8; dialogue with the Phœnix and the Turtle-Dove, 16; with the Phœnix starts for Paphos-ile, 24; they pass the Euphrates and the Pyramids, 25; arrive at Great Britain, 26; Song of, in dispraise of Love, 78; describes the plants of Paphos-ile, 82; the trees, 95; the fishes, 99; the minerals, 101; the beasts, 108; the reptiles, 113; the birds, 116; introduces the Phœnix to the Turtle, 123
- Nauews, rapes, 88
- Neare, adv. never, 86
- Neswort, white hellebore, its virtues, 92, 93, 221
- "New Compositions," Dr. Grosart on the relation of, to "Love's Martyr," lvi
- Nichols' Progresses of Queen Elizabeth, extracts from, lxxv
- Nicholson, Dr. B., on the identification of the "Phœnix," xxiv
- Nightingale, taught to sing in Greek and Latin, 120
- Nightshade or Dwale, its properties, 94, 222
- Nonce, made for the nonce = made for the occasion: lit. for that once, "for than anes," 73
- None-like, adj. unequailed, 2, 198
- Notes and Illustrations, lxxxv
- Nuzled, Nuzzled, pp. nestled, 41
- Obliuous, adj. forgetful, 51
- Ode 'εὐθουσιαστικῆ, poem by Ben Jonson, 186
- Ods, "at open ods," openly disagreed, 1
- Oke of Jerusalem, its properties, 95, 216
- Onocentaur, description of the, 112, 228
- Oration of King Arthur to his lordes and followers, 54
- Orderly, adv. in order, 99
- Ore, prep. over, 3
- Orites, a precious stone, its properties, 106, 227
- Orpheus, his use of the carrot, 88
- Osmond balepate, a plant, 86, 216
- Osmond the Waterman, the plant Osmond fern, 84, 216
- Our Ladies' Cushion, a plant, thrift, 82, 214
- Owl, nature and habits of the, 120
- Oxe eie, the great daisy, 87, 217
- Oxford University founded by Alfred, 26
- Panteron, a precious stone, 101
- Paphos-ile, identified by Dr. Grosart with Ireland, xxxviii, li; the description of, 9; plants of, 82; trees of, 95; fishes of, 99; precious stones found in, 101; animals found in, 108; insects and reptiles of, 113; birds of, 116
- Paris taken by Arthur, 64
- Parliament of the Gods, 1
- Parrot, "the counterfeiting bird," 121
- Parry, Robert, dedication of his book "Sinetes" to Sir John Salisburie, xiv
- Peacham's "Minerva," extracts from, xxiv
- Peacock, brought by Alexander from India, 121
- Pedigree of Arthur, 76
- Peele, George, extracts from his "Eglogue Gratulatorie," xxxvi
- Pelican, habits of the, 122
- Pelican, the, verses of, over the ashes of the Phœnix and the Turtle, 131
- Penygrass, the pennyrot, 87, 217
- Perfection, Sonnet to, by Marston, 178
- "Perfectioni Hymnus," Marston, 179
- Peristeros, or the Male Turtle, poem by George Chapman, 180
- Pcty Morrell, the plant garden nightshade, 92, 221
- Philbert, the filbert, 96
- Phœnix No. 1, female, identified by Dr. Grosart with Queen Elizabeth, xxi
- Phœnix No. 1, female = Turtle-Dove, No. 2; references to the, lxxviii; Nature's description of the, 2; prayer made for, 13;

- dialogue of, with Nature, 16;
 Song of, on Love, 79; meets Turtle-Dove No. 1, 124; dies
 with him, 131-2
- Phoenix No. 2*, male, "Arabian Phoenix," p. 5, st. 3.
- Phoenix No. 3*, female: the Turtle-
 Dove's female mate, p. 9, st. 4;
 is dead, and mourned by the Turtle-Dove No. 1, p. 125, st. 3
- Phoenix No. 4*, female, far superior to Phoenix No. 1, p. 134; foretold at, p. 12, st. 2; p. 9, st. 1
- Phoenix, the, Analysde, poem by Ben Jonson, 186
- Pigmies, the, 116
- Pilcher, the pilchard, 100
- Piper, the pipe-fish, 100, 226
- Plained, pl. s. smoothed, 9
- Plants and Flowers of Paphos-ile, 82
- Plast, pp. placed, 148
- Plebane, ? the plant fleabane, 86, 216
- Poesie, an inscription in verse, 72.
- Poetic value of "Love's Martyr,"
 Dr. Grosart on the, lxii
- Powers, v. pr. s. pours, 4
- "Prælium," poem by Ben Jonson, 181
- Prayer, a, for the prosperity of the Turtle-Dove II = Phoenix I, 13
- Precursor, precursor, 174
- President, precedent, example, 11
- Pridwin, Arthur's sword, 71
- Profuse, v. imper. pour out, 171
- Purslane, the virtues of, 88
- Puttocke, the kite, 117
- Pyrrhus, 121
- Quail'd, pp. quelled, destroyed, 70
- Rabiates, a precious stone, its properties, 105
- "Rape of Lucrece" alluded to, lxxvii
- Rarietie, rarity, 4, 143
- Raspis, the raspberry, 90, 220
- Ratiétie, for rarietie, q. v.
- References to the "Phoenix," lxxviii
- Regreet, v. salute, 156
- Relation between the "New Compositions" and "Love's Martyr," lvi
- Remoted, pp. removed, 80
- Renowned, adj. renowned, 53
- Responsible, adj. responsive, 172
- Rinatrix, a poisonous serpent, 116
- Rocket, the virtues of, 90, 218
- "Rosalin's Complaint," metaphorically applied to Dame Nature,
 &c., 1. See Nature
- Rosemary, the virtues of, 94
- Ross, Gawin buried at, 70
- Round Table, The, preserved at Winchester, 33, 35
- Ruinatè, pp. ruined, 24
- Sage, the virtues of, 93
- Sage of Jerusalem, cowslips of Jerusalem, 86, 217
- Salisbury, Sir John, "Love's Martyr" dedicated to, x; notice of his family, x; his birth, xii;
 account of his mother, Catherine
 Tudor of Berain, xii; surnamed
 "The strong," xii; means of identifying, xiii; his motto, xv;
 stanzas to, 172
- Sandwich, Arthur lands at, 69
- Sapphire, properties of the, 106
- Satires, satyrs, 7
- Scorpion, nature of the, 116
- Sea-ensuing, adj. running to the sea, 78
- Semiramis, Queen of Assyria, lived in the time of Isaac, 30
- Sengreene, houseleek, 86, 218
- Shaftesbury, formerly called Mount
 Paladour, founded by King Lud, 27
- Shakspere, his reference to the Earl of Essex, lvi; Dr. Grosart on his "Phoenix and Turtle," lviii; on his "Threnos," lvii;
 stanzas by Sh., on the "Turtle and Phoenix," 174
- Shires, England divided into, by Alfred, 26
- Shoken, pp. shaken, 126
- Short-heeld, adj. unchaste, 91
- Sigisbert, founder of Cambridge, 28
- Silkworm, habits of the, 116
- Sinkefoile, cinquefoile, 82
- "Sinetes." A Poem dedicated to Sir
 John Salisbury, by R. Parry, xiv
- Smaragd, properties of the, 106
- Snakeweed, adderswort, 90, 220

- Sore, the, a river near Leicester, 26
 Souldier's perrow, soldier's yarrow, a plant, 82, 214
 Sowbread, the virtues of, 91, 216
 Sparckle, v. to give out in sparks, 66
 Sparrows used for divination, 122
 Spitchcocke, the conger, 100
 Spit-fish, the sea-pike, 100, 226
 Spurling, the smelt, 100
 Standard, description of Arthur's, 60
 Standergrass, the properties of, 94, 222
 Stanwort, a plant, ? stonecrop, 90
 Star of Jerusalem, a plant, ? sunflower or turnsole, 90, 219
 Stelio, the chamelcon, 112, 228
 Stonehenge, Uther buried at, 47
 Stones, precious, found in Paphos-ile, 101
 Supprize, v. suppress, 36
 Swallows used for carrying letters, 122
 Swan, the sailor's weather guide, 123
- Tabiitorie, an old tablet, 17
 Temporize, v. soothe, 102
 "Threnos," on the Phœnix, by Shakspeare, 176
 Tithimailes, a plant, spurge, milkwort, 84
 Titimalem, 90. See Tithimailes.
 Todhunter, Dr., translations of Celiano's sonnets, lxi
 Tomyris, Queen of Scythia, image of, at Edinburgh, 30
 Tornesol, the sunflower, 88, 218
 Torquato Caeliano, who he was, lxxiii
 Totterd, adj. tattered, 19
 Treachery of Mordred, 67
 Treauants, truants, 89
 Trees of Paphos-ile, 95
 Trojans the foundeis of London, formerly called Troynouant, 78
 Troynouant the ancient name of London, 78
 Tudor, Catherine, of Berain, mother of Sir John Salisburie, xii
 Turches, the turquoise, its properties, 107
 "Turtle-Dove," No. 1, male, identified by Dr. Grosart with the Earl of Essex, xxxv; prayer for the prosperity of, 13; named in, 24, but not present at, the dialogue with Nature and the Phœnix, 16; introduced to the Phœnix No. 1, by Nature, 123; described, 123; laments over the mate (Phœnix No. 3) he has already lost, 125; sacrifices himself, 131
 Turtle-Dove, No. 2, female = Phœnix No. 1, p. 13, l. 3
 Twine, a fish, ? the tunny, 100, 226
- Vnderprops, supports, 6
 Vnsatiate, pp. unsatisfied, 122
 Vther Pendragon, the father of Arthur, 36; poisoned, 47; buried at Stonehenge, 47
- Vading, adj. fading intensely, 17
 Valerius Maximus, his testimony as to Arthur's conquests, 47
 Vatum Chorus, stanzas signed, 171, 172
 Verse Contributions, by "Vatum Chorus," 171; Anonymous, 173; Shakspeare, 174; Marston, 177; Chapman, 177; Ben Jonson, 178
 Verses "to those of light beleefe," 15
 Veruine, vervain, 90, 217
 Voutsafe, v. imper. vouchsafe, 142
- Wake-robbins, the plant cuckoo-pint, 88, 218
 Wald, adj. ? walled, 25
 Weedwind, withwind, convolvulus, 82, 215
 Whight, creature, 128
 Will of Sir R. Chester, abstract of, lxxiv
 Winchester, Alfred buried at, 26; founded by King Lud, 27; Arthur's Round Table preserved at, 35
 Windsor Castle, its foundation and completion, 33
 Worthies, Statue of the nine female, at Edinburgh, 28
 Wrinkle, the whelk, 100
- York, built by Ebranke and formerly called Caerbranke, 28

Date Due

AA 000 599 658 2

PR 2233
C6L6
1878

